In one year, therefore, approximately 360,000 men will have received initial training. Then, 360,000 men are to be regarded as the vanguard of a mighty Canadian Army which will be available to defend this country.

The difficulties in withdrawing so many men from the normal life of the community even for the comparatively short period of training but difficulties cannot be allowed to obscure the goal to be attained. This is the beginning, not the end of a policy. The plan has been worked out so that it can be speeded up or slowed down as events require.

There are difficulties, also, in building quarters and manufacturing the equipment for this citizens' army. Every effort is being made to grapple against failure on either count.

One of the difficulties of the scheme is the shortage of competent instructors to train these men. Several thousand instructors will be needed. The problem has been foreseen and steps taken to meet it. Provision has been established. The instructors are being drawn from the N.P.A.M. militia and ex-service men.

This policy has been evolved to ensure the most effective defence of the country. The role will be that there can be no exemptions. Any postponements must be so arranged that everyone within the groups called upon who is physically fit must undergo training within a year. Physical fitness is defined as everyone classified by military medical standards as being C.1 or better.

No distinction of any kind will be made between the new recruits, thus drafted, and the rest of the militia—except that the men called under this plan will not be available for duty outside of Canada, unless they volunteer for such service. It is important that from the outset these men be regarded as members of the Canadian army. As recruits they will pass directly into militia regiments. Automatically they will become members of the 3rd militia in their own district. They will share its traditions and be the custodians of its honor.

Thirty Days' Training

It may be thought that 30 days is too brief a period in which to train men. It is brief. But the weight of opinion, is that we must try it first and so keep a foundation as possible for the Canadian Army. To withdraw 360,000 men from their civil pursuits for more than 30 days over a year might jeopardize production of essential war commodities. It is necessary in give the largest number of men elementary military training in the shortest time possible.

Training Instructors

It is imperative that no discrimination be drawn between the men called for training and the other militia in the Canadian militia. They are to be welcomed into the Canadian army and they have every right to feel that their country honors them for the service for which their training will help to fit them.

Many who are called for training will have already offered themselves for active service in one or other of the special services—air force, tanks, etc. They are now awaiting this opportunity. But, as Premier Mackenzie King has said, "If you would remember the utter futility of the whole situation—"

"Futility?"

"Yes. You know she'll never be happy with you Rollins. She'll need so much things as you never can possibly give her. Soon she'll miss them, then—" he shrugged. "I want to spare her that if I can. I quite appreciate what you've done for her but you must admit that it's all too hazardous and poor a life for a girl like Grace."

"She's happy," Lee said quietly. "She'll be even happier."

"Every girl thinks herself happy when she is in love. That's Grace's trouble. Of course I may be wrong. You two may actually be deeply in love and it may last forever. But I'm the tabloid headlines: "Wealthy but don't think so. I ask you to talk it over with Grace, persuade her not to marry you until—well, until after you've reached a position where you

"Hello Mr. Worthington."

"Hello, Rollins." Dan Worthington ignored the outstretched hand. "You have a few minutes? What I have to say won't take long. There's no use beating about the bush. For some foul reason my daughter seems to have become infatuated with you. We can't persuade her to change her mind, but we're sure if she would

"Nothing!" Lee's voice was vibrant, threatening.

But Dan Worthington was unmoved. He held Lee's gaze coolly, calmly and immovable, fascinated, as he watched the older man's jaw tighten quickly over the chest that was Lee's last emotion. Dan Worthington tore the card, folded it and thrust it into Lee's hand. Then he turned quickly and, disdaining the elevator, disappeared down the stairs.

Lee laughed. Why, it was just like movies. Yet here it was happening to him in real life. He could not be happy as I am now. Regardless of anything, you're all I have. Never, never stop loving me."

He kissed her, held her close, felt that I wouldn't try to change her mind because you are right. I'm fairly happy with things as they are. Lee's heart bounding against his. I'll be content to give up the thought of marriage if he'll keep coming to see you forever I'd have kicked him down the stairs. He pushed this behind his head as he left."

But of Grace at his side he was acutely conscious. Conscious of the soft, irregular rise and fall of her bosom; her shoulder touching his arm; the faint aroma of her perfume; the pressure of her hand.

Grace's hand found his as they rose to their feet. His thumb found the ring, realized that those two kisses—the one in the taxi and this one here in the church—were probably the most important acts of his life. He had married the girl he loved, a boy, he was leaving as a man, with all a man's responsibilities. A wife to look after, a home to maintain, perhaps in time children.

Side by side they made their way up the aisle. She was trembling. But the trembling ceased as they reached the vestibule. The taut was waiting. They ran again quickly through the driving rain, this time from the comfort and safety of the church to that of the interior of the cab. Thunder growled and lightning reached down toward them. But they laughed.

A little later the car stopped before the building which housed their three-for unfinished apartment. Lee paid the driver. They walked through the hall and up three flights of stairs. The door closed behind them. They were in their new home. Grace said, "Will we've done it, darling! We're married."

Suggest Financing Farmers During Crop Congestion

A new plan for financing farmers, unable on account of congested elevators, to deliver their grain this fall, is proposed by the Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited in a statement made public following a meeting held in Calgary last week. To enable banks to lend money on a bonded scale to farmers, on grain stored on farms, it is suggested that they be given a Government guarantee against loss up to a certain percentage of the total bad debts. Under the plan followed in the last two Home Improvement Loans experiences with which, it is pointed out, has been highly satisfactory both to the Government and to the banks.

It is also asked that the price for wheat to be milled for flour for domestic consumption in Canada be not at not less than $1.00 per bushel, basis No. 1 Northern in store Fort William.

The statement calls attention to the fact that at the end of May United Grain Growers Limited had urged the Premiers of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to set up a Wheat Conference to work with the Dominion Government in the solution of problems forced on Western agriculture by war developments. These problems have since become more pressing with the increased demand for the country in Continental Europe and the shutting off of markets formerly existing for Canadian grain. A serious shortage of elevator space is foreseen with greater part of elevator space in Canada occupied at the beginning of the new crop year with the largest Canadian wheat carryover in the history of the country. A considerable part of the space in country elevators will be occupied by screened wheat grain and it is declared if the Western wheat crop is as large as 300,000,000 bushels, it will not be possible to find accommodation during the normal threshing period for as much as half of the grain which farmers will desire to deliver.

The statement urges the need for continued price protection through the Canadian Wheat Board, and describing the Board to handle all wheat without the existing limitation of 5,000 bushels, it continues, "The question of price at which wheat should be sold needs to be considered apart from the initial price paid by the Wheat Board, which represents a minimum price guarantee. If there is no functioning market, as now seems possible, it will be for the Government of Canada to determine what price wheat should be supplied in Canada for milling purposes. The fact that extremely low prices have recently prevailed in a market disorganized by war is no reason for assuming that western farmers should, through continued acceptance of such prices by the Canadian Wheat Board, subsidize the bread consumers of Canada. It is suggested that a uniform price basis for wheat sold for domestic consumption should be established at not less than $1.00 per bushel for No. 1 Northern in store Fort William.

"The price at which wheat is to be sold to Great Britain should be a matter of direct negotiation between the Canadian Government and the British Government, in order to arrive at a fair and reasonable basis. The initial primary training is common to all arms; specialization only the basic infantry training. It must be given this initial training to all the men called. After they have been Canadian Wheat Board, dealing with an agency buying for the Canadian Government, and the question involved of financing a common war effort by the peoples themselves can deal satisfactorily."

ALL ELEVATORS WILL SELL WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

All elevator agents will assist in the sale of war savings certificates to farmers throughout Western Canada at more than 1,500 country elevators operated by Line Companies, Pools and the United Grain Growers. It was announced today.

Facilities will be arranged whereby a farmer when delivering grain to the elevator will be enabled to have a cash grain ticket made out direct to the Government for whatever amount of War Savings Certificates he wishes to purchase. This ticket will then be forwarded to Ottawa by the elevator agent and the farmer will receive his War Issue direct from Ottawa.

E. J. Tarr, K.C., chairman of the War Savings Committee for Manitoba, expressed appreciation for the co-operation of the Elevator Companies for making available more than 1,500 additional sales outlets in rural areas of the Western Provinces. He urged all farmers who wished to participate in this war effort to arrange the purchase of their certificates at country elevators.

BU.L EXHIBT

Visitors to the Edmonton Exhibition last week were given the opportunity of inspecting the fine young pure-bred bulls which the Provincial Department of Agriculture exchange for scrub animals. Facilities were provided to give full information to visitors, all of whom commented favorably on the splendid animals.

"The bull exchange policy has been one of the most popular live stock improvement policies ever to be set up by Alberta," said Dr. H. E. Mullen, Minister of the department. "About 600 purebred bulls have been handed out since it began."

BI-LINGUAL TASK

Quebec:—Canada's participation in the war should be total because "this war is ours as much as England's", stated Senator Arsène Blais of Edmonton, here on a visit. "Canadians of its French language or of the English language, we are here to live together and we have the same ambitions at heart." Thus the principle which confederation asserts us," said Senator Blais.

A Curious Prophecy

When Sir Edward Elgar, the famous English composer, was a small boy, he made a curious prophecy about himself. On making his first appearance at school, the master asked him kindly to tell his name.

The late spring seeding and abnormally warm weather have made the difference in earliness and strength of straw of different varieties very apparent. Five hundred different varieties and strains of wheat, oats and and barley, well illustrate these very important factors. Some 300 crosses of spring and winter wheats are quite promising. From the 6000 plots of grains, grasses, clovers, roots, potatoes, and pastures, many valuable lessons may be learned.

This is a Cereal Crop day but there will be an opportunity to visit the crops and very interesting displays of trees, shrubs, hedges, tree fruit plantations, vegetable gardens and perennial flowers. Do not miss seeing the same.

A drive around the Station will pass the poultry, pigs and cattle and horses in pasture and a brief talk will be given on crops for hay and pasture.

Lunch will start at 12 o'clock with a few speeches about 1 o'clock, followed by an opportunity to visit the crops and a visit to the experimental plots. Bring your lunch, with extra for a 5 o'clock supper. Coffee, cream, sugar and cream will be provided for both meals.

THREE CENTS BADLY NEEDED—

IN NORMAL times Alberta farmers may ship their wheat either eastward to Fort William or westward to Vancouver. Taking Tofield as an example there is a difference of 3 cents per bushel freight charges between the two points, on shipments west 16⅓ cents being deducted for freight, and on shipments east 19⅓ cents. In normal times this difference is taken care of by quotations at either Fort William or Vancouver in, since the war started there has ceased to be a market for wheat at Vancouver and consequently no Vancouver quotations. So, regardless of whether an Alberta farmer sold his wheat on a western shipment basis, or not, it was shipped east anyway and the government absorbed the three cents as between east and west freight rates.

With the coming into force of the new pegged price of 70 cents on the basis of No. 1 f.o.b. Fort William, the privilege of Alberta farmers requesting that their grain be shipped west, thus saving three cents per bushel in freight is done away with. The wheat market at Vancouver is temporarily closed, the pegged price is strictly on a Fort William basis and farmers of this district will have deducted from the price of their grain 19⅓ cents for freight.

This is, as can readily be seen, a hardship on Alberta farmers, for the farther a grain shipper is from Fort William the less net money he will receive. In normal times this is something of a handicap even if not such a serious one, but at a time when No. 1 wheat is only worth 66⅔ cents at the local elevator, the three cents difference between eastern and western freight rates looms big. The situation is aggravated by the fact that there is no guarantee that farmers will receive 70c for wheat, as a matter of fact the law of averages is against this happening in this district. Every grade lost means a reduction in price which makes the three cents before mentioned more important still.

The policy of pegging wheat at a minimum price, is designed to prevent complete collapse of wheat prices and ruination of the economy of the country. A pegged price is not and never has been considered a "fair" price or an "adequate" price. The sole idea behind the minimum pegged price of wheat is to prevent the price of wheat becoming any lower. Therefore if the zero mark as regards price has been reached for farmers in Manitoba or Eastern Saskatchewan, it is below zero for farmers in Western Saskatchewan and Alberta. That is, farmers on the western side of the wheat growing plains are paid a price for their product which is insufficient to maintain the economy of the country at even a below par standard. Representations to Ottawa to have the 70c pegged price apply to Vancouver as well as to Fort William cannot be too strong or made too soon.

CANADA'S ARMY—

AMERICA PARTICULARLY North America, has always been peace minded. Coveting neither the land or treasures of other nations, it has been content to develop its own industry and let neighboring countries do the same. The result has been that nowhere in the world in so short a space of time has such material progress been made. The Dictators of Europe having with diabolical cunning laid down a challenge to all free men, there was nothing else that Canada, and in only a little less degree, the United States could do, but to accept. Canada accepted by promptly going to the side of Great Britain and the United States accepted by promising and furnishing supplies and by voting billions of dollars for military and naval purposes.

From a country with only the mere skeleton of an armed force, Canada is rapidly creating both an army, navy and flying force of which the country may well be proud. Each particular branch of the services, land, sea and air is well rounded out and in addition a militia force which includes every able bodied male between certain ages is being rapidly organized.

On Monday of this week, in the House of Commons at Ottawa, Prime Minister King and Hon. Mr. Ralston, Minister of Defence outlined Canada's part in the war and also gave a resume of the present set-up of Canada's fighting forces and what was expected in the immediate months or years ahead. A brief report of the Minister's statements appear on page 3 and a resume of this will show how in a few short months Canada, due to the persuasion of Messrs Hitler and Mussolini have turned from almost a 100 per cent peace nation to a nation surely developing a military, naval and aviation complex.

Canadians as a class while preferring the paths of peace, are no sissies. The Germans found this out in the Great War, and if and when, the time comes again for Canadians to engage in conflict with the enemy, the enemy will find itself up against brave and resourceful men of northern breed. Men trained with all the advantages of modern equipment plus the individual initative of which men of America are noted for.

I DO not know of any way so sure of making others happy as being so myself.—Sir Arthur Helps.

LIFE IN THE NEW ARMY

When A. A. Miller's Christopher Robin went down with Ailes to see them camping the guards at Spithead, Graham Miller, Ailes mused: "A soldier's life is terrible hard." But Ailes was born twenty years too late. She should have a look in at any of the present Canadian military training centres and she would soon change her mind.

Not that a soldier's life is quite a bed of roses, but times have changed and today a man in training or on active service has far more comforts than any of his older comrades of other years.

Take, for example, Bartlefield Camp near Kingston. There, the Canadian Legion War Service operates a canteen and recreation hut and there is just about everything that is to be had in a modern hotel, although, of course, on not such a luxurious basis.

In addition to serving soft drinks, chocolates, necessary toilet articles and plenty of tempting eatables, the hut has a reading room containing books, magazines and newspapers, a stamp register where are available the names of all men in camp for the security of their pals, a parcel wrapping counter with paper and string, a first aid kit, a postal department, a radio news service on bulletin boards, all day radio reception, money order service and a registry desk.

Comfortable chairs and chesterfields are scattered throughout the main lounge; there is a radio in one corner and piano in another; there is a large stock of writing paper and envelopes always on hand, and on top of all that the Legion officer acts as personal service man who, without charge, of course, assists the troops in any and all kinds of personal problems they are unable to adjust themselves.

Pampering, you say? Not at all. The men of the present forces are citizens under arms and because of the sacrifice they are making, and are prepared to make, they are entitled to the best. And it all helps to keep up their determination to fight until their country, their Empire, and their families and loved ones are safe and for all free of threat of German brutality.

HELP THE REGISTRATION

There are many ways in which you can help the work of national registration. First, of course, registrate, and register early.

It is anticipated that with million people will register during the three days—August 15, 16 and 17. That is not quite twice the number who polled their votes in the last election, but it's fairly close to it.

Perhaps the deputy registrar in your own territory could use your services. You might help on the day of registration.

It ought to be a matter of honour in his particular district to have the registration as full and complete as possible.

NATIONAL REGISTRATION

On August 19, 20, and 21 a great army of Canadian people—all there, male or female, over the age of 16—will move out to points of registration and fill in the cards containing a number of questions.

Why is this registration taking place? This country is at war. Its people are making the utmost possible effort to accomplish its purpose. That purpose is the defeat of the enemy.

In order to do this it must marshal the full forces of the nation—all the human, moral, material and military with the Mr. Murray and Mrs. Warner and others.

Mrs. Booth spent a week or more with her daughter, Mrs. Bert Swift and also with Mrs. Bill MacIntyre at Carnation.

The Weatherills spent Sunday at Hastings Lake.

Jacobson's spent Sunday at Elk Island Park.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Moss were to the city on Monday. Vadya has not been feeling well lately. We hope he will feel better soon.

Pauline and Jean Walbre are spending a few days with relatives in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Steen spent a few days at Bonnyville.

Mrs. Jim Secord's sister has been visiting at the Secords for a while.

"McKENZIE"

Mrs. Roberge returned home on Sunday after spending a week with Albert Roberge in the city. Peggy Wentworth, 3 years old, came back with her and will be staying with her for a while.

Wm. J. Colberg of Rosebud, Alberta, visited at the Jacobsons for a few days while Clarence Colberg and Jim Colberg made a trip up near Lamont.

Mrs. Harold Weatherill's sister and two sons from Saskatchewan visited at Weatherills for a few days and also at her parents home, Mr. and Mrs. Bates, west of town.

Mrs. Walker spent from Sunday till Thursday at Cooking Lake recently with Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Warner and others.

Mrs. Booth returned home Sunday after a months stay with relatives at the coast. We need more plums, tanks, ammunition. To produce them we need more men, more money, more time. The nation must produce more, spend less, and—above all—to be frank about its needs.

Then it is necessary that our young men should be trained for home defence. That is the reason for the call to early date for a brief period of intensive training.

Yes, we are at war. Registration means simply organization for greatest effort—for victory. The nation calls! To answer the questions taken only a few minutes. Each of you must be prepared to answer. Read the questions in this paper and have the answers ready. Then on the day of registration go to register. Where so many must give their all you will not be asked to do so much.

WOMEN AND REGISTRATION

Totalitarian war makes a still greater demand. Modern war involves far more than the fighting forces—it goes beyond the lines. It involves the whole energy of the nation, the strengthening of the moral and spiritual forces of the nation, and also an increase not only in the production of war materials but an increase in general production as well.

We not only have to produce more so far as war materials are concerned, but we must produce more than in the past because it is necessary that many war materials must be purchased abroad, and the nation must accumulate the foreign exchange necessary for these purchases.

In war conditions the strength of the army in the field must be established, but the strength of the army of workers at home must also be increased. It is, therefore, only natural that more and more women ought to be drawn into the army of production in order to strengthen the nation in this time of crisis.

The women of Canada can help by filling in the registration card with care and by encouraging others to do the same. National registration is a world problem and a clear record of the womanpower of the nation.

REGISTRATION IS NECESSARY

You have a duty with your country on August 19, 20 or 21. Do not neglect it. There are severe penalties—fine and imprisonment, but no one should be penalized for neglect.

If you are absent from home on that day, register at the nearest point of registration. The registrar will forward your answers to the proper designation.

Answer the questions definitely, especially 14 and 17. These deal with the question of your present employment and capacity for other work. Your answers may be helpful to you in the demand for labor throughout. National production for war purposes makes demand for more men and women.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Dispatches from Ottawa inform us that owing to the lack of elevator space Farmers will be required to store some grain for a time at least on their own farms. This means that Elevator Companies and farmers, alike, will tend to "play" or fill up their bins to the limit.

Almost every year, particularly since "combining" started, some farmers and some Elevator Companies have suffered severe penalties because stored grain had become binburnt, which lowered the grade to "Rejected" and sometimes to no grade at all; this bin-burning being brought about because the grain was cut and threshed before it was thoroughly ripe, or because the grain contained undripened weed seeds.

WEDDING

McFADDEAN—HART

A lovely mid-summer wedding took place at St. Andrew's United Church, Cochrane, on Wednesday, July 31st, at four o'clock, when Mildred Hutchinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hedley A. Hart of Cochrane became the bride of Mr. George Everitt McFaddean of Tofield, son of the late Mr and Mrs. T. McFaddean of Stettler. Reverend W. Little was the officiating minister.

At the altar palms, ferns, pink gerniums and delphiniums formed a background for the bridal party. To Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, played by Mr. Arthur Crighton L.R.C.M. of Calgary, the bride entered the church on her father's arm. Her dainty wedding gown was fashioned of white net over lovely taffeta; the fitted bodice, puffed bodice, and insets of the full skirt were of embroidered net. A halo brid the chapel veil in place. She wore a string of pearls belonging to her mother. Her bouquet was of Briarcliff roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Phyllis Hart, as maid of honour. Her bridesmaids were Miss Bilvera Hart, sister of the bride, and Miss Margaret McFaddean, youngest sister of the groom, were bridesmaids. They were gowns of pastel mauve, blue, and pink, which were exact copies of the bride's in design. The white hats and harmonizing bouquets of mixed flowers in pastel tones completed their costumes.

Mr. Ed. Wilson of Argyle Prince Albert was best man. Mr. Jack Grainger of Calgary and Mr. Colin Mitchell of Edmonton were ushers. Miss Peggy Mc-Gregor of Pincher Creek sang "Love's Coronation" while the register was being signed.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents. They were received by the bridal party, Mrs. Hart, and Mrs. Holt, the groom's eldest sister. Mrs. Hart wore a grey flowered sheer afternoon dress and a white hat. Mrs. Holt chose a black sheer crepe trimmed with white, and a white hat. Both wore corsages of pink roses. The living room was decorated with the same flowers. The wedding table, covered with Tuscany lace cloth and set with silver candelabra, held silver baskets, held the three-tiered wedding cake. Mrs. C. N. Butcher and Mrs. G. Clark poured tea, and Mrs. Fadmen still resides at Tofield.

Mrs. J. Dunn and Miss Anne Heaney of Edmonton are visiting at the Woods.

Professor Rowan Conduct- ing Crow Hunt in This Area

Professor Rowan of the University of Alberta is conducting a crow hunt in this district being encamped near Beaver Lake. It will be remembered Professor Rowan was here several years ago and at that time caught quite a large number of birds which were taken to Edmonton and placed in large enclosures and subjected to lengthening hours of light. The result was that the migratory habits of birds were influenced by lengthening and shortening days. For a number of years scientists have been trying to understand the cause of bird migration and Professor Rowan's contribution to scientific literature along these lines is considerable.

In addition to the migratory habits of birds, a long standing puzzle, there is another scientific search connected with the crow catching business. The migration is we believe caused by the activity of a certain hormone—or something or other—and studying the activity of the hormone gives a clue to some problems connected with the human body. Perhaps the professor would like to straighten us out on this.

Anyway crows, we understand are not quite as numerous as they were a few years ago, but probably numerous enough for the purposes of the post. Anyway there's no question as to him being welcome to them.

Converses With Her Majesty The Queen

Quite recently there appeared in the picture section of the Edmonton Bulletin a photograph of two sailors playing billiards in London. Her beauty, Queen Elizabeth showing typical interest in members of the forces, had stopped a recreation centre for an informal inspection and graciously posed for a photograph with the two sailors.

The two sailors playing billiards were Canadians one of whom was the son of Geo. Chapman of Edmonton and formerly of Tofield, and nephew of Mr. W. Thompson of Tofield. 389 Majestic Crescent on the green and all about some simple rules and poems of leaving two thrilled Canadian artists.

Chapter III

SYNOPSIS

Lee Rollins, tennis ace, in turn becomes very domestic the evening prior to leaving with the Davis Cup team to help win the cup for America; and is in love with the rich Grace Worthington, who is willing to defy her family and marry him if he will give up tennis. Fate seems to decide the matter for him when in a match game he injures an ankle so seriously that the doctors say he can never play again. He gets a job at Talbot's sporting goods shop —selling tennis equipment, and in and Grace are married.

He nodded, smiled, could think of no reply but to take her in his arms. She responded to her bliss as she never had before. Her body attempted to flow into his. He could feel her trembling, but could not control himself. Her arms were around his neck, her lips were warm and moist against his, her body soft and yielding. "How I love you, Lee!" she breathed. "So much, so terribly much! I hurry—way deep down in me somewhere."

His hands, though he was unaware of it, were gripping her bare arms, his lips were bruising hers. He drew her still closer to him. There was a deep roaring in his ears, as if of the sea. Her breath came sobbingly.

Lee was halfway through lunch in the late afternoon when the young men entered, big coats belted about their bodies. One was short and chunky and the other very tall and slim. They recognized him even as breathlessly, happily he munched them. Frank Whentley and Dan Clark!

"Peggy Rollins, on I live and breathe!" Whentley cried.

"Have the hell are you?" Dan asked gripping his hand.

"Dan! Frank! It's good to see you!"

They stood for a moment scrutinizing one another, their silence a bond. Then coats were thrown off and the two of them were sitting at the table, all trying to talk at once.

"Tell us," Frank demanded, "what have you been doing with yourself? Of course we knew you married that rich Worthington girl—"

Lee grimaced wryly. "It's not that kind of a marriage at all, believe it or not. She was cut off, you know, without a cent."

Lee told them then of his experiences from the day he had played Clark at Aiken and had broken his ankle. The other two young men listened attentively with nods to the wrist. "And on," Lee finished, "I'm a happy old married man of seven months with a swell wife and a fair-sized kid.

Frank noted: "Don't you ever miss the old life, Rolly?"

Slowly Lee shook his head. No—o—" "You mean to say," Don pursued, "that you never feel sort of tied up? Never miss traveling around the way you used to? You know—Bermuda, Berkeley, New Orleans, Europe . . .

"Diamond shame about that ankle, bib," Whentley broke in irrelevantly. "Any!—one—of those things." Lee grinned. "They happen, I guess."

"Sure. But why did it have to be you?" Clark exclaimed. "Why not someone who didn't mean anything to the game? With you, Rolly, we could bring back the cup this year, I think."

He felt Frank Whentley's gaze upon him, heard the clumsy older man say: "You're right, Rolly, it was a good thing to happen to you. You've really happier than we are, more substantially happy, if you know what I mean."

"Yes," Lee repeated. "I'm happy. And I know what you mean."

Frank said: "I'd change places with you in a minute."

Good old Whentley! what a swell guy!

"Wouldn't you, Don?" Frank asked, turning to his teammate.

Don's eyes lit inquiringly on the older one's, read something there, nodded vigorously.

They talked then of politics, the possibility of war in Europe, of plays and books and many things. The hands of the clock upon around and at last Lee's time was up. He had to go back to Talbot's. To work. He stood up and said:

"Sorry, mugs, but I'm a hard-working guy with only an hour for lunch. How about coming in to see me at the store sometime? Or the house?"

He gave them the phone number but knew they'd never call; they'd never have time.

"Rolly," Frank Whentley asked, "could the table stand its strain of giving lessons? Nothing drastic. A girl kid. A rich kid. You probably know his old man—Dayton Richmond."

Lee leaned down into Frank Whentley's face. How nicely he said! Grace could not come extra money. "Um, might give it a try, Frank. Thanks."

"Gee. Call Richmond tomorrow. He's in the book. I'll get in touch with him this afternoon and tell him."

Lee's mind remained in a fermented of revolt all the rest of that day. He knew Grace would be opposed to his going back to tennis even if it was just a matter of amusing. But the money for each lesson certainly would add mightily to their meager income. With it they could do a lot that they had not been able to do before.

Finally he decided to take the consulting job and tell Grace something about it. For Christmas he would buy her something really nice. Surprise her. She loved surprises, better her eyes would glow! Yes, he'd buy her young Red Cavalier, a pony, a tennis pony, and give Grace its most beautiful Christmas present he could afford. Certainly she deserved it.

As to his arriving home late two evenings in a week, he could pretend he was working overtime at the store. It was lying, but it was lying he hated people who lied. Two, they had evidently got away with it for a long time from each other. But this really wasn't lying—a white lie never was. And, after all, wasn't he doing it entirely for her?

• • •

Exhilaration flowed through Lee as he pulled on white woolen socks, flannel laced his shoes, pulled on a cardigan into shaved his chest. He bounced a ball, the gut was humming like a tuning fork, and he caught it in one hand

A HABIT?—

THERE is no question that immediately prior to the present war Great Britain desired peace. There was not only the meeting at Munich to prove this, but the general tenor of opinion throughout the country expressed in a thousand different ways bore out this fact. Diplomatically and officially, concession after concession was made to German demands and it was only when the invasion of Poland with its accompanying horrors took place did the British Government declare war on Germany.

According to report some time ago, speaking to an English girl, Hitler remarked that "fighting became a habit with the British." In a sense he was probably right. The British dislike change, and it is only when it can be seen that there is nothing else to do, will they change from one mode of life to another. They are not slow to recognize progress or to accept modern innovations, but they do dislike change for itself alone. Having been very slow to be prodded into war and having been none too quick in the early stages of the war, Great Britain has really now become war minded and having become so, it is going to take a lot of persuasion to bring public opinion back to the peace complex of 1938. Great Britain will go on along the paths of war taking reverses and successes as they come. She will apply to her war activities the same dogged steadfastness of purpose that is applied to her everyday peace life, and a war complex and fighting spirit will become a part of her until victory is assured.

NATIONAL REGISTRATION—

IT BEING ordered by the Canadian Government that all persons within certain age limits register on August 19, 20, or 21st, and that said registration take the form of answering quite a number of questions, it would be good business for those required to register to fully acquaint themselves with the questions before actual registration day.

There are some eighteen questions, and while some of them are easy enough to answer, others have to be "thought out" if a correct answer is given. On August 1st, in connection with many other newspapers the Mercury published a list of the questions drawn up in pretty much the same form as the deputy registrar will have them. By studying the form at leisure and answering these questions, either mentally or by writing them in (if you happen to have the paper around) much time will be saved and the person registering will be able to answer the questions easily and naturally without any hesitation.

Due to the turmoil of world affairs, registration is compulsory and Canadians generally will endeavor to co-operate so that registration may be as complete and accurate as possible.

LINDBROOK

Here the rains have seem to have let up for a bit, possibly we may get a chance for a bit of hay up; either many members of the hay farm lose dry for years are flooded now and lots are really dangerous. The hornet fleet break through the sod into the mud houses and it doesn't take much before they begin to flounder and that means broken harness and machinery.

There was a post that once said that "the mothers battle have some queer sights", well they've seen a few around here of late during the "blitzkrieg" of mosquitoes. Some of the dresses and styles to obtain relief from the pests are funny to see who didn't know home wear a yes like the early early motorists of the beginning of the century, some have a light veil fastened at back of cap or hat a la Foreign Legion style, one fellow tried to tie the insects that he was a true believer by tying gear with leafy twigs, maybe he thought they were pictures; whilst another carries a leaf fan with a smudge burning in it, swinging it as he walks, several vestal virgin lo! Anyhow they are the worst for years and that's that.

Mr Jas Brocqville and daughters Mar and Pansy returned home from their trip to the Coast on Friday and Mrs. J. Brocqville and their younger daughter Carol came down for a visit.

We hear the donate at Mr. F. Lauritzen's barn was a very jolly and successful affair and well attended and enjoyed by all.

Lindbrook R.R. yds. have been a busy spot of late. Two gangs have been being spotted there. One was the welding gang which has the rail and one gang putting in culverts under the direction of Mr Lacne of Iberlie.

We hear that work on the new Commercial office has been commenced, a bunch of men being busy putting in the foundation. Wonder for some, Ger, that will be some busy spot, Shim's Corner, what with the new Commercial, the Co-op store, new house, and the Hall, what's next? Maybe a new parlor, pool room and police station.

WEDDING

She wore a white picture hat of straw, decorated with white flowers and veil, white shoes and lace gloves. Her only ornament was a gold cross and chain. She carried an ivory prayer book with white streamers.

Miss Marie Stark attended the bride, dressed in white sheer over taffeta with full floor length skirt and mauve sash. She carried a bouquet of rainbows and baby's breath.

Miss Lucy Hardman, matron of honor, wore a pale blue floor length taffeta dress with a short white jacket. She carried a bouquet to matching accessories She carried a bouquet of delphiniums.

Mr. John Murphy served as best man, while Mr. Ambrose Murphy acted as usher.

At the entrance of the wedding party Miss Millie Stirling played the wedding march. During the Nuptial Mass many beautiful and appropriate hymns were sung by the choir.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast for some thirty guests was served at home of the bride's parents. Later an afternoon reception was held for relatives and friends of the newly married couple.

For travelling the bride chose a large crepe two piece suit with three-quarter length coat and navy accessories.

Line Elevators To Test Suitability Of Crops For Seed

New Service Instituted to Aid in Seed Selection

Line elevator companies have established a free service for all farmers whereby they may obtain authoritative information on the purity and suitability for seeding purposes of wheat they are growing this year. This new service has been inaugurated by the agricultural department of the North-West Line Elevators Association.

Complete information may be obtained from any line elevator agent. Farmers who desire to avail themselves of this service are advised to take a five foot length of one drill row from five widely separated points in the field. These samples should be tied together and delivered to any local line elevator agent. The samples will then be sent to Winnipeg for identification and advice as to the farmer as to the suitability of his crop for next year's seed.

Ukrainian Greek Catholics Hold Annual Picnic

On the afternoon of Sunday, August 11th, the Ukrainian Greek Catholics held their annual picnic at the Tofield Sports Grounds. This event has been held for a number of years in the early part of July and the long postponement was due to the great amount of rainy days during the past month.

There was a fair crowd present though it was not nearly as large as could have been expected earlier in the summer before berry picking got under way. Those who did attend, however, enjoyed themselves very much.

The first event scheduled was a ladies' softball game between Tofield and Dunluce. After a close game both, on which first one team and then the other had a one run lead, the game ended in a 8-8 tie.

This was followed by a doubles' bonker between the Mackenzie and Tofield baseball teams. Mackenzie was the first game on the totals scoring of Leo Bailey and a timely home run by Jack Jones. The score was 3-0. The batteries for Mackenzie were Leo Bailey and Jack Jones and for Tofield, F. Johnsrud, and R. Mackin.

The local team won the sagebrush 8-3 behind the very effective hurling of John Moore. Frank Johnsrud hit homer for Tofield in this game and Jack Bailey hit one for Mackenzie. Tofield's defensive play was much steadier in the second game and contrast to the first one in which they made many errors. Batteries for the second game were Tofield, J. Moore and J. Bertild and for Mackenzie, Jones and Jack Jones.

Chapter IV

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, semi-pro tennis star, is torn between two desires. He dreams of going to Europe to help win the Davis Cup for America, and he is in love with the rich Grace Worthington who is willing to defy her family and marry him if he will give up tennis. Fate takes a hand when he injures an ankle so seriously that the doctors say he can never play again. He gets a job at Talbot's sporting goods shop and he and Grace are married. Len finds that his ankle will stand up while he tutors a rich man's son at tennis. But on a Tuesday evening Grace decides to meet Len at the store, only to have a whimsical old man open the door of a closed shop.

He laughed unconvincingly. "That's utterly ridiculous, darling. My ankle wouldn't permit it, even if I did want to play that many times in one week."

"Then you do admit that if your ankle could stand it you'd be out there often, playing tennis? If your ankle should ever become normal I wouldn't mean that to you." She snapped two slim fingers weakly.

He laughed. "I'll show you how much it means to me. Tomorrow I'll tell Mr. Richmond I'm through. You don't think I care particularly about hanging around a dusty, barn anyway after work, do you? I much prefer coming home here to a good dinner."

"Couldn't you," she asked with a faint smile, "have said some home here—to me?"

Inquisition. "That's exactly what I mean. Home here—to you."

She raised her lips to his. "I—I suppose we're all made up queer, aren't we? And tomorrow you'll tell Mr. Richmond?" she snuggled closely to him.

"Yes. Tomorrow I'll tell him."

* * *

Len gave up instructing young Richmond. But with the arrival of more mail wanting to bend a racket and more difficult problems. The men at Talbot's always came to play at their tennis tents in the business league.

He was undecided for days whether or not to speak to Grace about it. He didn't dare play with Richmond her, and he was afraid that when she mentioned it she would object. But finally at the theatre one evening he corralled his courage, and did.

"Why," she stammered, "I was—I went for a walk. What time did you get home?"

"What time did I get home?" Manlike, his concern over her safety expressed itself in anger. And he was hungry. "What time do I always get home when I work overtime?"

Something snapped inside her. "Len Rollins!" she returned grimly, her breathing nearly normal now, "don't stand there pulling at me like that. And furthermore, don't keep on telling me lies. I want to meet you. Where were you?"

He took a step forward. "So it's like that," he stormed. "It's reached the point where you're spying on me. Well, I won't have it, do you hear? I won't have it."

Very well," she said coldly. "Very well."

He crossed the room in long strides, shut off the radio. He hadn't meant to let go the way he had—lose control of himself. But the combination of worry at her absence and Grace's discovery of his deception had caused him to lose his temper. Now he wanted to retract his words and it was too late.

She was crying—and it was all his fault.

"Stop crying," he said grimly. Let's forget all about it."

"You lied to me," she managed between sobs, "you lied to me!"

"Oh, it really wasn't a lie; honestly it wasn't, Grace. Sit up and dry your eyes and I'll tell you all about it. It really wasn't a lie he had been sure it would be, merely said with some heat. "I'm trying to child's play compared to the competition I've been working at. I'll tell you that, but you won't listen. I had no opportunity to earn a little extra money—and took it. I didn't tell you anything about it because I wanted it to be a surprise.

"You see, Mr. Richmond—he's a very wealthy sportsman—has a son, and he asked me to give young Bob some tennis lessons. I wanted to talk to you about it before agreeing, but then I figured if I took the job I could give you something you want." He paused, glanced at her bent head hopefully.

"But you know very well I can't like you hanging around tennis places," she said brokenly. It is the one thing I ask, but that doesn't seem to make any difference. First thing you know instead of two nights a week it'll be four."

He put his in his pocket and bade them good night and went home.

"Hello! What's wrong?" he asked Grace, who was unusually silent during the evening. "You don't appear very chipper. Feeling all right?"

Her answer was, "I saw Mother today. They've made the first move toward conciliation. They've asked us both out for the week-end."

He frowned. "You know I don't get off until ten on Saturday night."

"Couldn't you possibly get the afternoon?"

"I'll ask."

"If it can't be arranged we'll have Sunday instead," she suggested.

Sunday. Sunday.

"Well if I speak frankly, Gracie? I don't want to go. I'd feel strangefeelable after the way they've been acting toward you and our marriage. It's only natural. I suppose, and I don't hold any resentment ment age out them. Just the same I'd feel a-a-of place, embarrassed."

There was her voice very soft and small. "I — I suppose you're perfectly right from your point of view, but I thought that for my sake perhaps you'd try and see it through. After all, it would be the first time."

"Now," he replied, "you put me on the spot. You know I'd do anything in the world for you, sweetheart. But you can't expect me to if you're absolutely set on it. Just put yourself in my place."

"You," she said softly, evidently disappointed. "I see what you mean. You don't forget about it. I'll make some excuse."

Now, damn it all, he was on the spot. Grace would be able to make it clear to her that the matches Sun was the only thing nothing to do which his not wanting to go out to Eastkampton. It was true that he did not care to visit her family. But would she understand that or would she think him of wanting to play home because of the game?

In any case it would be foolhardy to go. Grace needed him at home now. In her present mood she would not understand; she would misinterpret everything. It would be best, he finally decided, to postpone considering it until the last minute. It might rain. Playing then would be impossible and the situation would be saved all around. Yes, that was best. His mind was eased and he gave it no further thought.

Friday evening they walked over to Riverside Drive to view a huge steel-grey warrior of the sea not fat from where they lived, one of the Atlantic Fleet ashored in the Hudson after annual manoeuvers in the Sound.

"Mother." Grace said as they stood at the stone wall that overlooked the river, "was really quite upset at our not coming out. I believe they're honestly sincere about accepting my black sheep into the fold."

He shrugged. "I know a good way to find out. You go out there Sunday and surprise them with your visit. Lay your cards on the table; make them do the same. Then publish how they feel about our marriage and how the we've made a success of it."

Her head drooped. "I see your point. "If they're still hesitant about us, I'll be heartbroken, I'll be there to go to the devil and to find another daughter."

They turned back toward home. "If you will go out for the week-end?" he said, changing the subject up to his face. "I don't want to be away from you any longer than I have to—especially overnight."

When he arrived home Saturday night just after six the house seemed dark and quiet. He switched on the lights. On the small Queen Anne secretary was a note. He picked it up and read:

Len:

I decided after all to go to Eastkampton. I'll be back tomorrow or Monday. Don't worry about me.

I found the enclosed in the coat pocket of the suit you asked me to send to the tailor.

Grace.

He had never experienced horror and hoped never to experience again the all-gone feeling that he knew now. His hand was like lead. "The enclosed" was a carbon copy of the tennis schedule for Talbot's team.

Oil Cans Considered Dangerous For Food

It has been brought to the attention of the Dominion Department of Agriculture that many people are making use of oil cans for the canning of foods.

The use of oil cans for food is considered to be a very dangerous practice since they are made of Terne plate, a plating which is almost wholly lead, and very small amounts of lead are poisonous.

Cans made expressly for foods are entirely different and can be bought at a nominal price from hardware stores and mail order houses. Years of research have gone into the manufacture of cans for canning food, for with the result that the inside plating is lead-free. This is done to make it impossible for foods to become contaminated with lead, and no cans should be used for fruits, vegetables, meats or fish other than those made as food cans.

Oil cans are not food cans and should not be used for any food product.

BREAD PRICE PROTEST—

Vancouver—Increase of one cent per loaf of bread is "unreasonable and ridiculous," the Mosquitoes' League of British Columbia have decided. Court bakers claim the price advance is made necessary by the new flour processing tax of 15 cents per bushel of wheat. But the committee contend that it was profiteering and that they would protest to the wartime prices and trades board. "We feel the large bakeries particularly are using the new tax only as an excuse to make extra profits," they stated.

BUSINESS OPINION—

Edmonton—A shortage of skilled labor has already caused a rise in wages, according to R. A. Trentell, Toronto business executive. This, he said, was due to the increased demands of war industries. Mr. Trentell stated that business conditions throughout Canada were excellent and credited the guaranteed price of wheat for the activity.

FURS WEAR—

Ottawa—All existing purchases will be issued "income or later" Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of national war services announced today. He said that the house of Commons in a recent review of progress, fearing that new issues and park agreements would be worked out between Canada and the United Kingdom some time this month, the minister added that there was no reason why Canada should not fill in the needs of Britain for foodstuffs.

FIGHTING MAD—

Edmonton—M. H. Holton, formerly Alberian and for many years special correspondent in London, believes that Prime Minister Churchill has united the British people as they have never been before. Now of Washington, Mr. Holton says England is "fighting mad" against the enemy which is time-winning her very existence. The correspondent recently passed through Edmonton.

STORAGE RATE—

Winnipeg—Reduction in rate for grain storage from 1-30 of a cent a bushel to 1-60 of a cent per day has been announced by E. R. Ramsay, chief of the board of grain commissioners and terminals. It is reported probable that further rates will be made to be allowed to farmers for storing their own wheat since government participation in terminal elevators would be allowed at the same rate as the elevator companies.

THIS YEARS CROP—

HAVING SEEN some thirty odd harvests in the three western provinces, it is difficult for us to recall any one of them in which something or other did not cause dismay in a more or less degree. Early frosts, snowed under grain, leaning grain, hail, rust, drought, or very low prices, all at some time or other created plenty of discussion and at times real apprehension. But somehow or other the seasons rolled around and no matter how disheartened the average farmer was in the fall, spring found him again full of hope. Moreover life continued on. With the passing of summers and winters, some people left and others came and took their places. Old folk, endeared to the hearts of many, passed on, and new babies came and maintained the population. Wedding bells rang and couples were united. In fact looking back, it would almost seem as if the people of the west, farmers and small town people, did a lot of unnecessary worrying. Anyway in the majority of instances the cause of our troubles was beyond our fixing.

This year however, something really new has arisen to cause us worry. Whatever our troubles in the past were, the crop that was harvested could always be sold at a price. This year, however, if present indications are correct and the present Wheat Board order lasts for any period of time, farmers are going to have much grain on their hands for which there will be no immediate market. The order as it now stands is for five bushels to the acre of wheat, oats or barley to be sold, and it can readily be seen that the amount of money possible to be realized from the sale of this amount would hardly cover the cost of harvesting. The plugging of channels through which grain passes to the markets of the world is a problem Western Canada has never had to face before, but it is certainly a most serious one.

There is this much about it though, crop troubles before have generally been due to natural causes, drought, hail, frost, rust, etc., any one of which having occurred, it was impossible to remedy. This year nature has really been generous and it is from the human element angle that trouble looms. No one ever visualized a condition where harvesters and country elevators would be plugged immediately prior to harvest, and no doubt a full realization of this and the seriousness of it is difficult to fully comprehend. Yet the great deal of the inconvenience mounting up to genuine hardship may be avoided if the federal government takes an active interest in the situation at once. As far as humanly possible additional storage must be provided in the East. With regard to grain that must be stored on the farm an adequate advance should be made. Failure to do this will in all probability result in a break down of western economy with dire results to a large number of people.

THE TWO ROADS—

THERE ARE TWO methods of carrying on a war — the democratic and the totalitarian. We have chosen deliberately the democratic concept. It leaves something to the individual. He still retains in large measure, his freedom of action. He seeks the work for which he is best qualified, he directs his effort towards the task which he feels he is best fitted to do. The state ,it is true, may exercise certain powers of persuasion, economic forces direct his steps, but he is drawn towards the task in which he is engaged by his personal likes or dislikes, his training, his qualifications for the work, and by the reward which he receives for his effort.

In the totalitarian state it is different. Direction comes from the central authority. Men are placed in industry. They remain there until they are called to some other task. Industry takes care of the men engaged. The pay is limited. The standard of living is low. Rationing in food, fuel, clothing, started from the beginning of the war — even earlier than that. The work is directed by the state — the state is everything, the individual is nothing.

There are advantages in both lines of approach. If the conscious effort of the nation is to be devoted at all times to the task of war, to the enslavement of men — if the individual is always to be of relative insignificance and the state alone is the sole factor, then it may be admitted that for a time at least there is greater striking force and power within the totalitarian method. But it carries with it the seeds of destruction. It leaves nothing to the play of the human emotions. It does not measure the desire for freedom which has always been an element in the lives of men, and always will so long as men are free. It assumes that man is a machine, that he is capable of functioning as a machine. The tragedy of Germany is not that the people have become enslaved to a mad ideal but that they no longer care "to cancel their own captivity".

We desire to live in freedom, to live under a democracy. We must mobilize the man power and womanpower of the nation. That is the plan back of national registration, which opens August 19. It is an effort to organize on a larger scale for earlier victory than might otherwise be achieved. —Registration Information Department.

BRITAIN REJECTING BLITZ-KRIEG HAY COMES IN FEW BATS

London, Aug., 4th (8am says): With overwhelming German threats by air against various parts of the British Isles some observers thought Tuesday a major attack and possibly an attempt at invasion might come within the next few days or possibly a fortnight. The form that expected air attack on Britain may take is that of large scale raids by 200 or 300 bombers at a time coming over in waves from various points in North Sea and French coasts. Hitler might induce the Italians to launch a similar attack in the Mediterranean perhaps against Egypt.

It may be said with conviction that the fear of the German invasion is not as great as it was five or six weeks ago. Not long ago British stood alone insofar as the German blitzkrieg, and leaders acknowledged with candor the grave character of their position. There was resolution and determination but there was also fear of the outcome. In the meantime the British people rallied to action now transforming the Isles into a fortress. One writer says: "With a nation's destiny at stake, Britain has risen to the challenge. For a time it was thought the Battle of France would be swiftly followed by the Battle of Britain. If the expectation that an attack on wider lines is immediate, Hitler must have the British commonwealth of nations gathered together in a magnificent display of unity, fortitude and with purpose, and that his chances for success are steadily weakening.

A WANT AD BRINGS RESULTS

A resolution was passed asking the Provincial Government to guarantee loans to farmers for twine and repairs pointing out the lack of credit facilities through the usual channels.

The next meeting of Council will be held September 14, 1940, commencing at 2 p.m.

The late Mr. Stileman was born in St. Cloud, Minn. and came west at an early age and from 1923 to 1934 was a train dispatcher in Edmonton. From then on he held the position of station agent at various Alberta points, and since 1939 he was C.N.R. Station agent at Holden. In his early days he was an outstanding athlete, and was a member of the Edmonton Eskimo rugby team which met Toronto Argonauts and Queen's University in the dominion final playoffs. He was also outstanding in Baseball and played for the Grand War Veterans team in the old Edmonton City League. During his stay in Holden he took an active part in coaching the boys, putting out posters, in basketball and hockey, and was Scoutmaster of the Holden Boy Scouts. A willing worker for the church, and was Past District Deputy Master for the Masonic District.

Following along the lines of last year's meet at Banff, the contestants will be placed in divisions according to their ages and full particulars and entry forms may be obtained by writing to the Interscholastic Track Meet Committee, post office box 626, Edmonton.

Kingman Plot Outstanding in Crop Testing Field Day

Kingman plot was outstanding for the variety of wheat qualifying for A and B classes in the Crop Testing Field Day held in Kingman district last Saturday and comprising Tofield, Ryley, Holden and Round Hill, all having forty plots each. Ludvig Pedersen, pioneer farmer, had the best plot in the group of forty listed under Round Hill.

Among those in attendance were Major H. G. L. Strange of Winnipeg, who captured a world's championship in wheat while resident at Penn, Alberta, Dr. Newton and Dr. Boyce and R. C. Jenkins of the university of Alberta and F. E. Robbins, Scarle superintendent for the division.

An improvement was noted in all grain plots over last year and Ian Strange is pleasing to Major Strange since it is the purpose of the Searle Grain Company, which is the organization sponsoring the crop testing field days to achieve the highest possible quality of wheat in western Canada and therefore in the world. It was suggested that those who got a Class C grade should content those who received A, but suppose, the Canadian Legion War Services is performing a most necessary task, of which this is an admirable example. A man's work is far more effective if, during his leisure hours, he can find complete relaxation of mind and body.

The Tofield Branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, paid tribute to the efforts which the Legion veterans are expending on behalf of the men soldiers, "as many of whom," he said, "are the sons of men who fought so gallantly in the first war." He expressed great satisfaction that the C.L.W.S. is providing signalling the people on earth to look up and see. As their first task they have undertaken to see that no soldier is neglected. Whether he be in the army, navy or air force, he will be looked after. When we owe them, such one complete letter, he added, "is no longer regarded as a dull but necessary process which occupies our spare hours. We are now being educated, and the older we get, the more we realize that it is always intensely important for a modern soldier who has to think for himself and of his comrades to be the instrument of complicated machinery.

"In fact," he said in his turn, "I want to thank all those who have been responsible for getting me going and I wish you all the best of luck."

Governor-General Officially Opens Recreation Hut

Under a new sky that was flecked with towering white clouds His Excellency the Governor General, Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian forces, paid his first visit to a military camp since his arrival in the Dominion and formally opened a Canadian Legion War Services canteen and recreation hut.

For several weeks the C.L.W.S. has had in operation at Petawawa training centre, in M.D. No. 3, a large and well equipped establishment catering to the needs of the men in training and it was this undertaking that His Excellency, in the presence of officials of the organization and high ranking army officers, declared officially under way.

"One of the worst things about war is boredom," His Excellency said. "At the front the hours of non-operations are more trying than the rare mements of acute danger. In a training camp such as this, the long periods of work without the excitement of fighting, as it is at the front, are more trying. The soldier off duty should be relieved of boredom. For this purpose, the Canadian Legion War Services is performing a most necessary task, of which this is an admirable example. A man's work is far more effective if, during his leisure hours, he can find complete relaxation of mind and body.

The Tofield Branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, paid tribute to the efforts which the Legion veterans are expending on behalf of the men soldiers, "as many of whom," he said, "are the sons of men who fought so gallantly in the first war." Canadian Wheat Board Announces Crop Selling Regulations

The Canadian Wheat Board announced today the plans for the regulation of grain deliveries made necessary by elevator congestion and car shortage. The Canadian Wheat Board Act has been revised, giving the Board power—

"to regulate deliveries of all kinds of grain by producers to country elevators, loading platforms, mill elevators and terminal elevators and to fix the maximum amounts of any kind of grain that a producer may so deliver in any period of time and to prescribe penalties to be suffered by any producer who delivers or attempts to deliver any grain otherwise than in accordance with the regulations herein authorized."

The plan adopted is designed to give all producers, as far as possible, an equitable share of all the storage space that is available. If regulations are not made and enforced, it is clear that in the rush of delivery, some farmers would deliver all their grain when others would be unable to deliver any. A serious financial situation would undoubtedly result.

The first delivery quotas permitted by the Board are 5 bushels of wheat per seeded acre and 5 bushels of barley per seeded acre, from which deductions are made for any quotas are not interchangeable, that is, from a farm there may be delivered 5 bushels per acre of wheat, five of oats and five of barley but the farmer cannot be authorized for oats, or barley for oats, etc. A further initial quotas are to be especially applied over the three provinces, but adjustments by districts will be made by the Board from time to time. The Board does not guarantee that there will be adequate space in the country for acceptance of these quotas, but is confident that if farmers will co-operate, they will each get a fair share of their crops into market.

Seeing a car bearing a Florida license plate on Los Angeles streets the loyal Californian is apt to exclaim, "Rah—this is his best coast."

National Registration August 19th, 20th, 21st

All is set for the National Registration of citizens of the Dominion. Polling places used at the last Federal election will be used as far as possible, in fact the boundaries are the same. Copies of the Notice of National Registration are now posted up in six conspicuous places in each polling division for your guidance. Look them over.

All persons of the age of 16 years and over are required to attend the registration booths on August 19th, 20th or 21st in order to complete their registration, and receive their Registration Certificates which they will have to carry with them at all times.

In cases where a person is ill or incapacitated the deputy registrar may meet an assistant to complete the registration at that person's home.

Severe penalties will be handed out to persons who fail to register, for those who answer any registration for giving misleading answers, and for advising any citizen to refuse or neglect to register, or for encouraging or impeding any officer in carrying out the registration.

Don't leave your registration to the last moment, as only three days are allotted for this work. Don't be one of those who will be sufficient volunteer help to handle the crowd.

Chapter V

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, tennis ace, dreamed of fame and glory when, as member of the Davis cup team he would play for America. But in falls in love with Grace Worthington, rich and socially prominent, who is willing to defy her family and marry him—if he gives up tennis. Fate intervenes. He injures his ankle and doctors say that he will never play again. He and Grace are married and live blissfully on the salary he earns as salesman in a sporting goods shop. As his ankle heals he is urged to return to the courts. He has a flair for the game. His former partner, the wealthy Sandra, Grace's family circle them both down to a match and, Grace gives choice

He could not resist. Saturday night, Sunday morning he would be back! Grace's consenting eyes were on him every page. He threw the book from him and turned on the radio. But, music failed to soothe him. He kept wishing that Grace were present so he could have it out with her and have the subject finally decided. He thought of telephoning her, but decided against it, feeling that would make him appear guilty. Appear guilty? Good God, he was guilty! Guilty as hell!

It was an easy victory. So much easier, he reflected as he took the shower, than would be his conquest over Grace With her, he wasn't even sure——

He stayed at home all of Sunday evening, but he did not retire. Finally he went to bed and fell into a restless troubled sleep.

When he arrived home from work the next day she was there. And Richard White was with her.

He broke in his stride. Then he raised to hisware cool. "Dick drove me from Easthampton. I asked him to stay to dinner."

Dick shook hands with White. "Of course. Glad to see you." Standing, Richard White seated in the big chair near the window. Len was more acutely aware than ever before of his father's good looks, his poise, his social grace.

"I hear you're doing awfully well," White said. "Cracking the business world the way you used to crack a tennis ball."

Len could not explain to himself why just why he resented White. There was something in his tone, perhaps. "I've had one or two good breaks. I guess," he replied with a smile.

Grace said: "But he's still a tennis player at heart and does a business man, Dick. Aren't you, darling?"

Len bit his lip. What was it Grace doing—making sport of him before his other man. He was in the wrong; he knew that. But he'd been wrong before about things and he'd never acted this way. Was this her idea of punishing him?

Conversation during the simple dinner was for the most part friendly, but cool and restrained. At last they had cigarettes and coffee on the living room. Then White took his leave. He thanked them for their hospitality, complimented them on the charm of the apartment and hoped they'd be out at Easthampton very soon.

Grace waited from the foyer back of the living room. Rollins rose into the living room and switched on the radio. She sat in the big chair which White had occupied and waited. For some reason this bothered Len. But he kept his voice level, unexcited, when he spoke.

"I want you to know," he said, "why I didn't tell you about my being scheduled to play yesterday after——"

"I'm sure you had some good reason," Grace said. "But he's still a tennis player at heart and does a business man, Dick. Aren't you, darling?"

"I'm sure you had some good reason," I meant to tell you that same evening you told me about the motor trip to Easthampton. I let you know after Len told him everything, about frankly and honestly how I felt about going out there. Then later I realized that if I mentioned anything about tennis it would appear——"

She nodded without interest, made no reply.

"All right," he went on, "all right. So you don't believe me."

He felt anger surging through him and groped for something to hurt her with. "You're surely over the edge about leaning backward just because of some poor silly prejudice toward something I care loved as much as——"

He didn't finish the sentence, in his own surprise and discomfort at the words he had spoken.

Tears came into her eyes. He saw them. He was not proud of himself. He reflected as he took a shower, than would be his conquest over Grace With her, he wasn't even sure——

When he arrived home from work the next day she was there. And Richard White was with her.

He broke in his stride. Then he raised to his wore cool. "Dick drove me from Easthampton. I asked him to stay to dinner."

Dick shook hands with White. "Of course. Glad to see you." Standing, Richard White seated in the big chair near the window. Len was more acutely aware than ever before of his father's good looks, his poise, his social grace.

"I hear you're doing awfully well," White said. "Cracking the business world the way you used to crack a tennis ball."

Len could not explain to himself why just why he resented White. There was something in his tone, perhaps. "I've had one or two good breaks. I guess," he replied with a smile.

COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the Town council was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening August 12th at 8 p.m. There were present, Mayor Swift, Councillors Lovell, Taylor, Roche and Bellamy. The most important item to come before the council was a communication from the Board of Public Utility Commissioners advising that it was submitting to the town's bondholders a scheme for refunding the town debt. Under this scheme the debt would be refunded over a period of forty years, with interest payable at the rate of 3 per cent for the first ten years and at 4 per cent for the balance of the period. In previous years the town has been required to pay the sum of $6500.00 each year; under the new scheme the payments for the first ten years the annual payment will be $4678.00 and for the balance of the term $4378.00 per year. It is anticipated that the scheme will be accepted by the bondholders.

Some routine communications were dealt with. A Municipal Inspector's report was read. The report was satisfactory and the town has complimented by the chief inspector. A number of accounts were ordered paid. Financial statement for the month of July was read, and ordered incorporated in the minutes of the meeting.

EXTRA SPECIAL IMPORTANT NOTICE

School teachers and high school pupils are reminded that the new military training during September will not be required to attend military training during the first two weeks of the month, rather than the usual two weeks to be held at that time. As far as possible under war conditions, under disruption of transportation, candidates for admission to normal schools are also urged to choose the first training period. This will help to make possible their attendance at Normal school from the opening day, September 10th.

This is the gist of an appeal issue by Dr. G. F. McNally, Deputy Minister of Education, following the receipt of information from military authorities that trainees under the National Services regulations will have the privilege of choosing their own period of camp training. The first is from September 1st to September 15. The second from September 16th to September 30th.

Dr. McNally advises, following many requests, that:

1. High school students and Normal candidates should choose the first period. Only nine school days will be lost by the first named and 19 by the second named.

2. Teachers should arrange with local boards so as to avoid disruption. Where substitution can be provided, or reorganization of staff is possible, the first two or the second, as circumstances warrant, may be found best. Where schools must be closed, the first two weeks should be chosen.

T. N. ARMS OUTPUT EXCEEDS ALL HOPE

London, August, 23—Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, said in a broadcast Thursday night that the war effort speed-up has given Britain's arms industry greater in its output and far greater in its future capacity than anyone would have dared to think possible three months ago.

Britain, however, is still behind Germany in arms-making, he admitted.

"We are beginning to see daylight through the trees," he said, and cited the case of one ordnance factory which began production four months ahead of schedule.

LATE HAIL STORM DESTROY CROPS

Tuesday afternoon a bad hailstorm came up from the west and in passing over the district did much damage. The damage done varied all the way from one hundred per cent to slight damage. The storm came into the immediate district from the west and from Stine's corner, veered a little toward the south. Quite a number of farmers were hit among whom were Mrs. Simpson, H. Stine, B. Stauffer, (Home farm); W. Belzney, Bernhard, A. Young, "Mudge" Jacobs, A. R Dodds and no doubt quite a number of others. While bad hailstorms can and do some both early in the season and Tuesday's storm was a late one. Generally the last half of June all of July and the first half of August is considered the hail danger period. Tuesday there was quite a little grain cut in the area hit, but even the observers suffered considerable damage.

CHAPTER VI

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, tennis ace, dreamed of fame and glory when, as a member of the Davis cup team he would play for America. But Le falls in love with Grace Worthington, rich and socially prominent, who is willing to defy her family and marry him—if he gives up tennis. Pale Nervemen. He injures his ankle and doctors say that he will never play again. He and Grace are married and live blissfully on the salary he earns as salesman in a sporting goods shop. As his ankle heals he is tempted to return to the courts. He has signed to play as a tournament on the Sunday, Grace's family invites them both down for a week-end. Grace goes alone.

"I suppose," he said when she finally came into the living room, "that you've been chasing around again with Richard Wilgus Oh, don't try to put anything over. Frank Wheatley told me he was over at the Monterey the other evening and saw the two of you. Good God, if you want to park on anyone to and about with, why not pick on anyone besides that good for-nothing playboy?"

The corners of her mouth quivered as she spoke. "If you'll stop tirading I'll attempt an explanation though you don't deserve one."

She took a step forward, small fists clenched. "Len Rollins, did it ever occur to you that you're neglecting your wife, neglecting her shamefully? Oh, no, surely not! It wouldn't occur to the Len Rollins who rides fifty miles in a dusty train on a hot day to play a silly game of tennis. Not to the Len Rollins who bathes in the frantic applause of a grandstand packed with hero-worshippers. Oh, no, Len Rollins' wife shouldn't go out with another man because her husband's a great tennis player—and she's bored over here in love with him. You she is—out!" She stood before him, body quivering, chin high, eyes challenging.

She walked over and took a cigarette from the teakwood box on the coffee table. "If it'll make you feel better, Mother called me and asked if we'd like to join them at the Monterey. You were out at Forest Hills—it was Saturday, you'll remember! She told me to come along anyway. Dick was with them so we made it a foursome."

"The perfect matchmaker your mother!"

"I wont," she concluded evenly. "That's all. Except that I had a marvelous evening."

"Is Dick living in town?"

"Yes."

He looked forward. "Tell me, Grace, have you been spending all these evenings with him—when I haven't been here?"

"Not all."

"I wouldn't have you go out with him again. And that goes whether your parents are present or not."

"And what am I supposed to do Mr. Rollins, sit here twiddling my thumbs every evening, including Saturdays and Sundays? No thanks! If you can't find time to take me out occasionally I'll find somebody who will."

* * *

Mr Arthur Justin's secretary stood just inside the door of his paneled office until the sales manager looked up from his desk. Then she announced "Mrs. Rollins to see you, Mr Justin. Says she has an appointment."

"Oh yes Show her in, please."

Justin rose as Grace entered and took her outstretched hand. It's nice meeting you Mr Justin You've been so good to Len—and to me." She pecked off her gloves. "I'm not interrupting?"

"Not at all," Justin replied, offering her a cigarette.

Grace leaned forward "I've come to see you about Len Mr. Justin, she said. "You know, of course, about Len's ankle—the accident which resulted in his coming here and applying for a position?"

"Yes."

"Well, you know he's game back to tennis playing. It will ruin him in the end. I'd like to see him make something of his life—something real and worth while."

"You want me," Justin offered, "to try to persuade him to give up the game?"

"Yes if you possibly can. He'll probably resent you talking to him about it."

"Oh, I don't know about that, Len's a fairly sensible young man."

"Not where tennis is concerned. You don't know his fanaticism." She paused and Talbot's executive waited for her to continue.

"Mr. Justin," she asked, "is there some branch store out of town a long distance away, to which you could transfer Len?"

"No," he said, rubbing his chin with the back of his hand as he spoke, "it's that bad."

"Not yet, but I am afraid it will be."

"I see." Justin said quietly. "You have a better chance if he were not so close to Forest Hills, Easthampton and the rest of the whirl-tennis set, eh, what? How would Indiana do?"

"Indiana?"

"Yes, Indianapolis. The manager of the sports department out there is about ready to be pensioned off. A young, energetic, ambitious chap like Len would fit in very well. It would be merely a trial, of course, but—"

"You're wonderfully kind—"

He answered, "I'm glad to be your ally. I'll speak to Len this afternoon and the offer that will be made is one he will find extremely difficult to reject, I assure you."

"Thank you," Grace replied quietly It means so much to both of us."

* * *

As Len threw his hat into the locker after luncheon Weir said, "Justin wants to see you and there's a letter for you over at the counter."

The letter was addressed in a scrawly spaced typewriting on rich stationery. Puzzled, he turned it over. On the sealed flap was embossed "Dayton P. Richmond." He opened the letter and read.

My dear Rollins

"First of all, congratulations on your successful comeback! I've been reading about it in the papers.

"Second, my thanks again for the sound training you gave Bob. He's developing into a real player, they tell me.

"Now, as to the chief reason for my writing you. There is a company in Richmond that wants to buy most of my leather goods, including saddles and harnesses and the like. I intended to go over myself this summer to get some new equipment, but I find I'm too tied up to make the trip it occurred to me that if you should go over this Davis Cup team you might take care of this for me—at a fair compensation, of course.

"Will you let me know?

Sincerely

"Dayton Richmond"

There it was again. And he didn't want to play on the team, didn't want to ...

He read the letter again. "At a fair compensation . . . What might a Richmond possibly give him for such a commission? Enough, probably, to allow him to take a leave of absence from Talbot's if he wanted to. Of course he didn't know a thing about saddles and that sort of thing, but Grace had ridden since she'd been a child; judging the values of leather would be easy for her.

That was it! That's what they'd do—make a trip to Europe together! It would be a splendid vacation. They had been away, just taking it easy, playing life. Certainly Justin would give him a leave whenever Justin himself had been away and would have offered him that manager's job in Indianapolis, How gay, Justin. He'd be for it, all right.

That's what they needed, he and Grace—a good trip. Needed to get away alone together. It would give them both a fresh grip, tend also to draw them closer together. Lately they'd been drifting. His fault, of course But he'd make it up to her.

They'd be together, not only while cruising, but on the other side as well. They'd spend a week in London, He'd play at Wimbledon. Then they'd go on to Paris, maybe run over to Cap matches There was enough money and there would be that "compensation" from Richmond. The U. S. T. A. would take care of his expenses as a member of the team in London and Paris. Then he'd be finished with tennis until next spring and he and Grace would resume their former settled, sane home life.

That evening Len hurried home, making plans. Grace said as she raised her lips to his: "But I thought you were practicing."

"I called it off. Something far more important. I wanted to talk to you about it as soon as possible." His voice was eager, forbidding enthusiastic.

Justin, then, had been successful! Her heart beat quickly, happily, as he told her to him. She was wrong, then, in believing as she always had, that she must lean to him then the courts! But she must never let him know that it was she who was responsible for the Indiana job.

"Oh, tell me what it is, Len! Was it the office, Mr. Justin, or what?"

"Oh, you," he said, laughing. "I had a talk with Justin today. I'll tell you about that later—

He stood, her mind in a turmoil. If it were not Justin's offer that had made him so jubilant, what then? Her eyes, wide and frightened, watched his hand come from his pocket triumphantly holding a letter. Drunkenly he handed it to her. She took it with a shaking hand and read. Her heart, her life seemed broken in small pieces when she had finished it.

She knew that the crisis, which had been imminent ever since Len's fall from the ladder, had arrived.

* * *

"Then you are going to Europe, Len?" she said.

"We are, Grace. We're going together—a vacation we'll never forget."

She laughed hookedly: "Vacation! All that music—you won't get off to if you running around on tennis courts, Mr. Thank you not for me, Len, I'm afraid you're quite hopeless. I don't like it."

"Lost," he defended hotly. "What do you mean lost? You're just being unreasonable. I'm trying to give you a chance to make some side money, have a good vacation, and for me to play my cards; all at the same time I don't see why you should raise such an unfounded fuss over it."

"Unfounded, is it? Len, I'm not sportsmanship, that's what it is. Doesn't it, of I—"

"Don't stop, Len. Say it. If you weren't married, then what?"

She put her self calmly. "All right. If you insist on making an issue of it, then I will talk straight! Look me in the shoulder. If I weren't married to a spoilsport my life would be much happier than it is."

"You'd be able to play as much tennis as you wanted to, wouldn't you, Len, if it weren't for me? Isn't that what you mean?"

"That is the only thing we've ever had any trouble about; we seem to get along well enough in every other way. Grace, why are you so set against my playing?"

"I know what it will do to you in the end if you keep up this way, Len. It'll ruin you."

"But it won't," he cut in. "How many thousand times have I told you that already?"

"It has begun even now," she said. "It has not. I'll quit when we get back, honestly I will, Gracie."

"No you won't."

"You're not fair. You misinterpret, twist things to fit your own prejudices. I don't twist things I'm opposed to as they'll help bolster my argument. Take your family, for instance. And Richard Whyte."

"Please! They don't enter into this at all."

"But they do. They've been poisoning your mind against me; at least, against my playing. Oh, perhaps not directly, but indirectly. You won't you will spend a week-end out there without being somewhat influenced by it all, without perhaps without that you were part of that life again."

She wearily gave it up for you, and I don't ever care about going back to it, unless—there is an alternative."

CANADIAN NATIONAL

CANADIAN RED CROSS

Five thousand parcels of food per week for British Prisoners of War in Germany, to be purchased in Canada for shipment overseas, are asked for in a cable received from London by the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Unofficial statements made by officers of the Society indicate that the Canadian Red Cross will not hesitate in adding this important new branch to its main service.

In making public the cabled request, Mrs. H. P. Plumptree, chairman of War Activities, said, "This is a great thing for Canada. It is another important job which the people of the Canada can do in relieving the British Red Cross of some of the tremendous load it is carrying. Britain needs all the food she can produce and we can provide these food parcels from our abundant supplies."

The Financing of this arrangement, when the Central Council of the Society meets in Toronto early next month. The cost of the 5,000 parcels per week is estimated at about $500,000 a year. While the Red Cross funds are asked for at the present time, it is felt that if the experiment proves a success the number will be greatly increased. The parcels of food from Canada would be distributed in Germany under International Red Cross supervision.

It is understood that if the London Red Cross does agree to supply the parcels, the British Red Cross will send over to Canada a representative of their packing department to supervise the packing in Canada. The Canadian Red Cross has for some time been sending food supplies to England to be packed there and sent to prisoners of War in Germany. These include some Canadians who enlisted with the British forces, made by the Royal Air Forces.

SUGAR BEETS IN MANITOBA

Sugar to sweeten the disposition of Canadian citizens has long been produced from beets grown on the rich clay loams of Kent, Ontario, and processed in the Chatham plant of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company, as well as on the fertile irrigated lands of Southern Alberta for the Canadian Sugar Factories at Raymond. This year farmers of the Red River Valley are having their first experience in commercial sugar beet culture on an area totalling 30,000 acres, within a radius of about 50 miles from Winnipeg and the million-dollar plant of the New Manitoba Sugar Company, now nearing completion.

During the latter part of June the writer, B. Leslie Emslie, visited several farms in the vicinity of Winnipeg, where the young beets, grown from treated seed, fertilized and favored by a plentiful moisture supply, had made exceptionally good growth and were showing more promise than the grower wished, perhaps! The "check-over" system of planting deposits the seed at intervals of 18 inches, so that cultivation between the rows may be made in both directions. If the planter could be adjusted to sow only a single ball—containing usually three seeds—to a hill the problem of thinning would be simplified. But in most of the fields inspected three or four balls to a hill had been dropped, necessitating the clump of from 9 to 12 young plants which could be separated only by hand and that with difficulty

In one field of 80 acres six workmen on their knees were at the heavy job of thinning. At the rate they were going it seemed they would be a long job till fall; but probably reinforcements brought up. The owners of this field could reasonably claim to have just a trial plot to find out the cost of growing beets. They had invested in expensive machinery, including a large tractor equipped with four pairs of discs in front, which straddled and spared the rows, and five beet behind which cultivated between the rows.

In another field a few rows had been sown by the straightforward method, and here the young plants were well spaced and could be thinned much more easily. The experience of this year will doubtless lead to some change in methods next year. It can be predicted that many will not repeat the experiment. Possibly the job of beet growing in Manitoba will be taken over largely by those of continental European origin, who are accustomed to scraping acquaintance with the soil and can raise their own help. May the Manitoba sugar industry prosper and not vraste its sweetness on the desert air!

A FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY—

AS MUCH AS any one single thing, the wheat crop of the prairies throughout the years have made Canada. We do not belittle Canada's manufacturing establishments, her fisheries, her lumber trade or fruit from orchards or minerals from under the ground. All have for many years of course, blended together to make a diversified Canada. But of them all, wheat, the golden grain from the prairies, have made Canada famous, have brought to her shores and within her boundaries hundreds of thousands of people and millions of dollars. These aided by a fertile soil and human energy and ingenuity, have combined to create and distribute untold wealth throughout the past half century. We heard political speakers say some years ago from a Tofield platform that, in the political lobbies of the east the chief topic of conversation was the western wheat crop, not who would be elected. The concern of the eastern financier, manufacturer, importer and many others who lived as much by their wits as by their labors, was not so much what party label western members would have but rather how many millions bushels of golden grain western farmers could send rolling eastward. The farmer was the backbone of the country, the salt of the earth, and a lot of other fine words done up in fancy phrases. But times have changed. Wheat, temporarily at least have been robbed of its power. The machinations of evil men in Europe have, both by political tyranny and war, prevented the nourishing products of our fields reaching millions of hungry mouths. The result is that backed up onto its own spheres, millions of bushels of grain lay awaiting a market that is, due to lack of storage, unable to immediately absorb it. The plight of the farmer because of this, need not be emphasized here. We have mentioned before. What is also emphasizing is that an industry which has contributed so much to the Dominion of Canada during the past fifty years, is now finding itself in difficulties, and is looking toward the government of the country which it has greatly helped to build up, expecting aid. Western agriculture is asking for, and expecting, an adequate monetary advance. So far, to their requests, the farmers of the West have had this reply from J. G. Gardiner, "We are providing the farmer with every dollar it is possible to get for him under the circumstances," and he added that the responsibility of the provinces and municipalities was apparent under our constitution. The words "under our constitution" are significant. And to link the responsibilities of the province and municipalities to them makes them more awe inspiring still.

We would not for a moment try to belittle the responsibilities of the provinces and municipalities under our constitution, but as those responsibilities so obviously exist, there should be a certain liberty of action to enable the provinces and municipalities to live up to them. We seem to remember the oft repeated statement that to the federal authorities belong the powers of finance and to the provinces belong a certain degree of provincial legislation. Over and over again we were clearly told the provinces could not issue money.

We are not at all enamoured of every financial cure-all. We believe ordinary finance is hard enough to understand and control without mixing it up with ideas born of mental pyrations. But here's the rub. If the farmer is being provided with every dollar that it is possible for him to get under the circumstances, and the number provided is so woefully inadequate, why be so insistent regarding preventing the provincial authorities from issuing a few of their own. Even a provincial bank—happily perhaps —was denied.

It would appear that unless the federal authorities give financial assistance to farmers as advances on grain, the clamor for more financial control in the west by westerners will increase. Federal legislation now provides for the purchase of the wheat crop by the Wheat Board at a minimum price. To advance a substantial portion of this at the actual grain held by the farmer should not impose such a terrific financial strain on the dominion treasury. There would be some technical difficulty, but even this is not by any means insurmountable. To come to the wheat industry's aid in its hour of trial is only a just reward for the benefits which during past years, the wheat industry has conferred upon the dominion as a whole.

THE FOLLY OF COMPLACENCY—

". . . . Certainly the experience of Europe since Munich makes it plain that wishful thinking is disastrous, and it is unquestionably one of the factors on which Mr. Hitler firmly relies. He has consistently acted on the assumption that each of his intended victims would be confident that the worst could not happen in his particular case, and that, in consequence, he would fail to prepare sufficiently to meet the Hitler challenge.—New York Herald Tribune.

Farmer Hawkins was complaining to his wife that he could find no old clothes to put on the scarecrow.

"Well," said she helpfully, "there's that flashy suit son wore at college last year."

"Yeah, but I want to scare the crows, not make 'em laugh."—Grit.

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, August 26:—In view of the wheat crisis, the provincial government has waived prior claims for taxes, seed grain and other advances, thus allowing producers to purchase on dom's liens, twine credits and harvest expenses. This was announced by Hon. Lucien Maynard Saturday last. He urged farmers, pending any better measures, to make full use of Alberta legislature to secure credits for harvesting expenses. And according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, should a certain plan devised by the Alberta Government be allowed implementation by Ottawa, "we are convinced it would solve the problem immediately."

* * *

According to Hon. E. C. Manning, it is impossible for provincial and municipal governments to assume the full burden of farm relief, as has been doubled by Ottawa authorities in regard to the matter. In a telegram to Prime Minister King Tuesday last, he urged that the Bank of Canada assume the role of issuing sufficient credits to fill present needs. Unless some method of financing the farmers is devised, the west faces a great calamity, he declared.

Establishment of a canning plant at the Provincial Mental Hospital, Ponoka, has resulted in large savings to food bills, it is reported by Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, Minister of Health. Operating one of the largest gardens in the province—45 acres— a total of 1,000 lbs. of vegetables, 600 tons of turnips and the potato yield from 67 acres has been utilized since 1939. Using one-gallon cans, six tons of rhubarb and 24 tons of other vegetables were canned. First year savings offset the original cost, including construction work. Only two items were factory made, and one of these is leased from the manufacturer. All equipment was improvised or manufactured by hospital employees. J. D. J. McDonald, Business Superintendent, supervised the new venture.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Manager "The Crop Testing Plan."

Samples representing some 50,000 farmers fields of wheat, and sown at over 40 "Crop Testing Plan" District Plots in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, have now been analysed by competent specialists.

As most a number of farmers have been discovered in each district whose crops were sufficiently true-to-variety to classify as "Crop Testing Plan" "A". This means that these cleaned and sown by farmers; all of farmers should have grain to sell to which conscientiously has helped to increase the quality of the wheat grown enough to be used as seed by anyone on our prairies.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

We all know we are in a fight for liberty to a finish. Do the Pool Officials? If the Pool officials do then why try and capitalize on the war? This is no time for such abominable tactics

Why mix up knowledge of momentous national decisions with Pool propaganda such as recently appeared under the headings of "Humanity Has Struck Its Tents" and "Eternal Vigilance Is The Price Of Liberty"?

If the officials really desire to give Pool members worthwhile information and believe that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" we would suggest two questions that must be frequently in the minds of former Pool farmers.

When will a payment be made on the $29,000,000 that was taken for Elevator and Commercial Reserves?
Do these officials realize that not one cent has been paid in interest on that money for ten long years?

There are many more questions that might be asked but there is a war on.

URGENT NEED FOR LOANS ON FARM STORED GRAIN

The point that needs special emphasis in discussing loans on farm-stored grain, says Pioneer Grain Company in a review just published, is that such loans do not constitute a hand-out to the farmer, and need not impose any increased financial burden upon Canada, or upon the Dominion government itself. Through the Canadian Wheat Board Act, the Dominion government had already contracted to accept delivery of every bushel of wheat grown in 1940 at a minimum price based on 70 cents per bushel for One Northern in store Fort William or Vancouver. The farmer is entitled to that price and will eventually receive it. He would have received it immediately if storage space had been available to permit delivery. From his point of view, loans on wheat simply a partial advance against the minimum price.

At a conference held in Winnipeg under the chairmanship of Premier Bracken of Manitoba, the review mentions, certain proposals were given approval. These do not from the point of view of wheat finance in the farm-stored grain, but they are nevertheless proposals and were put forward by a responsible group after due consideration of the alternatives.

Whatever is done should be done soon. There is increasing anxiety in Western Canada among farmers and business people generally and there is individual cases of very real hardship. Admittedly the problem is a difficult one, but the difficulties are technical rather than political and therefore should not prove insuperable. After all the Pioneer Grain company points out, the farmer is not asking for additional assistance; he is asking only for an advance of part of the minimum price on grain which, through no fault of his own, he has been able to deliver into licensed storage.

CANADIAN PEACHES NOW ON THE MARKET; CROP OF 754,000 BUSHELS

A preliminary estimate places the 1940 crop of peaches at 754,000 bushels of which Ontario will account for 568,000 bushels, about 190,000 bushels less than 1939, and British Columbia orchards are expected to yield 185,000 bushels, about 2,000 bushels more than last year.

The early varieties of peaches are now on the market and this Canadian grown fruit will be available at reasonable prices until late September or early October. While this year's crop is about 191,000 bushels less than in 1940 it is 103,000 bushels above the five year average 1934-1938. In 1939 the crop of 935,000 bushels was the second largest produced in Canada. The largest was 1,378,000 bushels in 1938 of which Ontario accounted for 952,000 bushels and British Columbia, 92,000 bushels.

Lethbridge a City of Many Trees, Clear Water and Brilliant Lights

With a speed only equalled by air travel, the editor and wife, due to the courtesy of the C.P.R., attended the annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association held at Lethbridge on Friday and Saturday of last week. Leaving home Thursday morning we were back at Tofield for Sunday dinner and in the meantime had spent ten minutes on Jasper Avenue, Edmonton, Thursday night, several hours in Calgary, which is about the same proportion out as was cut, around Banff, Alta., which frequently can be seen from the train racing as to quality, but repair gangs were observed working at both northern and southern ends.

The run from Calgary to Lethbridge was made after nightfall, arrival at Lethbridge being made in the early hours of the morning. This was our first visit to Lethbridge and the first impression was that it was a very clean city, exceptionally well lighted. In the main sections of the city they use mercury vapor lamps for street lighting. These give a brilliant white light which is a remarkably electric light and does not make ordinary electric light bulbs dull in comparison.

Friday morning was devoted strictly to convention business. At 12:15 the delegates with their wives were guests of the Calgary Power Company a la luncheon. Cornhill M.D. Council Met Last Friday

On Friday, August 30th, a regular meeting of M. D. of Cornhill Council was held. Generally the council meetings are held on the second Friday of each month, but partly due to the harvest season it was decided at the July meeting to hold the August meeting on August 30th, and then hold the next meeting on the second Friday in October. This arrangement eliminated one meeting and at the same time put the August meeting approximately midway between the July and Oct-ber meetings.

A detailed report of last Friday's meeting will appear next week.

CHAPTER VII

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, tennis ace, dreamed of helping win the Davis Cup for American. Then he fell in love with Grace Worthington, rich and socially prominent. Grace was willing to defy her family and marry him if he would give up tennis. He did—partly for his love for Grace and partly because of his badly injured ankle. He and Grace were married Later his ankle improved so much that the doctors told him that he could play, and he gets a chance to join the Davis Cup team. He tries to persuade Grace to go to Europe with him.

He took her hands in his, pleaded. "Please come across with me, Gracie. Don't you see—can't you feel—that I need you?"

"Then you've decided definitely to go even if I don't?"

"But you'll go, darling."

"You're evading the question, Len. Will you go even if I don't?"

His expression changed suddenly. "I'm the man of this family," he said in a low tone, "and you...And you're going to do what I want, or else. I'm going to Europe. And I'm going to play on the United States Davis Cup team. And you're going with me. Now, let's cut out all the nonsense."

She asked, "What was the job Mr. Justin spoke to me about."

"Something about managing the sports department of a store in Indianapolis. It will wait, of course, until we come back."

"It would mean a promotion?

"Yes. But I'm not much interested. I want to get into the other line—selling. More money in it."

She moved out of his arms, standing at him dumbly, for she knew this was the end.

• • •

She came toward him slowly, a bit hesitantly, to where he sat behind the wheel of Charlie Hughes' Ford roadster. He threw the side door open and she climbed in next to him.

He said, "Three past two weeks have seemed like two years. I've missed you, Grace." The car free of the Worthington grounds, headed toward the open ribbon of the smooth road. "You want to continue like this?"

"You are going, then?" She kept watching the road.

"Yes. But suppose I stayed home and took that job out West?"

"I'd go with you if you still wanted me."

"Of course I'd want you. I fell in love with you the moment I saw you. I'll always be in love with you—no one else. Why isn't it possible for me to have you and still play?"

"We've gone over all that before; let's not talk about it."

"When I come back, what then?"

"It will all be over if you go."

"Then," he said, "this is the last time?"

She did not appear to hear him. He was only vaguely aware of the rapid motion, of the soft fanning wind. He was driving fast, the accelerator pushed way down. But he did not realize it. There was a sharp curve with a caution to motorists on it—forcing them that the road was under repair. But he never saw it. He was thinking: How silly How and close and yet how far away she is from me. A few feet only—yet miles, miles—

The last time. Divorce—he could return to his old life—he could be rich too — fifty thousand dollars, to start. He'd never have to work again. He could invest it and live happily on the income. Happily? Without Grace?

The light car bumped, swerved, went on; his foot remained pressed to the accelerator, his hands fixed on the wheel. Too late he saw the bend in the road and the man in the dirty overalls waving a red flag.

Another car came around the bend. He jammed on the brakes. A huge bale yawned ahead. It was close, too close. He cut the wheel sharply, foot still on brakes, then he heard the sharp tatatat of Grace's breath as the roadster careened crazily toward the side of the road. He was conscious of a short, frightened scream at his side. And then nothing.

Overalled legs rose above and he found him; something wet and salty was on his mouth. He put his hand to his face and drew it away covered with blood. One of the overalled fellows kneeled down beside him and began wiping his face and head with a cool, wet cloth. "All right, buddy?"

He nodded. He felt weak, shaken. He sat up, his eyes fastened on the laborer's blood face, looked around, then jumped to his feet, eyes wild. "Where's Grace?"

"She's all right, buddy. Take it easy."

He staggered, but regained his balance. There was a dull feeling in the pit of his stomach: she cut in his mouth burned and would not stop bleeding.

"Where is she?" he demanded, his wild glance sweeping over the group.

"She's all right," the man repeated. "That car that was coming around the bend when you—they took her down the road. But she's all right."

"Where'd they take her?"

"Down the road. There's a hospital."

Len glanced at the Ford lying in the ditch torn and crumpled, then at the men.

"Who'll take me?" His mouth hurt when he spoke.

One of them wearing khaki said: "Okay, I'll take you."

At the hospital they would not let him see her. He was her husband! Harshly if he was her husband he would understand. Mrs. Rollins needed immediate attention.

"I'll wait." he said. "Where's a phone?"

The nurse nodded toward a desk. "When you've finished," she said looking at his mouth, "you'd better have that cut stitched up." But he didn't hear her.

They came down when he said good-by, and for the first time since they had left him the coolness that had become so strong a barrier between them was gone. There was something frightened, desperate even, in the way she wished him "good luck." It startled and puzzled him a little. With her one good arm she clung to him, held his head close to her pressed her lips against his with abandon. Her face was wet against his. But when he drew away to look at her she smiled. He kissed her again lingeringly, passionately.

And then he was walking down the short hall and out into the street, experiencing a sudden wave of self-disgust that was new to him. It remained, disturbing, condemning, while the nurse's words crying over and over again, "red, red, red."

He did not even look back toward the hospital, but continued swiftly and surely toward the train that would take him to New York and the boat that was sailing at midnight for Hamburg.

• • •

The scene did not seem blue, the cool salt water was lacking in the sweet and invigorating qualities he had been used to possessed, the stars at night were dim.

In the deck chair beside him reclined not Grace. But Dan Clark. "—used so you go out and bust up Charlie's Hello Rough," Dan was saying. "Why, you mug, suppose you were in that hospital with your wife. Then what? Can chances for the cup? Ha, blooey."

Jimmy Sturgeon joined them. "Any word from your wife, Rollins?" the non-playing captain asked. "How she's getting along or anything?"

Len shook his head. "I imagine she's all right, though, or I would have heard. Thanks."

Sturgeon moved out down on the edge of Clark's chair. Staring out into the ocean he said: "One of you two guys has to upset the apple cart over there. If either of you can manage to bust through I think we'll bring back the cup."

RED CROSS AMBULANCES ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

Over one hundred ambulances donated to the Canadian Red Cross have arrived in England and are now being used in various parts of the country.

A cable received in Toronto from London last night stated, "The Ambulances were needed urgently."

Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner, commented, "Acceding to word from our London Office, not a moment was lost in putting them to good use."

The ambulances were given by individuals, business firms, service clubs and other organizations from one end of Canada to the other, in response to an appeal from England. To date, more than 175 have been contributed at a cost of $1,750.00. Director Routley also reported that, in response to an urgent cable from overseas, thirty thousand blankets have been shipped to England recently. In all, to said, forty-five thousand blankets have been sent. Well over eighty thousand blankets were contributed to the Canadian Red Cross in response to a nation-wide appeal week ago.

SAFF STARTS MY TEETH STRONGER THAN A YEAR AGO

Ottawa:—The Royal Canadian Navy is now nearly six times stronger than it was a year ago, according to a statement made by Hon. Angus L. MacDonald, Minister of National Defence for the Navy. In inaugurating his press conference The Minister gave an encouraging report of activities since the start of the war, dwelling on the Navy's expansion, on the high quality of its work performed while seeing service with the Royal Navy and passing long enough to hit at Nazi planted rumours concerning ship movements.

Expansion: The Canadian fleet has grown from 13 vessels, a year ago, to 450 vessels now commissioned for active service. During the coming year 16 more ships will swell this total to 515. These include three destroyers. More than 15,000 men are busy in Canadian shipyards pushing the shipbuilding program ahead of schedule.

The personnel of the Navy has grown from 13,000, a year ago, to 95,000 men. More are being trained every day to meet growing needs.

Work Finished: A cablegram from Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London was read by the Minister. It payed high tribute to the units of the Canadian Navy in action with the Royal Navy, noting the British Admiralty's praise for the work of Canadian destroyers in [illegible] duties, rescue work and for the convoy of ships.

The men of the Canadian Navy serving in units of the Royal Navy pass the officers in training. Higher hand were singled out for special praise. Over 600 men of the R.C.N. are with the British fleet.

Reasons Spiked: Rumours to the effect that the enemy broadcasts departures of ships and convoys from Canadian ports have never been authenticated. Planned by Nazi agents, these rumours are meant to tell authorities into relaxing censorship rules.

ALL FIREARMS MUST BE REGISTERED BY RULING

Regulations which formerly applied only to revolvers and pistols have been extended to order-in-council to include all firearms, and such weapons as rifles and shotguns are no exception.

Rifles and shotguns must be registered not later than September 15 at municipal or provincial police stations or with the R.C.M.P. Purchase and sale of rifles and shotguns are now subject to permit from police authorities

Non-resident aliens who desire to import firearms for sporting purposes are obliged to secure permits from the Commissioner of the R.C.M. Police, at Ottawa. Resident aliens who desire to repossess weapons surrendered, following an order-in-council of June 10 must also secure a permit from the R.C.M.P. Commissioner in Ottawa.

"TWELVE O'CLOCK, AND ALL'S WELL"—

(From "The Constitution", Atlanta, Ga.)

THERE MUST be today millions of spirits that walk, bravely, across the length and breath of beleaguered Britain. The spirits of those men of the ancient race who gave to her the greatness that is knowing miraculous resurgence as once more, the fate of human liberty is laid upon her hands and hearts and courage.

It is good to think that, among those spirits, the wakeful watchmen of the night, carrying their lanterns to light the dark hours and crying as they walk, "Twelve o'clock and all's well." All's well with Britain, as her sons and daughters stand, undaunted—a final rampart to the ruthless foe.

All's well because the tongue of Chaucer, of Shakespeare, of Milton, of Keats, of Shelley, of Kipling, of Tennyson, of Barrie, of the King James translation of the Scriptures, can never be the tongue of an enslaved race.

All's well because the blood of Frobisher, of Drake, of Raleigh, of Cromwell, of Wellington, of Nelson, of the millions of fighting men who have died to keep Britain free, can never course through the veins of an enslaved people.

All's well because the passion for human liberty and human rights that inspired the men of Runnymede, that set alloys the hearts of men who dared their all that tyranny should be crushed, that forced British democracy to its knees each, side by side and step by step with the growth of empire, can never be quenched under the oppression of any tyrant.

All's well in Britain because the common people are aroused, because from the ordinary, average people, from whom England's greatest have ever come, there still arises that determination, that bulldog stubbornness, that unconquerable spirit which cannot be enslaved.

The wisest seers among men cannot say what yet is to come. But this all men may know: There is a very lowly heart of civilization and of freedom threatened by an obscene force, an indecent return to savagery sparked by unnormal ambition. The shadow today lies over an ancient and noble land. It darkens the graves of poets and philosophers and martyrs. It hangs, threatening over the very birthplace of human liberty and human progress.

The vultures soar over England's green fields and stately houses, they sweep upon the humble cots and quiet hills.

He on this side can know little of the one factor that must, in the final accounting, decide the issue. That is, the spirit of people awakened and determined. There must be a marvelous story, being told on the pages of history, in Britain today. The spectacle of a people arising as one, to defend to death the land they hold as dear, next to a tremendous thing to watch.

Even Hitler has been awed. What other interpretation can be put upon his petulant and ridiculous complaint that "home guards" can be only visitors of the rank of war, to be shot against a wall when captured? The world has never witnessed such absurd effrontery as an appeal, by this man, to any code of war. He, and Germany, of all races, have most ruthlessly and heretlessly scorned the codes of war, of honor, of humanity, of human decency, wherever it served their foul purpose.

Hitler cannot conquer Britain. We who know the history and the spirit and the meaning of British civilization, we who know the courage that arms her people, we who know the love of country that fills their souls, know that no invader can stay alive on English soil so long as one Englishman remains alive to strike a blow for freedom.

There can be but one outcome when the British people have arisen, moved by a single impulse, to defend

"this royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise;
This fortress, built by Nature for herself,
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world!
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall
Or as a moat defensive to a house—
Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm,
This England.

The vultures gather, but still the spirit of the ancient watchman walks in England and still his brave voice resurrects.

"Twelve o'clock, and all's well!"

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, September 5:—Praise for the Alberta system of welcoming and placing British "newcomers" has been accorded unanimously by provincial child welfare officials. They are busy people these days, with new arrivals from war-torn Britain reaching the city several times weekly. Considered fine types of British children the newcomers are keen to enter Canada life, and go to Canadian schools. While expressing amazement at many things, the children are perhaps mostly amazed at the sheer speed of training planes over the city. After watching British Hurricanes streak studies relating to set, land and air problems including personnel and material.

"It will consider in the broad sense the defence of the north half of the Western Hemisphere.

"The Prime Minister and President have discussed the mutual problems of defence in relation to the safety of Canada and the United States

"It has been agreed that a permanent joint board on defence shall be set up at once by the two countries.

"The permanent joint board on defence shall commence immediate

A total of 366,440 persons entered the parks as compared with 323,818 for the corresponding period of 1939. Attendance at Jasper National Park reached an all-time high, with 19,990 visitors entering through the Eastern gateway, in addition to 14,000 cars and 50,000 passengers entering via the Banff Lake Louise mountain road.

Commencing September 25, the Canadian Red Cross will campaign for $6,000,000 throughout the Dominion, it is announced. "Almost all the $5,000,000 contributed during our campaign last November has been spent meeting emergency calls during the past year," says Norman Somerville, national chairman. The Department of National Defence recently asked the Red Cross to assist in providing eight new convalescent hospitals in Canada.

in addition to being an excellent driver, was well informed and ready regarding the country we were passing through, but on many other things as well Travelling companions included Mrs. Moore of the Strathmore Standard and Mr. Charlie Clark of the High River Times. Passing out of Lethbridge the road wound through some very rough and hilly country and we were wondering how a city could be built upon a valley like this when in a few minutes we passed into good agricultural territory. We travelled by way of Macleod and Pincher Creek. There was much stubble indicating that cutting had already been completed. Strip farming was very much in evidence large areas being devoted to this type of agriculture. The crops that were still uncut were somewhat shorter and thinner than ours here. Near Pincher Creek there was a valley that looked very promising Mr. Knowlton told us of a wealthy United States citizen who owned land in this area. Of a philanthropic turn of mind he had done much to help the district including the building of a community hall. We also passed a house on which the owner lived on the ground floor and kept chickens on the second. We were told the house was scrupulously clean below There was a door on the second storey from which ran a short chute through which sweepings were conveyed to a wagon below

Arriving at Waterton about 10-30 the party was welcomed by Senator Buchanan and then embarked aboard a boat for a two hour ride down the lake. This was very enjoyable the scenery being both rugged and majestic at the same time giving one a feeling of repose. It was here that we crossed the boundary and disembarked on the American side for ten minutes. Returning, the party was entertained to lunch at the Prince of Wales Hotel at Waterton by the Lethbridge Herald. The hotel commands a wonderful view of the lake There is a very large window through which one views an expanse of water hemmed in by towering heights. The whole scene both interior and exterior was very picturesque, even to the Alpine costumes of the waitresses. After lunch the Great Northern Railway Company presented a special Indian programme

At 3-30 we left Waterton for Lethbridge going by way of Cardston. We stopped to view the Temple of the Latter Day Saints there. This is a beautiful edifice. Erected upon what was once a bald hill it is surrounded by terraces replete with strawberry and flowers. There are eight very beautiful blue spruce trees, two at each corner These are very effective against the white stone of the temple An attendent gave us to understand that we would see more in that they never entered without first removing their shoes as the carpets inside are too luxurious to be trod upon. The temple cost approximately one million dollars and took ten years to build.

Returning to Lethbridge in the few minutes at our disposal we took a short drive through the newer portion of the city. Several new and fine buildings Mr Knowlton good-bye handed us the train and found the [illegible] of Lethbridge are a credit to many cities. clean streets, brilliant lights and wonderful beauty

THESE THINGS ARE WORTH WHILE

1 The Wheat Pools introduced wheat price stabilization as an innovation in Western Canada. It is now a permanent government policy.

2 It cost the Pools $32 millions to teach Canada that her wheat producers must have prices protection. The Pools are paying that money back. Speaking for the Alberta Wheat Pool it can be said the price stabilization of 1929-30 will not cost the province a single cent.

3 The government Wheat Board was formed after a lengthy campaign towards that end by the Wheat Pools and farmer organizations. From 1923 up until a couple of years ago the grain trade fought like tigers against the suggestion of a Wheat Board.

4 The Wheat Board and other government wheat price stabilization measures have added at least $300 millions to the income of the west in the past ten years.

5 Farmers could get little or nothing for their wheat today but for the Wheat Board.

6 Pool elevators have held down profit margins and protected grain producers in many ways. The trade now admits there are no large profits in the grain business as in years gone by.

7 Prior to the erection of Pool elevators, profits were large. In one year the profits in grain overages alone in terminal elevators at Fort William-Port Arthur were over $5 millions. One firm made over $0 per cent in its terminal elevators in a single year (Price-Waterhouse Report). These huge profits cannot be made to-day — thanks to the Wheat Pools!

8 When grain producers patronize Pool elevators they aid in strengthening a farmer-owned cooperative which is constantly battling for their welfare. Also they build up an equity for themselves in a useful organization. A farmer might deliver a million bushels to a line elevator company and he would not have a cent's worth of equity in the concern, nor a word to say in its operation. Remember you get the very best and fairest treatment from Pool elevators.

9 Ten years ago the organization of Pool elevators were practically bankrupt and bonded for the whole crop-huge. To-day Pool elevators are in excellent financial shape, rapidly closing off all indebtedness and developing plans to devote surplus earnings to service. This is the last thing the opposition wants to see done.

10 Pool elevators have made a genuine contribution to grain producers, as outlined above, and one that can be measured in millions of dollars.

11 If at all possible grain producers should see that their grain goes to a Pool elevator. The undisguised venom of the opposition shows that Pool elevators are succeeding in their useful and necessary objectives — the consolidating and benefitting of all farmers in Western Canada

NEW BOOKLET DESCRIBES ELK ISLAND NATIONAL PARK

Ft. Lloyd National Park, Alberta, the home of one of Canada's largest herds of buffalo or bison, is attractively described and illustrated in a booklet just issued by the Dominion National Parks Bureau at Ottawa. Not only is the park a haven for wild animals, the provincial capital, this interesting area of 81 square miles was established in 1906 to preserve from extinction the wide deer and elk of the region. Following the purchase of the Pablo herd of buffalo in 1907 by the Dominion Government, the first shipments of buffalo were made to Elk Island Park, which is completely fenced. From these has grown the magnificent herd of more than 1,100 head which today roams the meadows and woodlands of the park.

Information concerning this attractive wild life sanctuary and playground is contained in the booklet, "Elk Island National Park", which may be obtained without charge from the National Parks Bureau, Ottawa, or any tender, not necessarily accepted.

COMMUNICATION

Tofield, Alberta.

Dear Sir:—

I hope you will allow me space in your valuable paper in the form of an open letter to the farmers of Alberta, and also in answer to "Smoky Screen", an ad inserted by the Line Elevator Association.

"A Corn is Never Sore until Stepped on."

If anything should be called a "Smoky Screen" the business of the Line Elevators should be. The farmers never get any account of their operations during the year. Mr. Farmer do not forget, that you and I have both all these Line Elevators also, ain't later nothing to say about how they are to be run. The Pool Elevators are owned and operated entirely by the farmers themselves. It is an open book to everyone. We get out a financial statement every year stating every expenditure from smallest to the largest item in regards to every dollar spent, and it is there for the inspection of the public. In regards to the Farmers Union that was taken off for elevator commercial reserves at the rate of 2 cents per bushel of wheat delivered to the Pool, is not a loss to the farmer We have the finest grain handling facilities in the Dominion of Canada in regards to cleaning elevators, and also our terminals at the east and west coasts. The farmers of the three western provinces certainly have something there to be proud of and the outstanding good running of these facilities are entirely up to the farmers themselves, and we are going to keep it that way.

Any information they desire can be had at any time.

I do not think that any of the farmers expect to collect interest on their shares, as the reserves are the foundation there that is going to make it easier for the farmer generation to carry on.

There is also another angle, I would like to very thoroughly emphasize, in regards to grade. I am sure that we farmers can quite all realize that as well when the spreads on tough grain, as high as 12 cents a bushel which we have now brought down to the small figures of 2 and 4 cents a bushel since our Pools have come into operation, and there was no such a thing as overgrading in the days before the Pool's existence, and I can also quite well remember when there wasn't any No. 1 wheat to be had, and I am sure that many more of the farmers can remember it as well, that when you took a load of wheat to a Line Elevator, the elevator man would say, "That is a No. 1 wheat, all right, but I just have ten cars on with some No. 2 or even No. 3, and if you want to take a No. 2 or No. 3 price for it, whatever the case might be, we can handle it at that". These days are gone, since the Pool got into operation. If the Line Elevators are so worried about the farmers why don't they pay us a dividend or interest on the money we have contributed to their facilities, but their motto is "Dividends and big profits to the shareholders only."

My dear Mr. Farmer, in which by your own organization, the Bracken, in West Bend, Tofield, Ryley and Lavoy, and also

Chapter VIII

STRIFE

Lee Rollins, tennis ace, dreamed of helping win the Davis Cup for America. Then he fell in love with Grace Worthington, rich and socially prominent. Grace was willing to defy her family and marry him if he would give up tennis. He did—partly for his love for Grace and partly because of his badly injured ankle. He and Grace were married Later his ankle improved so much that the doctors told him that he could play, and he got a chance to join the Davis Cup team. He tries to persuade Grace to go to Europe with him.

"Dear Lafferol New why not ship up something hard," Clark responded loosely. "You know darn well Rollins here or I can take him any time we want to. It's just that we've—"

A colored porter appeared, carrying a cablegram "Mr. Rollins, sir?" Lee took the envelope He stared unbelievingly at what he read. The voices of Clark and Swanstrom seemed miles away.

GRACE BEING OPERATED UPON TODAY THOUGHT YOU SHOULD BE ADVISED EVEN AGAINST HER WISHES DAN WORTHINGTON

Being operated upon! Why, why in the name of all that was holy hadn't he stayed with her instead of packing off to Europe this way? But he hadn't known; she had made it appear—the recollection came, stark by vivid and illuminating, of how she had clung to him when she had kissed him good-bye She had known then, but had concealed it from him. She had sent him off to Europe though she knew—

Clark's voice came to him strong and clear. "Good news, I hope, fellow."

"No," Lee replied dully, "not so good. They're operating." He turned and made his way to the cable office, sent a wire asking for more details. But no cable arrived until late the next evening.

Grace Passed Crisis Comfortably Doctors look forward to speedy Recovery

Dan Worthington

Crisis! Then she must have been pretty sick; people don't have crises unless—why in the name of heaven didn't this fools tell him what it was all about? Darn it all, he was her husband.

The bells tolled off the midnight hour The water was black; the stars and sky cold; the flags flopped dismally.

The day before the boat was to dock another cablegram signed by Dan Worthington arrived

Offer still stands. Don't contest divorce and check for fifty-thousand in yours. Grace needs Care and Comfort more than ever before and Richard Whyte stands ready to offer her that. What do you say?

Grace was through with him. That hurt less than he had been their hot. A Judas kiss, in a way How contemptible women were, how deceitful! Why hadn't she been honest about it? Why hadn't she told him the truth about her injuries? Why hadn't she told him she wanted a divorce?

But perhaps it was all for the best. With Richard Whyte she would be given the opportunity of returning to her old life, a life she loved so profoundly as she used to accuse him of loving his. He took up a pencil and wrote on a blue and white square of paper:

Lee

As he was debarking at Havre the final message arrived. He stared at it dumbly hand trembling as porters scurried around him

AM ARRANGING DIVORCE GRACE WRITING AM SENDING CHECK CARE DESMOND HOTEL LONDON

DAN WORTHINGTON

It was all over, then. Well, he would forget her and throw himself into tournament playing. He would at least Lafayes. Beat him or die in the attempt. He would practice long and diligently. He was free now—entirely free—to concentrate on making himself the greatest tennis player the world had ever known. And beating to Lafayes would be the initial step in the attaining the height of his ambition.

He could visualize the future. First Wimbledon. Then Australia where he would win the Davis Cup for America. After Asiatic, the National Doubles at Boston, probably with Clark as his partner. Following the Doubles would come the National Singles at Forest Hills. At this, the nation's tennis event of the year, he would prove conclusively that he was no more flash in the pan. He would win the championship The newspapers would sing his praises, compare him to the other greats of other days.

The tournament over, he would be rested to Newport to play in the annual Fall tournament. A telegram undoubtedly would be forwarded to him from Berkeley — Helen Wills's home town—inviting him to take part in the tournament there. He would accept, of course. He would not only play in Berkeley but also along the Pacific coast—San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Balboa, Del Monte, Agua Caliente.

The South would call next While Wynne swore shrouded the vision above the Mason-Dixon line he and Perry Jones, Gene Clark and Wrenley would travel each week to a different southern city.

In February they would play at Havana, and from Havana catch a boat to Bermuda. After Bermuda there would be the usual ball of a few short weeks to allow them to rest a while. Then they would plunge into intensive training for the Davis cup team.

The check from Dan Worthington he would return it if he sent it back. That he had determined. He'd show them that he wasn't quite as big a heel as they thought. He'd show the money.

He crushed the cablegram into a tight ball, walked to the rail and threw it into the sea.

"Hiya," Lee murmured.

"Yes," Wheatley said, "isn't it? Sometimes it gets me."

"What?"

"The life we lead. Sometimes I think of settling down and getting married."

Lee stood silent, thinking.

"But what have I to offer a girl, besides a lot of useless cups and medals? I've only a few tennis years left, at the best. But what could I do if I gave up now? What can I do when I finally have to give it up? I'll inherit the rest of my life! Maybe, only I can't sell! I'm the world's worst salesman. So what? Oh, I was lucky enough to find a job I'd have to start where the high school graduate starts, at the beginner. At thirty-two."

"I wouldn't have a chance against Tilden and Vines and Perry. They're only on the cup team today, Rolly, because Kozeluh and Shields turned pro And I'm not very colorful, you know Not like you with a smashing forehand and a wicked overhead. I'm just one of those plodders who get to the top by pulling pretty hard at the boot-straps But now that I'm here, I wonder if it was worth all the sacrifices Where do I go from here? When I'm all washed up, I mean, Rolly."

Lee said: "I had two years of the other life and I came back to tennis. I didn't have to. I just wanted to. I like it better."

"That's exactly the trouble," Wheatley replied. "You like it better. I tell you, Rollins. it's like a narcotic; when it gets you, you can't break away."

Lee shrugged

"You're lucky, as exception, Rollins. You have a mind who lets you keep your balance, who keeps you from letting the dope get too strong A hold upon you You're managing to live two lives at the same time Few, if any, of the rest of us can do that. I'm amazed that you can."

"Frank"

"Yes?"

"My never mind. It wasn't important" No sense telling Frank that I wasn't an exception, that he hadn't been able to live two lives either They'd all know soon enough. Everyone would know.

* * *

The State Roland Garros Bowl within the boundaries of Auteuil. Row upon row of semi circular seats that sight foot high wall to the top of the arena. In one corner a huge score board where, from a tiny platform, the score is announced through a microphone to those in the stands At the opposite end of the Stade is the runway leading into the dressing rooms. The entire marquee is taken up by the courts lined with white chalk and rolled to the hard perfection of a billard table.

Now, from the stands at the Stade Roland Garros, as Lee Rollins gazed out across the marquee to where Don Clark and Henri Lefevre were warming up, came a constant hum. Men and women of many nations and from all walks of life sat side by side watching intently the two gleaming white-clad figures upon the court, commenting, gesticulating, perplexed. Henri Lefevre was not the greatest tennis player the world had ever known, but he was certainly the greatest valleyer. Untiring, quick on his feet, sarcastic, and a remark able net opponent, he had reigned supreme for four years. Against him a point was never won until he failed to reach the ball which was seldom. What appeared to be kill shots when leaving the racquets of his opponents were converted into points for Lefevre by his uncanny ability to get the ball and return it.

Clark seemed tense, but Lee knew that he would recover his poise when the match was under way. A strapping ball terror bounding toward Clark [illegible] up and idly tossed it toward Lefevre. The Frenchman made a magnificent, slashing, cheering white forth.

They were ready to play at last and Lee turned toward the runway. Instinctively he lifted his eyes for players to watch previous matches. "Takes too much out of you," was the way he had explained it.

In an hour or an hour and a half he would know the bitterness, the heartstruggle out there between Clark and Lefevre. Lee would meet Letsenor. Clark would probably row to beat him and defeat Lefevre and if Lee could beat Lefevre, Lee Hughes and Wheatley could win tomorrow . . .

But Clark did not defeat Lefevre. The match was over in an hour and ten minutes. France had drawn first blood. Lefevre was victorious, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

The reporter was light and airy in Lee's head as he walked from the dressing clubhouse. He was conscious of his white flannel coat with its red, white and blue shield. It inspired a certain ease, a confidence. He could tell from the way he was hitting the ball that the ball, well built Letsenor would have one ball of a job trying to best him this afternoon.

All but they were ready. Hands rushed, ball boys poised, referee and linesmen perched forward in their chairs. Then the high register voice of the referee speaking French. But Lee knew when he was playing! Sixth and match in the Davis Cup Singles. Final Round United States versus France. Mr. Rollins versus Mr. Letsenor. Linesmen ready! Players ready?

Lee nodded slightly, Letsenor made no motion.

"Play!"

Legion Returns Money To The Red Cross

The Canadian Legion War Services has returned the $40,000 given that organization by the Canadian Red Cross Society in the early stages of the war, it was announced last evening. The money was advanced in the Canadian Legion to start it on its programme of work on behalf of the men of the fighting forces.

Finding it necessary to launch a nation-wide appeal for additional funds some time ago, it is explained, the Legion has found itself in a position, as a result, to return the money contributed by the Canadian Red Cross.

Expressing appreciation of the assistance given by the Red Cross, Brigadier General Alex Ross, chairman of the Canadian Legion War Services, stated he is better pleased to be able to do everything they could to help us.

"We, in turn, pledged them a great deal in a month and more important part in contributing to the welfare of the men who are serving in His Majesty's Forces."

Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, commented "The Canadian Red Cross is greatly appreciative of the action of the Canadian Legion. In the early stages of the war they asked their help in getting them started on an effective piece of work. We were embarking on our national campaign for funds at the time and the Canadian Legion has agreed to do everything they could to help us.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

LONDON BOMBED—

FOR QUITE a long time; before this war began; even before the Munich conference, the peoples of the world hail been hearing reports, originating from Germany as to what was going to happen to London. Before the four power conference at Munich, it will be remembered tension was so great that trenches were dug in Hyde Park and other famous places in London. The next war, so we were told was to be a "total war", a war in which civilians would become as much a part as the fighting forces. During the fall and winter months of 1939, it was expected that the long heralded total war would be launched and every precaution from black-outs to elaborate defence measures were hurriedly prepared and put into effect. But in England at least, during this time nothing much happened. After the Polish campaign, even on the Western front, there was little military combative action. Only on the sea did the war really resemble its forerunner, the great war of a quarter of a century ago. Land operations, even bombing raids at this time were comparitively light. So much so that the term "phoney war" was coined.

All the world has learned since that there is nothing phoney about this war. We now now that Europe instead of progressing from the Great War into a long era of peace, simply slipped into an enforced truce in which grudges were nursed, plans of revenge hatched and seeds of hate sown. These seeds are now bearing fruit and after a year of fighting, a year which will go down into history as one of the most catastrophic the world has ever seen, that which was expected during the first months of the war, the bombing of London, has come to pass.

The Germans are curious people. When during the years immediately previous to 1914 they were steadily increasing their export business, steadily increasing their merchant marine, and in many other ways steadily expanding their world trade, for political aggrandizement they brought about the 1914-1918 struggle. How much a snare and delusion for Germany the 1914-18 struggle proved to be the world in general and Germany in particular knows well enough now. But despite this knowledge, and despite the fact that they would go into a war with practically everything to lose and nothing much to gain, they again followed the paths of military conquest which brought them into open conflict with Great Britain.

German preparations were such as to make them feel very confident of victory. Even to-day, well informed correspondents in Berlin report that Germany is still confident. The high command in Germany evidently figured that bombs falling on crowded cities would so demoralize the British as to make victory easy for them. Germany has dropped her bombs on London, killing hundreds of civilians, men, women and children and she has received her answer. Instead of spreading terror within the British metropolis Germany has aroused within the heart and mind of every man dwelling in London and for that matter every man dwelling in the British Isles, a calm, cold but furious anger. If Herr Hitler or the German high command ever thought they could make of the average Londoner a whimpering [illegible], they still have something to learn of British character.

We have said that in many respects the Germans are curious people. But so are the British. Tolerant, relatively easy going, and slow to pick a fight, yet when a fight has been wished on to them they seem to relish it. Certainly, the best way to find trouble is to hurt them and if an enemy wants to make doubly sure of finding trouble, hurt them through some violation of rules. The British are a great rule observing people. Add to hurting them through some violation of rules, inhuman conduct, and you have the average Britisher in a steely state of mind- A state of mind that hardens as adversity thickens. Premeditated and pre-med. diabolical schemes by the German high command for the destruction of London may have worked out on paper, but what can't be put on paper is the ever rising tempo of British resistance as enemy attacks become stronger. In addition to this, even though German information may have led the world to believe all the bombs in the war would fall upon London, on the contrary a large number of the bombs to fall in this war will fall upon Berlin. Already this has taken place.

Husband Couldn't Find The Man But Wife Got Eggs She Wanted

For many years the Dominion Department of Agriculture has been advocating that consumers buy eggs and other food products by grade and thus buy with confidence. Now is a true story on how this advocated concerning eggs improved one woman in an Ontario centre—The woman, who is said to be very particular about things in general, had been taken ill. When Saturday morning came she said she would get up and go to the market to get the eggs as there was one certain party there whose eggs she could absolutely depend on. As her husband did not wish her to get up he offered to go to the market and get the eggs, to which she agreed.

She told him to be sure to go to the north-east corner of the market and ask for Mr. A. Large. This the husband proceeded to do. After asking around Mr. Large could be found. He then called on the local police officer, but the officer was unable to find anyone by the name of A. Large in the neighborhood. The husband then decided to buy some eggs in a carton and take them home. On arrival there he told his wife that he had been unable to find Mr. A. Large. She took the carton of eggs and looked at them and said: "But you did find Mr. Large for his name is on the box and in him I have every confidence." The maid who worked in the house and who had been standing by in the meantime listening to the conversation spoke up and said: "Madam, that is not the man's name; that is the name of the Government grade on the box, so it is not the man but the Government grade in which you have such confidence."

Some $2,000 was raised and a committee recently elected to distribute the money. The chairman is A. D. Paul, car foreman's clerk, Port Mann.

Known as the "C.N.R. Employees of B.C. War Relief Fund," it will make appeals at intervals to replenish the fund as calls are received at all branches, including C. N. Telegraphs and Express are contributing.

THE CASH VALUE OF PRAIRIE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION 1940

Many business men, it seems, both in Western and Eastern Canada fear our prairie farmers will not receive sufficient cash this year to support properly the economic structure of the prairie provinces. Some officials of our Western governments, too, have expressed fear that their treasurers may not be able to collect sufficient taxes from farmers to keep the municipalities and the governments functioning as they should do. It would appear, therefore, that the ultimate might be cleared if an estimate is made of the amounts of actual cash that Western farmers will probably receive on their hands from the sale of their agricultural products during the present crop year, that is from August 1st, 1940, to August 1st 1941.

WHEAT

Estimates indicate that the prairie wheat crop will be around 500 million bushels, which means that farmers will have to receive approximately 400 million dollars. The average for this year will probably be No. 2 Northern. The price that the board is paying for 2 Northern equals approximately 80 cents net to farmers at the average point in Western Canada—a little more in Manitoba—a little less in Alberta. 400 million bushels at 80 cents means that of all the wheat sold, then farmers will actually receive cash on hand by August 1st next, about 225 million dollars for wheat alone.

COARSE GRAINS

Calculations made reveal that farmers will receive for their coarse grains on cash at their country points this year approximately 12 million dollars.

LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS

The Sanford Evans Statistical Service estimates that prairie farmers next year actually received in cash for livestock products (not counting butter, cream, eggs and poultry) approximately 72 million dollars. It seems that farmers will receive in part that amount in cash this year, but probably a little more.

THE TOTAL RECEIPTS

The total sum that farmers should receive, therefore, in cash, at their local points by August 1st, 1941, for the year's production, is as follows: Wheat 225 million dollars, coarse grains 12 million dollars, livestock 72 million dollars, making a grand total of 309 million dollars. Some people, however, hold the view that farmers may be able to market only a part of the 450 million bushels of wheat which they will most probably have for sale. From calculations we have made, however, we are of the opinion that the Wheat Board and Elevator Companies will be able to find by August 1st next sufficient storage space to hold, and so be able to pay farmers for, at least 400 to 450 million bushels. We believe firmly, too, that our Dominion Government will finally make arrangements to purchase in addition, that quantity of wheat which may be left on producers' farms by August 1st next. All in all, then, it seems certain that our prairie farmers will receive by August 1st next a total of at least 300 million dollars cash for their agricultural products with the strong probability that they will receive the full amount of 309 million dollars.

HASTINGS LAKE

Mrs. Alec Donald entertained a number of ladies at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. Craig on Saturday afternoon. A very enjoyable time was spent by all.

Miss Coughlin is the teacher for the coming term at S. Elwood Kerron joined the Stanley's Forces and has gone to Montreal.

Last Wednesday after school, Sunday school opened under the leadership of Mr. Layton. Mrs. Johnson is superintendent. There will be Sunday school every Wednesday after school hours.

Mr Layton will conduct the last summer service in the school, Sunday September 15.

Mr. Kyle took the children of the school to the school fair Monday. There were quite a number of entries and some prizes won. Gordon Kyle had highest number of points and so won the Vermilion fair 16 days.

Alphonse Fontaine is in the University hospital. He has undergone one operation and will have two more. He is doing very well the last we heard.

Rev. Manchester will conduct service in the school Sunday, Sept. 22 at 8:00.

Mr. Pat Weelnke and Mr. Alex Tough have gone to Camrose to harvest.

Mr. Owen Hoover is helping Mr. Chas. Everitt.

LINDBROOK

Cutting is almost finished here now and threshing will be over in a busy hours lack of social news.

Peter Warkentin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warkentin of Lindbrook, is home again from an Edmonton hospital, where he was taken some time ago, seriously ill with heart trouble as after effect of the flu. He is now free from well but we all hope that his recovery will be rapid.

A dance was given at the Hall last Friday. It was well attended and enjoyed by all the only trouble we can see is that the affair was not any too well advertised, many knowing nothing of it until it was over; no Mr. Publicity Agent, "On your toes!" (Ole, this isn't P.T. boys) and let it be next be known to all.

SCHOOL FAIR HELD IN FINE WEATHER

Saturday last, the annual Tofield School Fair was held at the curling rink with a very large number of individual entries. The day was fine, at least the greater portion of it, and many people took the opportunity of viewing the handiwork of the school children of the district.

In contrast to last year there were a great many entries of exceptionally fine quality. There were also classes for grains and grasses, school work, cooking, sewing, woodwork and live stock.

BRITAIN'S MANHOOD IN ARMS TO FIGHT
When war came to Britain, men eager to fight and not willing to wait until they are called for the Far East. The British Australian, marines from Shanghai Japan expected to move in. Instead, it was blocked by the United States. Then Japan started toward Indo-China.

August 15 came and went. The Nazis had not made London in time to keep the long announced engagement at Whitehall Days went by and the British weren't conquered yet. Finally it dawned upon the Japanese, as well as the rest of the world, that for the first time Hitler had bitten off a big piece. To the orderly crease in size of the British Navy, Japanese must be now their objective, to building or fighting.

So Japan may not thank Hitler, not for helping it win an empire in the East, but for so stirring up the war that other opportunists, that Japan apparently favors the end of the dreams of a great Japanese Empire!

REICH STRIPPING FRANCE BARE, SAYS RETURNING HOSPITAL CHIEF

New York, Sept. 14.—Germany is stripping France bare, taking what the Germans want and, when they pay for what they seize, it is with restricted marks that are not worth anything, according to Dr. Charles Bove, chief surgeon of the American Hospital in Paris.

"That is the great mystery," Dr. Bove, who arrived here aboard the Dutch liner Nieuw Amsterdam, declared. "The Germans are taking the best of everything. I never crossed into occupied France, but I know that in the occupied section Frenchmen are convinced that Germany will go ahead when she is good and ready to take over the whole country. They are playing with the Vichy Government, but when they are ready they will crush the entire country. Right now they have about 2,500,000 soldiers spread over occupied France and there isn't a foot of it without a German soldier in charge."

The French people are "numbed and in a daze," he declared, and are now waiting for "a miracle to happen to save them."

Dr. Bove said the Nazi Government was sending thousands of German civilians into occupied France every day and charging their support against occupation costs, while the French, under the terms of the armistice, must pay.

"They are coming in by truck-loads all the time," he continued, "I estimate that there are 2,500,000 of them now in occupied France. The Germans themselves will be asked to war cost charged against the French and at the same time they will relieve the pressure on Germany."

Dr. Bove said he had travelled about 1,000 kilometers through occupied France and that the Germans had taken his motor car, a horse, and all his possessions. He found at least one bright spot in the picture, however, in that the Germans had not been able to requisition his wife's wardrobe.

IS JAPAN'S ROSY DREAM OVER?

(By Volney B. Hurd in The Christian Science Monitor)

The complete silence in Japan regarding the sweeping up of British destroyers to reinforce the British Navy is almost the best comment that could be made. Like the German and Italian press, the Japanese newspapers are quick to give strong opinion about international events when they feel sure of their ground. When the Japanese are silent it means there is concern and uncertainty. Certainly this destroyer deal must have caused both of those emotions.

Japan's hopes in the Pacific have been based on the weakening of British and American naval power out there. Japan has been impressed by the dramatic successes of Hitler. With unparalleled series of victories on land according to schedule, Japan has seen apparently invincible Hitler would be in British August 18.

With British most of the picture, Japan saw itself served in its desire to remove British and American navies from the Pacific. Its military and naval base for both navies and Japan's bonds would be tied once and for all to the south Pacific! That is

A regular meeting of the town council was held on Monday evening September 16th. Present were Mayor Tyrell, and councillors Hammond and Berlet. Business was largely of a routine nature dealing with personnel entrance and the passing of accounts for payment. [illegible] was received and an income tax remitted had been passed by the provincial government calling into effect a readjustment of the town and school district debenture debt. The same items recommended by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners. Approval by the council of a petition of land owners for a special improvement district to be known as Block 1 was given. Mr. William J. Bailey was given permission to move his residence to the street. Council decided to set as the date for the annual tax sale under the Tax Recovery Act.

Why this destroyer naval base deal has been received in silence in Japan is a mystery.

Although Japan has found the Nazi brute a help But now as it savages Britain, it is becoming apparent that Hitler's challenge could have set up a British naval losing program which promises to make the British fleet even in the Pacific before long. The new British naval base at Singapore, Hitler's threat could have made the United States gathering a two-ocean navy program which, if carried out, will make it the greatest naval power in the world. A U.S. Navy of overwhelming strength must be now Hitler's objective.

THUNDER FROM THE STANDS

Chapter IX

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins tennis ace, dreamed of being on the Davis Cup team. Then he fell in love with Grace Worthington, but Grace wouldn't marry a man who regarded tennis as his life's work. Len gave up his cherished ambition to marry Grace. But a year later Grace nearly became of a bad injury to his ankle and they were married. But when his recovery was complete Len did love proceed too strong and he found that Cup fame, in spite of Grace's threat to leave him, if he gave ahead.

As Len was led off the court Sweetstone, Hughes, Clark and Frank Weatherby came rapidly forward, face beaming, congratulatory. Through lips tightly set he murmured: "That's number one!" And though the others did not altogether understand they hugged and slapped his shoulders and told it is here splendidly he had played.

The next day he sat silently between Clark and Sweetstone and watched the French doubles team vanquish Hughes and Wheatley in a world five-set struggle.

In the clubhouse Hughes was slowly undressing; Wheatley seated on a bench hooked up to any approached and there were tears in his eyes. "Tough luck," Sweetstone said truthfully with kindness. "The sort of match either team might have won. They had the breaks." Neither of the doubles players spoke. The captain slapped Wheatley on the back. From farther down the hall came the cheerful, exultant voice of the victors. France now needed only one more match to keep the Davis cup from being taken across the sea to America.

Len received two letters that night. He opened the one from Dan Worthington first. Enclosed within a plain sheet of paper was a check for fifty thousand dollars. Automatically he put it in his wallet. Then he slit the lavender envelope, slowly opened the folded sheets and read:

"Len: Father has arranged for a speedy divorce. Richard has asked me to marry him on the second of August, his birthday. And I am so happy . . ."

Slowly tenderly he folded the letter and put it in his pocket. Tears hot and stinging, shamelessly burned his cheeks. His thought: "I must show them I'm a good sport, a good loser. I'll send some flowers. Yes, I must not forget that—to send Grace flowers. And also send back that check tomorrow."

* * *

Clark, covered with perspiration, eyes wild but happy, came through the door and "Got him!" he said breathlessly and fell heavily into he in the chair next to Len.

"That's fine," Len said without enthusiasm.

Sweetstone, Clark still breathing hard, "I can do what no one expects you can possibly do—" he paused abruptly.

"Didn't you get any show last night?" was Grace added "You look wrecked. I'm almost inclined to send Wheatley out there in your place."

Len smiled grimly and went toward the door. "I'm all right," he said, and went out.

At another time he would have been conscious of the full weight of his responsibility. But on this particular time he knew that absolutely he felt free from it all. He was just going out to play a couple of sets of tennis. He would do the very best he could. There would be knew, he little dash or fire in his performance; it would be the cold, mechanical play of a man who had been trained to be accurate.

No there had been a baby. Perhaps a boy. And he was—well have been the father But it was dead. Dead because—

The sun was terribly hot and there was little air. The stands remained strangely, ominously quiet. Soon he realized that Lefevre, white tenth in gleaming against dark skin was before him suffering a hand.

He walked to the far end of the court and as the ball came to him he struck instinctively. He was responding without volition But the racquet met the ball squarely, evenly, and sent it spinning over the net within the boundaries of the other white-chalked area. How long they warmed up he did not know.

The referee's voice came questioning from above. Len did not answer. Then suddenly Lefevre, like a bird—in flight, was rising on one toe and his racquet made an arc in the air. The ball missed the service box. "Fault," came from above in French. Again Lefevre was up on one toe and again the ball came toward Len, to one—

The time it landed inside the white line and mechanically he swung at it. The gut meeting soft ball seemed to vibrate through his entire body—the twitch which electrified him into action.

Len remembered how Grace had come to him from the train the evening she had left home. The live

Twenty-odd dollars a week—with him. Incredible! Wasn't that heavenly. Why, she was the most resourceful girl in the world—he swung but the ball seemed suddenly heavy and landed in the net. "Monsieur Lefevre leads," came the shrill French voice from above, "one love; change please.

One love. One love. It reverberated through his brain. One love was all he would ever know. Grace Kemp of course, this other and (as she claimed) greater love—Oh, yes, it was his service He threw the ball above his head. The racquet was light in his hand as he struck. The ball hit the ground on the other side and bounded sharply. Lefevre, off balance, touched it outside. Len fell suddenly elated and was quickly depressed.

So she was leaving Grace today. Today of all days. To Richie Whyte. By the time he walked off the court, victory or defeat, she could no longer belong to him. He felt a soft small hand trembling on his arm and the paternal, kindly music of Sweetstone's voice. He had won the first game. It was raining. Drop-shot against the windscreen and the pain—and the ball played on—edging in the far baseline corner! The racquet swept the ball toward Lefevre who had reached it but could not return the ball with strength. He went to the net and smashed. Lefevre lifted it off in a sharp angle. There was sudden thunder from the stands and the boy was handing three balls to Lefevre Were they ever up in games then? She was leaving Richie. And he was love in Europe, playing tennis Father has arranged for a speedy divorce." He, Len Rollins, was worth fifty thousand dollars now, if he cared to be.

Well, he could do a lot with fifty thousand dollars. Travel, keep on playing without worry about the future. There it was again, death in Tennis. Always tennis. Grace had left him because of it. And now she was marrying Richard Whyte.

The ball sped back and forth across the net, its sound ominous against the gut causing the racquet to sing. And then it was past him and here was a roar from the stands which continued, short but awe-in-spiring, as they changed courts.

"I love you, Len, terribly." And the way she quivered when he held her close to him. How difficult it was, after all, to pour into the future That first time they crept had met each other, did either believe then that their lives would have turned out like this?

Another game was over and the Frenchman, smiling slightly as they passed each other, led four to one. Yet somehow it did not seem possible that it did not matter much whether he won or not. He returned the balls automatically.

And that idyllic week, they had known together in Cannes. Grace Kemp in a bathing suit and then not even recognizing her in the blue-green water, breathless. He had loved her very much then—and always would. He did more than that. He had passed on him. It was the wind in his eyes, or because that blurred his vision. But there was no wind. Grimly he gritted his teeth and stood waiting, but nothing was coming.

At last he realized that Lefevre must have won the game. He realized that he was standing foolishly in the baseline awaiting the serve. He walked slowly to the bench and poured of a lemon; washed his face with a towel though the water seemed to spite the heat, was slight. He had not yet rubbed the flowers. Perhaps he should have done it before serving love to the Blade. He must remember to attend to it immediately the match was over . . .

Time now playing again now and the Frenchman was pressing the advantage he had gained by winning the first set. His attack was relentless, his movements magnificent. Only Len's serves saved him from complete annihilation. That and his consummate net play. But it was impossible for him to concentrate long enough on the little white sphere Lefevre kept persistently returning to him. Always a picture of Grace's face—smiling—tender, or a bit frightened and tearful—intervened.

He chased back, back, after a long lob, hit it from over his shoulder. Lefevre at the net "killed" the second return. "Monsieur Lefevre leads in the second set, two games there was one set already to the Frenchman's credit. But what matter? Eventually he, Len, Rollins, would win or lose. He'd much rather win, of course, but if he lost—

Would Justin still give him that manager's job in Indianapolis if he wanted it? In New York it was only early morning. Let's see, the match had started at 2:30; it must be shortly after three now. Why, in New York it was only seven o'clock. Plenty of time to cable Justin—and Grace also—or send him. Here came Richard Whyte. Of that he would be sure, always. Perhaps if he—but it was too late. Yet was it? Why not false golden Midas and—no, he could not send, not do that. It was—it was just wasn't cricket. Yet he might during the next change, jot down some messages and have the boy send them. He might. But he knew he never would. In motion pictures, perhaps, things were done that way, but not in life. Real life was different. Or conventional, morphomable, and . . .

Ring—ring—ring—sounded of perfectly time, racquet meeting a white ball. Ring—ring—ring—ring—ring—that were spry and tireless; himself, long limbed, supple, and tireless. Ring—ring back and forth, up and down, arm making arcs and circles as the racquet met the ball. Ring—ring—the ball was beginning to come only now and then to Lefevre's racquet. It was his country's cause should stir him to greater efforts, but there were other things more important. Ring—ring—and all else out of his mind.

Then the game went two points. Lefevre frowned.

If he did he gave not to Easthampton after but at once, they'd never have time for that ride in Hughes' car Never. Never. Ring—ring—ring—and thinking of that now! It was too late. Ring—ring—ring—ring—ring—ring—and shriek of fright as the small car swerved, were in his ears; the taste of blood was salty on his lips. He laughed shortly; it was not blood so much lips, of course, but perspiration And Lefevre was still dancing on the other side of the court like a satyr grinning.

Len could do nothing with the ball. His racquet had gone mad and contrary he could not control his motions. Ring—ring—ring were lifeless. Lefevre was constantly pushing him to the baseline, bombarding him with drop-shots. And the smallest, most subtle singsong voice from above kept saying: "Fifteen love, thirty love, Lefevre's game. Monsieur Lefevre leads one love is the third set."

Then the ball was in his hand he slashed it back at Lefevre's feet, the Frenchman leaped high, touching the French player off balance. His next service was deadly, with more spin than he had ever put on it before. Len, the marker. He crossed over to the opposite court for the beginning of

HAY LAKES

Here we are again after a lapse of a few weeks. All ont? Let's go!

Numerous small outfits are threshing feed around here. In a week or so the threshing will be general around here. The late start is due to the hail damage.

Beaver Lumber Co. are constructing a $7,000.00 structure, to be a combination lumber yard and hardware store, between the Mercantile store and the post office in Hay Lakes. The Mcmonville Hardware is closing up.

The Hay Lakes Supply is putting on an addition also.

The Metcalfe—Hein wall board factory is producing at full capacity now.

With the dark hunting season in full swing London has nothing on us as far as noise is concerned.

COPELAND—DUFF ENTERTAINMENT MUCH ENJOYED

The entertainment presented by the Copeland—Duff combination at Mary's Corner Thursday night last was greatly enjoyed by all those attending. The number attending was good but not as great but think it could have been better.

Both vocal and instrumental numbers were cleverly rendered and won much applause. The program was sponsored by the United Church Board of Stewards.

LINDBROOK

The warm dry weather is proving to be very favorable for threshing which is general here now. The barley and oat crops seem to be running out good, but for some reason the wheat crops are not threshing out as to compare with the number of bushels, whether it is the Bassian fly or whether damaged by hail it is hard to say, but there it is.

If you meet some dusty, unkempt, tired looking men around these roads at night, don't get alarmed, Hitler's gangsters haven't got this far yet, and mean well; no those grid looking objects are threshers, who just now are too busy to envy how they look, as don't think they've been come out of a scrap. There used to be a motto about "Christmas comes but once a year and in everyone's delight", well Threshing comes but once a year and about the delight part of it, well that's open to question, one thing we do know and that is everyone both men and machines have a great sigh of relief when it is all over an then rather run out the delight part of it.

There seems to be a shortage of threshing help too, to add in the fun of it, and then the next question is "Where to put it? Bins have been made of sheaves, hay wires, B.B. Ties, and several garages have been used and we guess some chickens have been refused from their houses to store the stuff.

We hear that Mr. H. Stine is on the sick list. Tough luck! Howard, we all hope it is nothing serious and that you'll soon be OK again.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brown on the birth of a baby boy, born September 12th in Edmonton. Both mother and baby are fine and are back home again now.

The rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white streamers, and white wedding bells. Sweet pea decorated the tea table. The guest of honour was presented with a lovely down comforter on behalf of the ladies of the district. The hostess served a very delicious lunch, topped off with home made ice cream and wedding cake. Miss Hertha Heuser, Adele Grobault, Mrs. Schmeisbauer and Mrs. H. Grobault assisted the hostess to serve lunch. Mrs. La fleur thanked the hostess and the ladies for their kindness and said she looked forward to having them visit her at her Ryley home.

This dealt with current problems of farmers particularly in connection with the grading, delivery, and payment price of wheat. The situation was branded as impossible and smiled effort was urged on the locals to insist on a change of these conditions.

Mrs. A. Tuyte, speaking on "A Canadian Author", chose as her subject, the economist and humorist, Stephen Leacock and gave us a delightful half hour, listening to some of his best.

The October birthday party will be put on by the east group this year, and if they can entertain as well as they flounce it will be a "scream"! Several of the famous U. F. W.A. cook books are still on hand for sale.

THRESHING GOING FULL BLAST

Throughout the district threshing outfits are all working at top speed to get as much done as possible before the weather changes. So far the crops have been favored with very favorable weather and long uninterrupted runs have been the result. This year the crop is very heavy and there is much straw. At time of writing about 50 per cent of the threshing is done.

THUNDER FROM THE STANDS

by Vincent Richards

CHAPTER X

SYNOPSIS

Len Rollins, tennis ace, dreamed of being on the Davis Cup team. Then he fell in love with Grace Worthington, but Grace wouldn't marry a man who wasn't a champion. Len went to work. Len grew up to, twirled his mustaches—partly because of his love for Grace, partly because of a bad injury to his ankle and they were married. But when his recovery was complete his old love returned too strong and he joined the Davis Cup team. Grace threatens to leave him. On the eve of his sailing she is injured in an automobile accident, but he sails—knowing that the accident is not serious in the tournament he cannot keep his mind on the game. e has heard that Grace is seeking a divorce, in remarry.

* * *

From below where he paused momentarily to bite into a purse of lemon, Len raised his head toward the stands and laughed. Slapping the racquet challengingly against his flannel-trousered leg, he went out on the court. So she wanted him to be a great player, did she? Well, she'd read in the papers about him be-morrow!

Lefevre seemed to sense a change in his opponent. The wry, almost pitying smile disappeared. He knew so did Len, that many a Davis Cup match had been won by the man with two sets against him. Hadn't Corbet triumphed over Big Bill Tilden in just such a manner not so many years ago? And so quickly and correctly Lefevre sensed the change in Len, Len also sensed the change in his opponent. The Frenchman had tightened up, was pressing, trying too much.

There was no stopping Len. He swept through Lefevre in that third set with relentless and devastating accuracy. There was no-thing from the beginning to the referee made the announcement: "Monsieur Rollins wins the third set 6—3. Score in sets now is two to one in favor of Monsieur Lefevre." He caught a faint ray of hope shining in Bumstrom's eyes when their glances met over the sun-baked marvices to be used and Lefevre left the court.

When he returned to the court following the rest period Len sensed the change in the spectators, the ball boys, the linesmen, even the referee. There was a lack of confidence in their step and Lefevre. At first the change was slight, then marked and complete. An easy one-sided victory was turned into a brilliant and sensational ho-lhold struggle.

"Monsieur Rollins' game Monsieur Rollins tends in the fourth set, trou-bassiff

The flicker of a frown crossed Lefevre's forehead The French Davis Cup star broke Len's service for two successive points, but undaunted, Len smashed his way to a lead of three games with bullet-like aces and phenomenal net play.

And now Lefevre was plainly worried. He fretted about a pebble fret. that had become ingrained on the court. It was necessary for him to tighten the laces of his shoes. And once he glared at a linesman who called in favor of the American a shot which nicked the side-l ine. Len knew that he was making splendid use of his right now by the net at a time when Lefevres' stroking had weakened in return through emotion in the wind, strength and accuracy Kill followed ball for telling points. Lefevre then in the air he killed Lefevre's shot. tried to drive him back into the deep an overhead smash which crowned the court with long, floating lobs and passing shots, but his efforts were gan, careers much more evident in futile. Len Rollins was not to be the French record: "Games are five stopped all in the fifth and deciding set."

Len noticed, and it was the first genuine thrill he had experienced since he began the all-important match, Clark's band began playing Wheatley's shoulder, yet Wheatley did not seem to notice. And Swan-stron and Hughes sat forward, staring, breathing unevenly as if they themselves were playing. Len was serving again, and of he won this game it would square the match. It would take this game and set, it might crush Lefevre's spirit

Zing—zing—zing—went the ball. Crouching of rubber-soled shoes over clay. Swishing of flannel as lefevre darted here, there. Cries of "Out!" "Good!" "Fault," in excited French from the linesmen and referee. The deadly quiet of the stands seemed to sit the conclusion of volleys which were applause. And finally, tensely from the referee's chair: "Monsieur Rollins wins the fourth set 6—2. The stick stands squared at two sets all."

* * *

The sun had dropped some in the sky and it was a little cooler when the players returned to the court. But it was resolute Lefevre Len faced now Not the unsettled one of the last we. Rather, a man who realized his anger. His face was grim with determination.

But Len did not fear him.

The Frenchman won the first game and they changed courts. Len noticed the set expression on the face of his teammates. He himself felt no strain. He would win, he knew he would be in win. Knowing that gave him strength. The first game of the fifth were over; they changed again. Racquets flashed, feet scurried over clay; there were cries from the crowd bursts of applause from the crowded stands.

"Monsieur Rollin's game; games are three all in the fifth set . . ." Len smiled and winked at a linesman as he went by.

Another game. Lefevre was playing as if inspired, but the Frenchman's inspiration sprang from an unseen source. Len was smiling now and did Len's.

"Monsieur Lefevre's game; games are four to three in favor of Mons ieur Lefevre." Back into the referee's voice crept some of the enthusiasm that had been there previous to Len's stupendous rally. But Len merely took a tighter grip upon the handle of his racquet, a determined look shot which Lefevre courageously but vainly attempted to reach. The match was squared. Four games each . . .

Their world now was the tennis court. The spectators might as well have been on some distant planet. Lefevre knew only that the man on the other side of the net was trying for the game to win; and Len just as keenly knew that Lefevre must be driven to defeat.

Len stalked Lefevre now as a hunter of the jungle stalks its prey. Not a move did the other make that Len did not mirror itself immediately in Len's mind. He was close on the trail now waiting for his quarry to falter. And when he did—swift and sure would be his death.

But Lefevre throughout the ninth game thought it was dogged neces-timer, did not falter. It was Len un-sional who finally left my opening And the Frenchman took quick ad-vantage . . . "Monsieur Lefevre leads five games to four. Change of chairs" the crescendo of the referee's voice was startling.

One game, the mere matter of ten points at the most, remained between the question of the match and de-feat. But Len wouldn't fail: he would win. He had to win.

Lefevre was serving. Back and forth went the ball; back and forth. Dogerally Len pursued. Eventually a one of them would crack. And this when he did—swift and sure would be his death.

Clark and Wheatley were hugging each other; Hughes and Bumstrom were standing. From the stands came long tumultuous applause. The pan-ting French spectators now cheered wildly the blond young American's magnificent uphill struggle.

And now Len had the advantage. He was serving. Not sure during the afternoon had his terrific "serves" ball deserted him. And it did not de-sert him now. His first shot was a brilliant ace. The frown that crossed Lefevre's forehead deepened. The next point Len took that settled over the gallery after the spectaculous tussle was balm to Len's sore.

The next service, though, Lefevre returned expertly along the sideline. It was, Len knew, the start of the finish, practically magnificent. But he must not fail. Somehow he reached side court just as the ball was bounding past, threw his racquet at it victoriously from the backhand, and knew happy amazement as it bartled back safely into the Frenchman's court.

He had been driven out of position by the seemingly impossible recovery. And now the area left open by which Lefevre would put the ball away seemed terrifyingly as he wheeled. There was no alternative. This was the time for daring and not finesse. He bounded toward the net. The backhand of the maneuver momentarily puzzled Lefevre. The ball, which floated over the American's head missed the base line by a foot.

The shrill sing-song voice from a box.

"Thirty-love."

Len stood quietly and, behind his own baseline. He took a long reoxiating breath, a fresh grip on the racquet handle, then a spring, his body coiled and released, swiftly un-coiled. The ball went wide. The net ball faced the bat. The invincible Frenchman made it good, however and after a spirited volley won the point.

"Thirty-fifteen."

Again up on toe—and that terri-man's inspiration sprang from an ninth deep within him. Lefevre smile as did Len's.

"Monsieur Lefevre's game; games are four to three in favor of Mons ieur Lefevre." Back into the referee's voice crept some of the enthusiasm that had been there previous to Len's stupendous rally. But Len merely took a tighter grip upon the handle of his racquet, a determined look shot which Lefevre courageously but vainly attempted to reach. The match was squared. Four games each . . .

Their world now was the tennis court. The spectators might as well have been on some distant planet. Lefevre knew only that the man on the other side of the net was trying for the game to win; and Len just as keenly knew that Lefevre must be driven to defeat.

Len stalked Lefevre now as a hunter of the jungle stalks its prey. Not a move did the other make that Len did not mirror itself immediately in Len's mind. He was close on the trail now waiting for his quarry to falter. And when he did—swift and sure would be his death.

But Lefevre throughout the ninth game thought it was dogged neces-timer, did not falter. It was Len un-sional who finally left my opening And the Frenchman took quick ad-vantage . . . "Monsieur Lefevre leads five games to four. Change of chairs" the crescendo of the referee's voice was startling.

One game, the mere matter of ten points at the most, remained between the question of the match and de-feat. But Len wouldn't fail: he would win. He had to win.

Lefevre was serving. Back and forth went the ball; back and forth. Dogerally Len pursued. Eventually a one of them would crack. And this when he did—swift and sure would be his death.

Clark and Wheatley were hugging each other; Hughes and Bumstrom were standing. From the stands came long tumultuous applause. The pan-ting French spectators now cheered wildly the blond young American's magnificent uphill struggle.

And now Len had the advantage. He was serving. Not sure during the afternoon had his terrific "serves" ball deserted him. And it did not de-sert him now. His first shot was a brilliant ace. The frown that crossed Lefevre's forehead deepened. The next point Len took that settled over the gallery after the spectaculous tussle

CARCASS GRADING HOGS TO BECOME OFFICIAL SEPT. 30

Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture has announced that on and after September 30, 1940, carcass grading of hogs will be the official method of grading throughout Canada. The present hog grading regulations which provide for the live grading of hogs since 1932, will be rescinded as from the date mentioned and live grading of hogs will not thereafter be continued.

Hon. Mr. Gardiner explained that his action has been taken to insure more hogs of suitable quality for export to the United Kingdom. The progressive and anticipated increase in hog marketings followed by increased exports of bacon to the United Kingdom make it necessary for a much higher percentage to be suitable for export. During the past year less than 15 to 45 per cent of the hogs slaughtered at inspected plants have been exported to the United Kingdom, but at the present production level from 65 to 70 per cent of the hogs will be available for export and, therefore, should meet export standards.

Carcass grading of hogs has been in effect on a voluntary basis for about six years. The number of hogs so graded under this voluntary system has progressively increased until it now stands at 62.5 per cent of all hogs graded to date this year.

CALLING UP OF AGE GROUPS NOW IN EFFECT

Ottawa, September 21.—In less than thirty days after undertaking the immediate task of National registration, the Canadian Government will begin to stage services making the whole line so that chain flew high in the air. Leferve bit his lip as the ball bounded off the retaining wall and rolled away

"Forty-fifteen" and after a long volley—"Fort-thirty."

A Daring cut at a trap-shot, Len watched, almost uncanny, as the French star heartbreakingly tried to reach it.

The drums of the referee: "Monsieur Rollins leads in the fifth set, five games to four."

Lefevre must fight now with his back to the wall. True, the French man was serving. But Len preferred it so. The physiology was all in Len's favor. The man in the hole was serving. Splendid! Lefevre had to make his services good, or . . .

The first ball came and Len drove those departments has been working day and night setting up the necessary machinery for the prompt and efficient operation of the training plan, outlined a few of the many preparations.

The services of all qualified medical practitioners throughout the Dominion have been enlisted by Mr. Gardiner so that there will be no delay in determining the physical fitness of the men called upon. Under this plan, there will be no "line-ups" or waiting appliances. Men may visit their own or any conveniently located medical practitioner, who has received detailed instructions concerning the physical standards set for the Canadian Active Service Force for the duration of the War.

Under the National War Services Regulations, physicians who make an inaccurate statement or issue an inaccurate certificate, will be guilty of an offence and liable to summary conviction, for imprisonment for not more than six months. Heavy penalties will be imposed on any eligible individual who, having been sent a notice of call, fails to report for a medical examination. It will be the duty of the Minister or his deputy, Major General L. R. LaFleche, who is responsible for the execution of the plan, that the selection of men shall be scrupulously impartial.

With the convenience of applicants in mind as well as speedy efficiency Canada has been divided into 33 administrative divisions, each with a board consisting of three, a chairman, supported by two representative citizens, and a divisional registrar, who will act as secretary and to whom any person seeking information as to procedure may call, and should apply.

All medical reports will be submitted to the divisional registrars, while any appeals or controversial issues which may arise will be directed to divisional board through the registrar.

Medical examination of the first group of men, according to Mr. Gardiner will get under way within the next few days, and the first to be called for training—30,000 men—will proceed to training centres for October 9th.

GOD BLESS AMERICA—

(By R. H. Markham in The Christian Science Monitor)

PATRIOTISM IS rising in America. You see more flags and note more placards, articles, stories, editorials about loyalty to America. Everywhere you hear the song, "God Bless America."

This is entirely natural. We would be an utterly unworthy people, if we were not moved by patriotism at such a time as this. Ten European States have recently disappeared. The greatest of all empires is carrying on a terrific struggle for its existence. Every continent is threatened with sweeping changes. Gigantic efforts are being made to establish new regimes that would alter the ways of life for the whole of humanity. So, of course, we are deeply concerned. As nations loiter we want ours to be preserved.

America has full granaries and pleasant homes. Are we merely asking that we may continue to live in ease?

Certain nations have very little oil, iron, coal, and insufficient food, while we have a surplus of all these things. Are we merely praying that God will guard our treasures from those who crave and need them? Has God any more reason to bless America than any other country? Is our America something so promising or useful or noble among the nations of the world that it deserves divine care and protection?

Let us, in all humility, try to answer that. We Americans cannot claim to be a chosen nation. We're hardly a separate nation at all. We're Europe transplanted across an ocean. We're a mixture of Poles, Italians, Czechs, Scandinavians, British, Germans, French, and a score of other ethnic elements. A star looking down upon New York would find parts of it much like Palestine; parts of Milwaukee like Munich; parts of Minneapolis like Stockholm.

But America is far more than a mixture of European nations. Think back to the first dissatisfied Frenchmen who came here. They came to help create a free country where men could make a good society, where humanity could start anew.

That's also why the first Poles came, and the first Germans came. That's why Mr. Willkie's grandparents came and why Mr. Roosevelt's ancestors came.

Why did that shipload of bold, determined English folk land at Plymouth Rock? Why did Roger Williams found Rhode Island? Why did the Quakers establish Pennsylvania? What were the flaming ideals of the early Virginians, of Patrick Henry, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson? Was ever a more noble enterprise undertaken than the founding of Georgia? Did not heroes settle Kansas in the name of freedom? Why did Mormons seek the sands of Utah? Why did Swedes migrate across an ocean to Minnesota? Or a doughty band of colonists pierce to the distant, weary end of Oregon's trail?

As you traverse our land, town after town, city after city will rise up to greet you with special stories of special bands of pilgrims who wandered over ocean and prairies to create an ideal community.

That is the spirit of America. We are not just Britishers and Germans and Russians and Jews—we are humbly creating a better life for all sons and daughters of men.

For that bright vision, which men and women from all lands come to serve, we may stand in our churches and factories and fields and pray "God Bless America."

But America certainly has grave shortcomings. We Americans have not done nearly as well as we should.

Never has so much religious fervor met with so much lukewarmness and freedom.

Never have so many people read so many newspaper columns so completely free from government control.

Never have so many factory workers and tillers of the soil in any nation reached such a high standard of living.

Never in any great society has there been such an absence of class barriers and such a small chasm between rich and poor.

Never has so mighty a bureaucracy pressed so lightly on so many people.

These are grand facts. They are America. We pray with fervent hearts, "God bless and keep these American ways of life."

However, that is not all. The American offering we bring before God also causes us very deep shame. This America is far short of what we hoped it would be by 1940. Our discrimination against Negroes, our unemployment, our wretched housing, our graft, terrible crime records, cynical magazines, frivolous theatres, gambling—can we raise our voices and say, "God bless that"?

We can only pray with contrite hearts, "God forgive us. God awaken us. God help us to make America a still better land."

The essence of humour is sensibility; warm tender fellow-feeling with all forms of existence—Carlyle.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plots."

Millions of farmers and other workers in the countries of North and South America would suffer poverty, it was thought, because the normal European markets for their products have been shut off by the War.

History reveals that human suffering always ends in strenuous protests and is discontent; and so it was feared that this discontent would affect friendly countries in peaceful lands. Edmonton, Sept. 23:—Voluntary enlistment in the fundamentals of military art is now permissible, and made attainable in Grades 11 to 12 may obtain credits for their work along these lines, it is disclosed by Edmonton Department officials. Training will be carried out outside the regular school hours, and students may qualify in all. Training is equal and full work, military geography and musketry practice with .22 rifles will be essential parts of the course which may be taken by boys in lower high school grades if desired. No credits will be allowed to the younger classes however; Military District 13 officials are supervising the cadet training jointly with education officials.

Largest weekly quota ever to leave Edmonton for the Royal Canadian Air Force was registered this week, when 50 airmen-to-be left the city for Toronto training base. Sessions of the capital's total to 720, immediately afterwards, recruiting officials issued a call for more men. Calls were also sent out from other military units scattered in the city.

First activities of the University year were started Monday, when "second-comers" were supplemental ary examinations in an effort to catch up on spring failures. Sessions conclined Wednesday. Registration of first and second students will get under way Thursday. Lectures commence September 27.

Details of the Canadian Legion War Services Inc. educational plans of the fighting forces were made known in Edmonton by John W. Chisholm, director of the Correspondence School Branch of the Adult Department of Education and committee member for the province. Instruction in classroom throughout Canada will be augmented by correspondence courses through the various provincial education departments. Immediate objectives are to create efficiency in service men and fit them for promotion, and give them basic general knowledge and technical training so that they may more easily adapt themselves to post-war conditions.

Annual drive for funds is now being carried out for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in the city, and city chapters of the I.O.D.E. are co-operating in the effort. A display of blindcraft is attracting attention in a downtown office building, and tins are served. Blind persons now in Northern Alberta were assisted by the Institute during the past year.

Donations are pouring in for Edmonton's Spitfire Fund, according to Mayor Fry of the Capital city. Raised in Edmonton, north-west suburb of London the fund is aimed to purchase a Spitfire "time-gun" to be named after the Alberta city. The London borough has kept in touch with its sister in the purchase. J. G. Nicholson, manager of the Royal Bank, and head of a banking publicity and speakers' committee to create interest in the fund.

Edmonton's first gas attack of all time was experienced Friday, when incensed gas bombs exploded on Jasper Avenue and a demonstration squad rushed to action stations. A running commentary added point of the raid to those who were not at the spectacle. Air raid sirens shrieked, a traffic jam of autos and pedestrians rushed up, the streets were swept with hose and the all clear announced. It was part of the civilian defence effort. Auxiliary units staged for citizens, culminating in more varied display at Clark Stadium.

An immediate check on Edmonton-ians by city and RCM police will be carried out to discover whether unlocal registration has been made by individuals, and suspicious persons and others generally are urged to complete registration cards. Those failing to produce them will be taken into custody", an official statement warns.

LEGION APPEALS TO PUBLIC FOR OLD MAGAZINES

Ottawa, September 23:—An appeal for magazines for distribution among Canadian forces at home and overseas is being made by the Canadian Legion War Services.

Legion supervisors in all military camps throughout the Dominion as well as those in Great Britain, report a dearth of this type of reading matter. They point out that national magazines of all kinds, especially those well illustrated, are greatly enjoyed by the men after long hours of intensive training. Troops in England are particularly interested in Canadian periodicals because it helps them keep in touch with their home attachments.

All possible assistance from the public is urged by the Legion, which announces that magazines may be turned over to any Legion branch for packing into shipment to C.W.S. headquarters at Ottawa. Magazines not more than two months old are preferred. French language periodicals will also be appreciated for distribution to French-Canadian troops at home or abroad.

SMASH HITLER CAMPAIGN NOW UNDER WAY

An army of 2,000,000 regular "War Savers" is sought in a national "Smash Hitler" campaign now opening by the War Savings Committee, it is announced by Messrs. W. H. Somerville and de Gaspe Beaubien, National chairmen.

To enable every man and woman in Canada to join this "Army of Two Million Regular War Savers", the committee has developed, in collaboration with the chartered banks, a special Pledge Form which will be delivered by mail to over 3,000,000 homes from coast to coast. This is one of the largest single mailings ever carried out by the Canadian Postal Service.

By signing this new War Savings Pledge Form any bank depositor can undertake each month to invest in one or more War Savings Certificates for him on the 15th of every month. Once the Pledge is signed and handed to the bank, the regular purchase of War Savings Certificates becomes automatic; the purchase price of the Certificates is deducted each month from the account, sent by the bank to Ottawa, and the Certificates delivered by mail to the depositor's home address or to any other address he may designate.

"This new Pledge plan", states the announcement by the Joint National Chairman, "provides any man or woman with an ideal means both of saving money for his own future use, and at the same time of helping directly in Canada's war effort. Most people have found that it is far easier to make a resolution to invest in War Savings Certificates every month than it is to keep that resolution. By using the new Pledge form, the individual overcomes this human weakness, and having signed the Pledge knows that regular investment in War Savings Certificates every month will from then on be automatic.

"In connection with this plan, the War Savings Committee hopes to impress upon all Canadians the fact that when they purchase War Savings Certificates, they are not giving their money, but lending it, at a reasonable return to themselves. That return amounts to a full 3 per cent in 7½ years. We hope by the end of the year that at least two million people will have taken advantage of this new and useful means of building a reserve of savings for the future."

SCHOOL PATROLS GO INTO SERVICE

With the re-opening of schools for the fall term, branches of the Alberta Motor Association have resumed their sponsorship of school boy patrols.

At Edmonton, 12 public schools now have these patrols in operation. Four boys are selected at each school to act as patrols in guiding and directing their younger playmates to safety across busy intersections near the school.

So satisfactory have been the results from this service since it was established in Edmonton two years ago, there has not been a motor accident involving a child going to or from school.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

"LIGHT OF THE MOON" TO BE SHOWN AT TOFIELD

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 24:—Judges of the Mid-South Fair's garden contest, designed to settle the long-stand ing argument over the best time to plant crops, gave the "nod" to Pete ("Light of the Moon") Zarell.

Coston Franklin Whitaker, Memphis gardener, championed the dark of the moon as the time to plant. Mr. Zarell, veteran truck farmer, scoffed at such stuff as "the bunk".

The fair gave each a garden plot, the same kind of seed. Neither used fertilizer. Mr. Whitaker planted in the dark of the moon, Mr. Zarell in the light.

Judges announced Mr. Zarell won first in 10 of the 12 vegetable classes.

Duchess Opens British Services Club

Passing many representatives of the British Empire's various women's volunteer services, the Duchess of Gloucester arrived to open a club for them in London.

THE BIBLE SOCIETY

The lantern lecture given by Rev. Barkwell last Wednesday evening was very impressive. Rev. Barkwell spent over thirty years in charge of the Bible factory work in Canton, and he hopes to spend about six months holding meetings and lecturing in different parts of the North Alberta Auxiliary. It was unfortunate that the audience was not larger.

When we consider that more than 400,000,000 people in China, and the more than 300,000,000 people of India, not to speak of the millions in Africa and hundreds of thousands in the Islands of the Sea who are not opposing the spread of the Gospel, as they once did but are literally begging for Scriptures and for teaching through the missionary that is a story that lifts one above the tragic and terrible clouds of war and shows in face of a loving Father who is ruling and overruling among the children of men.

Mesdames Swift and Robinson have started the Annual local canvas in the interests of the Bible Society. The regular subscribers and others approached have given cheerfully to this worthy Fund and we are hoping that many more will contribute as due to the war the British Isles who always subscribe as liberally find it difficult to hold meetings. Canada and Newfoundland must accept greater responsibility in supporting the Parent Society in its world wide ventures. The Society publishes Bibles, New Testaments and Separate Portions in 1040 different languages. In Canada over 100 languages are used. The War Emergency Fund which provides Scriptures for the Armed and Auxiliary forces of the Crown requires sacrificial support until in God's good time it will be no longer needed. Christ's great command "Go ye and teach all nations" surely means that Bible must be translated, published and circulated. By gifts, however small, and the efforts and prayers of all, the Scriptures may yet become what they really should be—the heritage of all peoples.

If any are desirous of helping and have not yet been called on kindly get in touch with the collectors. Your help will be greatly appreciated.

For a five dollar annual contribution, "The Bible in the World" a beautifully illustrated monthly magazine of over sixty pages will be mailed to the donor.

W.C.T.U.

The Bardo W.C.T.U. had a short meeting at Mrs. Nora Anderson's on July.

The president Mrs. Geo. Hendrick, had a very unselfish Prohibition week and of meeting Miss Bertha Palmer in Minneapolis, while there attending the W. C. T. U. Convention.

Miss Palmer is a teacher in Scientific Education on Temperance and works to have a Temperance course brought into Public schools.

It was decided at the meeting that many members as possible should attend the W.C.T.U. at the home of Mrs. A. Thursby, Ryley to be held in August. However owing to differ ent hindrances only two members attended this meeting.

From the White Ribbon Tidings we have the following extracts. That Prince Edward Island has the best record for the good, are home-life of any province in Canada and that best drinking increases drunkenness. Are we as women and mothers good citizens. We have a responsibility to the community and to the health, safety and well being of our neighbors. As Christian citizens we should believe in the brother hood of man and should protest against the misery and injustice that are all to prevalent. Do we study the laws re liquor sale health and safety and use our influence to see they are put into force and improved if need be? We as women need recognize that we have an important place to fill in protecting our homes.

SWEDEN'S ELECTION

The Albertan remarks that the recent election in Sweden has not only confirmed in office the Social Democrat premier and his government but has placed the Social Democrat Party in a clear majority for the first time in many years . . . The government gained seats in the election and now has a clear majority of 28 in a house of 230 which is quite sufficient. . . . Sweden was in most serious trouble during the Nazi invasion of Norway but the government kept its head and maintained its dignity and independence . . . The Swedish government has been lauded upon by Canadian members of parliament and other democracies as a sort of model government . . . The election in a time like this with the world in chaos was a great victory for democracy.

CHAPTER XI

SYNOPSIS

Len Ballou, tennis ace, dreamed of being on the Davis Cup team. Then he fell in love with Grace Worthington, but Grace wouldn't marry a man who regarded tennis as his life's work. Len gave up his cherished ambition—partly because of his love for Grace, partly because of a bad injury to his shoulder—and they were married. But when his recovery was complete his old love asserted itself strong and he joined the Davis Cup team. Grace threatened to leave him. On the eve of his sailing she is injured in an automobile accident, but is able—knowing that the accident is not serious. In the tournament he cleaned house his mind on the game, as has heard that Grace is seeking a divorce, to remarry.

The ball streaked over the net. Lefevre returned it, not too hard. He knew, and he knew Len knew, that his only chance now was to outclass the American. But Len realized that given a sensible opportunity he could gamble—afford to be daring. But until that opportunity came—

Softly, too, he returned the ball. It was a case to wait for the two would weaken first. And Lefevre was the stronger. The modest volleyer the game had ever known would outplay the baseline artist. Those last-minute shots of Lefevre's—that on the stable-ed forward a breath-low, supreme watching this duel of duels.

The volleying continued steadily. Then Len saw a chance, sprang forward, Lefevre's backhand, ranging him out of position. The Frenchman returned the ball and quickly reversed to corner the open court. Coolly, deliberately, knowing the great Lefevre was dead set on. Len Rollins won. And observed if he was not. Len Ballou—his hand did not waver, Len Rollins' racquet cut the air in a short, swift arc.

And even as the ball "pinged" from the taut gut he knew that his aim had been true and that he "pinged" had not wavered. The white ball raced to the corner from which had just come the great little Frenchman.

The packed stands sat for a split second in stunned silence while the ball bounded crazily away. Lefevre, never have to be afraid of the forthe a peculiar twitch came to his mouth, turned and watched it. Then he shrugged, wearily dropped his racquet and strode quickly forward to the net. vanquished, hand outstretched in congratulation.

Then there was pandemonium. Seventeen and Clark were beside Len, tugging him as he walked slowly to the center court, and Chatil, Hughes and Frank Wheatly were openly a little stunned at the sudden happy ending. And from all sides and applause. The roaring was like from a distance.

And as Len walked from the Eiffel court toward the ramp that led to the dressing rooms, but, perspiring, and tingling, Len could hear Lefevre's defeat was announced, and that he was beaten even before that." Len only one fourth race—when he should be most not forget—called forth to Grace—

Monsieur Rollins, may I present you to a very charming young lady?

Joseph Bonsor's annual party at his home on the River Fox pavilion—preceding the annual event of every Parisian summer. The guests were the world of tennis—Len lashed the feeling of elation he once thought would exist. Before Grace's child this achievement would give

He had a fifty thousand dollar here here standing before him ever check he could cash. But he is didn't starry, calling him by name. He didn't want that sort of money. He stepped forward and grasped Pantheon money. Payment for a life's outstretched hands. "Gracie of emptiness. Agreement for a life darling!" A lump rose in his throat without Grace. and he could say no more.

He should his hand to clear the Joseph to his made their way out mist from his eyes. "We're from the same country and practically in the same business," Shay laughed lightly. "Yet we've never been introduced."

"I'm the American promoter, you know, Monsieur Tennis Professional Sports. I handle the Tilden group. But we'll talk more about that later. That was a honey of a match this afternoon. You were swell in those last three sets."

Bonsour gently persuasive, rose and with a long excitement, perhaps would enjoy a short personally conducted tour of the Bonsour wine cellar? It is known throughout the continent as one of the most ancient. Some of my brands they are over two hundred years of age."

Len had never considered pleasure of Bonsour and Shay and then the wine merchant was thrust it sent a down throughout his body. Before where a telephone was housed with in a small anteroom off the reception hall.

He took the receiver off the hook, handed it mildly to Grace "You speak with the operator, darling. I don't speak it ; language"

"Shall I speak Italian?"

"Len, what—and Dad have I—"

"Tell her," he went on "to get Mr. Frederick Talbot's on Fifth Avenue, New York City. Say it's Len in Indianapolis."

Shaking his head, the receiver still in her hand, and her eyes rested on Len Ballou. He could see the emotion- ing, insistent voice of the operator asking for the number And then finally, the sound of the instrument.

"Len, darling," she said softly, "if you'll let you do that. You would be unhappy, terribly unhappy. And if you were I would be too. You will always love to play tennis; I shall always be jealous of it. But we must both make concessions. Every couple must. I want you to take that professional offer. It's honest work, and you'll like it. I'll go along with you wherever you have to go. And we'll save our money—the money you earn, Len darling. Maybe you'll play for five or six years and then you will have had enough. Then we can settle down. And we'll both be young and—and happy.

"We'll go back to L-E."

She nodded, smiling at arms he held toward her. "And it will be exactly maybe, just like just like—oh, Len darling! Have me and tell me this is real, that we're not dreaming, that we're really in love and after at last and for good.

"It is real, Grace. It never will change. It will go on exactly, my darling, here, and many nights to come. And every morning the sun will be shining and brightly because we'll be together."

She raised her lips. "Forever, Len—Forever—"

From somewhere deep in the chest sure of Joseph Bonsour's ancient, hand-shaken clock the crystal chimes of a grandfather announced the ending of one day and the beginning of a new.

FARMERS' HOLIDAY—

ALMOST FROM THE time this season's first binder bit into the first field of grain, the weather has been fine. From the really hot days of mid August to the gradually cooling days of late September the sun has shone brilliantly. The days in accordance with the season became shorter, dawn came later and dusk fell earlier, but the farmers' day—his working day—did not lessen one little bit. The song of the binder turned to the roar of the thresher and arms and bodies tuned to threshing tempo, fed ever hungry mechanical jaws with sheaves. And they were heavy sheaves, produced in a summer of luxurious growth, there was straw aplenty.

Farmers hoped the fine weather would continue. Each day's setting sun brought the end of the growing season's labors for them a little closer. Each morning's rising sun shone on a few less sheaves and larger piles of straw, while in granaries or elevators, cereals mounted.

The most lonesome spot during all this activity was the main street of the average small town. Too busy to buy smokin' or coffee or sugar? We don't know, but certainly only after darkness had fallen Saturday night did the "old burg" really hit its stride. Then came the rain. With Monday's weather as fair as could be, Tuesday's dawn broke dull and cloudy and long before noon a steady rain was falling. If you had asked any one or all of them we believe all farmers in town would have desired the fine weather to continue, but we also suspect that many rather welcomed the respite. Anyway judging by the cars on main street Tuesday afternoon one could think of no better phrase than 'A Farmers' Holiday.

Wait for the wagon,
Wait for the Wagon
Wait for the Wagon
And we'll all take a ride.

P.S.—Not too far or for too long a time, we hope.

HOG GRADING—

APPARENTLY ALL raisers of hogs do not approve of the new compulsory ruling of rail grading. The Provincial Minister of Agriculture, Hon. D. B. Mullowney informs us packing houses are really in favor and he in turn has protested to Ottawa. Rail grading is not new. Here it has been optional for some time and in the older countries it has been the general practice for years. There is no doubt in our minds that the immediate benefit of the institution of compulsory rail grading here goes to the packer. While it is understood the packer captures and preserves for future use every thing there is in a pig except the squeal, it must also be understood that to the packer, the most valuable part of the pig is the bacon side—and in effect these are what he buys. The quality of these influence the price both when he buys and when he sells and naturally the less guessing he has to do when he buys the better he likes it. He sells on a dead meat grading, he would like to buy that way. Those who are opposed to rail grading base their fears on the fact that once the pigs enter the abatoir they are gone for ever, and can be shuffled and manipulated around as the packer sees fit. Perhaps they could, but we do not believe this to be the reason for the introduction of rail grading. Apparently the best of buyers with the most honest of motives make mistakes. There are times when pigs graded well on the hoof are rejected on the rail and there are also times when pigs graded below selects on the hoof reach that distinction on the rail. Buyers are only human and there is only one Santa Claus we believe when grading on the hoof the tendency would be to grade down rather than grade up. This would not be so much because the buyer tried to "rob the farmer" but rather because he desired to protect himself. A policy of this kind consistently carried out could not help but result in a loss for the farmer.

In rail grading guess work in grading is gone; the side is as fat or as lean as it will ever be and the ham is as plump or thin as it will ever be. The problem the packers have to overcome is how to convince the farmer that he is not only getting a square deal but also that the report he receives was really made on his pigs. The evidence will have to be very convincing.

As to the efficiency of rail grading over grading on the hoof there should be no question. Out of two hundred pigs one hundred graded one way and one hundred the other, the percentage of correct grading would all be in favor of those graded on the rail, but against this extra efficiency is the fact that the grading is done out of the farmers sight, when there is no comeback, for the pigs are dead.

A Simple Deduction

CANADIAN LEGION WAR SERVICES

Living in such an isolated country as Iceland may not appeal to many people, but to those who "have to pay the bills" it would have its merits.

According to Clarence B. Burden, who recently arrived in the island to establish facilities of the Canadian Legion War Services for the Canadian troops stationed there, electrical power, for one thing, is extremely cheap. In fact, it's so inexpensive that rather than go to the expense of buying curtains the inhabitants leave their lights on all the time. Then there isn't the problem of keeping a steady supply of hot water on hand for the natural hot springs that are everywhere to be found are simply piped to the surrounding houses and business establishments. At the moment, Mr. Burden says in his report to Lieut.-Col. D. E. MacIntyre, D.S.O., M.C., general manager of the C.L.-W.S., construction is underway to supply the troops in all parts of Reykjavik, the capital, for central heating of all buildings.

Mr. Burden, a native of Fredericton, N.B., to the Legion's supervisor in Iceland and his duties among the Canadian forces there include the provision of recreational facilities, social and personal services such as supplying the men with free note paper, envelopes, books, magazines, daily newspapers, cigarettes and other comforts that are usually sent from Canada and keep their morale high. He reports that the troops are in excellent health and spirits and are eager for an opportunity of reminding all Canadians that the spirit of the old Canadian corps is as alive today as it ever was.

Sporting activities, games, reading matter and a large quantity of Canadian newspapers already distributed from the Legion to the men, Mr. Burden says, and numerous sing-songs have been organized. He adds that the Legion's help was greatly in evidence during recent celebrations of the first mobilization anniversary of the unit of which he is attached.

Iceland itself, Mr. Burden writes, is a "country of contradictions." He says that it is positively beautiful on occasions, and positively ugly on others. What might be wonderful weather at one moment, can change in 10 minutes into a blizzard of mild ado and was carried out, as one making officer stated, in record time.

STINKWEED FLAVOUR IN MILK AND CREAM

Stinkweed, when consumed by dairy cows, imparts a very disagreeable flavour to milk and cream. During the spring months and after harvest, when cows are turned into grain fields, they frequently feed on the young green plants or pick up the seeds which are scattered.

The flavour of Stinkweed is very pronounced; one can of tainted cream will spoil a whole vat of butter of 1,000 pounds.

Two pounds of 11 cents per pound butterfat before special grade is made the Stinkweed flavour ruins it.

1. Remove cows from Stinkweed infested areas at least three hours before milking.

2. Milk every cow into an empty pail, and discontinue by taste and smell which cows are producing tainted milk. Use the milk only for feeding live stock on the farm.

3. Carefully check and test the flavour of cream from each individual separation before adding to the cream can.

MAIL FOR SOLDIERS IMPROPERLY ADDRESSED

The kind co-operation of Postmasters and assistants in this District is requested in doing an effective piece of work which will help to speed up reaching results.

Per the information of all concerned, it is explained that thousands of improperly addressed letters and parcels are reaching the Base Post Office, causing disappointment and resulting unnecessary work both senders and addresses. I am sure all realize how eagerly the troops overseas look for letters from home and friends.

Effort is made at the Base Post Office and overseas to correct these insufficient addresses but owing to weeks of delay many cannot and in thousands of cases, the mail has eventually to be returned to the sender undelivered.

The fullest co-operation of all postal officials is requested in observing soldiers' mail to see the full address as given before the article is despatched. All pieces not fully addressed should be held for inquiry if the sender is known and can be readily reached without unduly delaying the onward transmission of the article.

Attachments should bring them along, so that they may take part in concerts.

CANADIAN BRIGADE DEMONSTRATES ITS SPEED AND MOBILITY

Somewhere in England, Sept. 30:—The Nazi blitz, which the British have been forced to match second for second and revolution for revolution, has made the 1st and 2nd Canadian Divisions two of the most prepared establishments under arms.

According to M. McIntyre Head, of Toronto, on leave from his post as Attorney-General of Ontario, as Canadian Legion War Services supervisor attached to the 1st Division, the men now overseas can move with incredible speed, even under the most difficult circumstances, and there is no chance they will not be found ready if the Germans finally try their much vaunted invasion of these isles.

Mr. Head illustrated the superior mobility of the troops by relating what he had seen recently while accompanying a brigade during a tour of duty in a section of England where Canadian had never before been billeted.

"Without fuss, noise or confusion, he said, "the entire brigade settled down as if the place had been put in readiness for their reception by general. Every officer, every man, did his job so efficiently that within an unbelievably short period of time all work was completed. It was a masterpiece of smooth efficiency.

The policy of speed that has been fostered by the military authorities in this country has resulted in officers accompanying the men, Mr. Head said, and he was present when a same brigade tour he was requested to establish recreation, sports and entertainments in a certain village. The request was a difficult one, but with the co-operation of the village clerk a hall owned by the community was found and the institute established. As a church were turned over to the Legion. Townsfolk lent their support and within a few hours of the arrival of the unit of which he is attached, two establishments had been fitted up and were in full operation. Dry canteen, writing, reading and sports equipment was installed and the point was hardly up to the "welcome" signs when a steady stream of soldiers began flowing in and out of the doors, enjoying the C.L.W.S. hospitality.

The effort of the Legion did much to stimulate the morale of the brigade, Mr. Head said, as one week-end

SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE OPEN OCTOBER 15th

Agriculture Schools at Olds and Vermilion will open again on October 15th. This year these schools should be especially attractive to rural boys and girls, for here at very reasonable cost they may obtain training in their chosen professions of Agriculture and Home Economics.

The young men and women who attend the schools this year will be serving in Canada's war effort by securing a training that will make them better farmers and more efficient home-makers. Furthermore, in 1941 they will come back to their farms and homes after the war, they will be more able to accept their responsibilities as rural leaders.

The Schools emphasize practical agriculture and Home Economics. In addition, there are many other interesting activities—sports, dramatics and so forth

Boys and girls from the farm find the 8-week very handy because they can attend them during the slack period of farm life.

STORING POTATOES

Potatoes should be harvested as carefully as possible to avoid mechanical injury and bruising. They should be quite dry when put into storage and all diseased and damaged tubers should be discarded.

The best storage temperature is from 33 to 42 degrees, but temperatures as low as 33 degrees are safe—especially for seed stock. A covered fleece develops in low temperatures

Good ventilation is necessary. By planting the potatoes in slatted bins, the air circulation is increased. It is an excellent idea to raise the floor six inches or more above the ground level to prevent their further deterioration. Two slatted walls are desirable too.

To Trade Is Natural—
To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.
This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.
Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

FALL CULTIVATION

Wet weather over most of Alberta has created a weed problem of unusual magnitude. In fact, in many fields weeds have been the chief factor in keeping harvest operations late, warm weather and plentiful moisture have produced a heavy growth.

In some districts it may be impossible to cope this year with all the weeds, but wherever soil drifting is not a danger, a shallow cultivation is advisable. The real member of the dandelion family is tenacious and will continue to grow unless the cultivator would be suitable implements to use

The removal of weed growth by fall cultivation of land does not cause soil drifting

The kind of weeds in any district, annuals will be killed by the frost of fort winter in any case, but winter annuals, biennials and perennials may or may not be successfully be controlled by fall cultivation.

VANDALS RELEASE 1,000 CAUGHT FOR MIGRATION STUDY

University of Alberta's crow migration experiment, which was to start next month, may be postponed indefinitely because vandals over the week-end opened the door of a building housing about 200 birds, allowing about 125 birds to escape.

Located in the exhibition grounds, Edmonton, the building was being used by Dr. William Rowan, professor of zoology, to house the birds until a permanent one could be built for them on the university campus. About 50 of the crows removed were in the building after the door had been opened

The loss is serious for the university professor. He has spent the greater part of the summer searching for the birds, which he captured in the Tofield area. So many were they that many had to be caught individually

Dr Rowan planned to start his experiment Oct 7, when they were to be treated with increasing hours of artificial light in a large pen he planned to build on the university campus.

In 1939 and 1931, Dr. Rowan was acclaimed for his first crow experiments that led scientists to understand a new theory concerning bird migration habits. He planned to verify his experiments this fall by the same equipment.

He captured the crows and was doing the experiments with funds provided by the Rockefeller Foundation of New York

Whether he will abandon the experiment will depend on whether he can obtain more crows to use as the basis of the experiment

He said that using the annually fine autumn weather the many crows have remained in the west for more than a month the case. Flocks, whose numbers total between 1,000 and 5,000 have been seen in the Tofield and Cooking Lake forest reserve districts.

Dr Rowan said that he would pay farmers at any person bringing him live crows, a price to be determined. He said that he would pay extra charges in cases containing live crows from any parts of the province—if he receives them in time for the experiment start

MEN OF C.M.T.S. CAMPS TO HAVE GOOD EATS

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—Men trained under the Compulsory Military Training Scheme when begins to operate October 9, need not worry about what they will have to eat in camp. They will have "everything from soup to nut." And it will be prepared by real cooks.

The National Defence Department announces that these cooks will be permanent staff on the centres to which they are assigned, after completing a special training course at Camp Borden

During the six weeks course, they are shown how to prepare greases, sanitary and good tasting rations based on recommendations of a committee of scientists and experts of various Provinces through the National Research Council of Canada. The committee has worked out a diet for a balanced ration for each growing body.

WINTERING OF BEES

questions for the wintering of bees are available from the Provincial Apiarist, Edmonton. The experimental station at Beaverlodge has carried out obtaining fatigue and change with which to purchase bees in the United States is one reason why wintering in Alberta is favorable. By retaining as much as possible at home, the bees will remain Canada's war industry.

It has been shown that with proper care bees may be successfully wintered under Alberta conditions.

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, September 30.—Claiming that all interested parents and groups cannot pushing home-head protested against new key curriculum upon which hearings, effective October, 1940, Rev. D. B. Mullen in into protested to Ottawa. "I this action is not cancelled it will discourage boy raising and will intensify the bitter distrust which prevails among those being compelled to place their boys on the packer's doorstep," he informed Hon. J. G. Gardiner.

What amount to free titles on the first five bushels of wheat has been granted the farmer by the province under terms of an order-in-council passed last week. The order gives priority of claim to harvest attaching, including labor charges and it will be validated at the next session of the legislature All stations in many cases are given normal place by the new order, which has won and is seeking the views of boards and bodies. Hon. J. G. Gardiner is looked for in the north. He suggested last week that the old Grand Slave Lake area, too, it is a valuable war-time metal, used to toughen steel.

Edmonton business concerns view with interest the statement made by Dr A W Joliffe, of the geological survey branch, Ottawa, that more attention should be paid to tungsten deposits now in the Yellowknife area. Just returned from a survey in the area Dr. Joliffe said that the tungsten deposits should be looked for in the north. He suggested that the Great Slave Lake area, too, it is a valuable war-time metal, used to toughen steel.

Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, according to John Blue, secretary-manager of the chamber, has been warned of new advances ing this year, and each of the various boards of trade across Canada in the hope of having its customary observances cancelled. All of you should be concentrated on winning the war, said Mr. Blue. "I personally feel that Thanksgiving is close to the armistice celebrations to any case

A minor housing boom is being experienced in Edmonton this year, numbers of small homes being built in the suburban districts City fund inspectors have been busy all summer for the first eight months of this year, building permits have a total of being $155,000 compared with $128,000. About 440 parcels of land have been subdivided this year, having regard only to the claims of each. Lots are filed or sold as have been brought to their knowledge.

NAZI THREAT TO TEXAS EDITOR DISCLOSED TO DIES' COMMITTEE

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 26.—The editor of a German language newspaper here declared today that a German Consul had written him that he was published. The Texas Free Press, reported "in the very same manner the Fuhrer objects to."

The editor, G. G. Neubeuser, said he turned the letter over to the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities.

He asserted that the Consul, Baron Edgar von Spiegel of New Orleans, had sought to make him understand he detests as an American citizen. He came to the United States shortly after the World War.

"I will continue to follow my constant editorial policy of tolerance and condemnation of race hatred and strict adherence to the principles contained in the Bill of Rights," Mr. Neubeuser said he had written in reply to Baron von Spiegel

Mr. Neubeuser said he also received an emptied threat was contained in the letter, written in German. "The Fuhrer declared that Germany in the future will proceed with all means against international propaganda.

"Please be assured that it is very embarrassing to me that I have to write this to you at all, but after what I have read lately in your news paper I consider it my duty to do this, especially if I and my government shall support you further through our organization.

"Baron Edgar von Spiegel."

Mr. Neubeuser did not say to what Baron von Spiegel referred by "support" in the last paragraph of his letter.

DO YOU DO THIS?

A careful study of fire records shows that at least 90 per cent. of fires are preventable. The following examples are given from among the thousands of known causes to show how many fires can start and the facial results that may follow.

A man dropped a cigarette in a rubbish pile in a rooming house and burned to death eleven people.

A man dropped his cigarette in a couch in the lobby of a hotel. Fire resulted at 2 a.m. and resulted in the death of four people

A mother is one of our loading colleges critics for the five hundredth time perhaps, started a fire with coal oil. The fire she started burned to death three children besides herself.

A man dropped a match on a garage floor, walked on and left it. A six-year-old child found it and ignited her clothing which resulted in burns that caused her death a few hours later.

A man attempted to sleep and smoke at the same time—result, he set fire to his bed, was overcome with smoke, and removed in an unconscious state. Only the timely arrival of the Fire department saved him

The council should make some provision for paying the outstanding Mother's Allowance Account, if not now, at least some considerable reduction in this account should be made.

The only other liability is deferred—a schoolroom note and these are being sent to you for.

In spite of the fact that the estimates have been passed and the mill levied who did not pay on July 31st, have not yet paid. Four councillors have handed in their Form "B".

Now gentlemen of the Inspector's Report took exception to the lack of ratepayers' signatures on the pay sheets and I am sorry that there is no improvement in this regard in pay sheets presented this month. You must in fact, one pay sheet examined only contained the ratepayers' signatures instead of seven or eight.

No councillor should accept from his fellow men certainly no Reeve should allow a pay sheet to go before the office that the signatures thereon is correct.

This open fall gives farmers an unusual opportunity to destroy uncountable numbers of bad weeds. A light discing or cultivating of the land in the late fall kills many weeds that started to grow after harvest; and will encourage other weeds to germinate which the winter frosts may later kill.

NEW SERIAL STARTS THIS WEEK

A new serial story starts in this issue of the Mercury. For the past eighteen months we have been running serial stories of different kinds. Stories run by us have dealt with church life, life on the Western prairie, life amid the realms of big time sport, as well as stories of other general characteristics. The object in switching around was to cater to all tastes.

The new story, "Checkerboard Love" by Joseph McCord, is more of a family story and one Mercury readers who follow it week by week will enjoy.

COMMENT ON SEPTEMBER WHEAT SITUATION

The price of gold, the relative values of the important currencies, the British pound, the Canadian dollar and the United States dollar, are all by one means or another now artificially controlled. The price of wheat is controlled on most markets directly or indirectly by Governments; this because the war has caused Governments either to curtail entirely or to control the usual wheat markets of the world. It is quite certain that the amounts that can be shipped from Canada and other exporting countries will be governed entirely by war events as they unfold themselves.

In spite of these necessary wartime restrictions and curtailments, there are, however, several rather surprising things in the world of wheat. One is that regardless of what many supposed would be a serious shortage of elevator space, farmers have actually delivered and been paid for more so far less than 144 million bushels of wheat between Aug 1st and Sept 30th, and, of course, deliveries are going forward daily at probably a greater rate, for larger quotas are being opened up.

Another interesting point is that in spite of the war, the carryovers in markets, and the various blenders, large quantities of wheat are still held from exporting countries in many markets of the world. Canada, for instance, in September alone shipped nine million bushels of wheat and the world — without Australia for which figures are not available — shipped 39 million bushels.—Searle Grain Co., Ltd.

A CHECKERBOARD LOVE

JOSEPH McCORD

Chapter I

Audrey Swan had assumed an unyielding, dignified pose for a young woman of two and twenty summers. Even if there were no one to see and she was partially screened by the trailing branches of a huge willow. She lay flat on her stomach with her cuddled feet aloft, bare shanks tumbling to her knees and exposing a pair of slim lace legs. Her determined little chin was almost touching the limpid pool under a bank of Bear Creek and her right arm was immersed in it very nearly to the shoulder.

"A swell break for the fish!" jibed a drawling voice from across the stream. "Thought I'd caught you and better."

Audrey scrambled into a sitting position. "Oh!" was her startled ejaculation. Then a delighted, "Hiya, Jeff!" With that cordial greeting she smiled. Her nose quivered. It had a ridiculous fashion of doing that when registering pleasure, in addition to being small and slightly turned up.

Meanwhile, her grimacing ertile had mastered down to the water's edge. A tall young man he was, with a brown face and hair that shone like bronze as the sunlight bathed it. His hands were thrust in the pockets of a garishly checked green jacket. A shirt of the same color lay open at the throat. White ducks somewhat rumpled and a pair of leather sandals made up the rest of his informal attire. "Gave you a ring at the house," he volunteered, "but your mother thought you'd gone for a walk. Right away I figured you'd be mooning at the old tryning place I must be a psychic that way."

"That's what you think," Audrey retorted. "I came out here to read where it's cool . . . Just stopped to enjoy a couple of minutes. I didn't even know you were back. Aren't you coming across?"

"Definitely. If I have to swim. Our tree still is across?"

"I wouldn't know. I suppose so." There was a sudden pensive expression in the girl's hazel eyes as she watched Jeffrey Castle turn and stride along the bank. A moment later she glimpsed his shaved jacket through the foliage as he picked his way across a fallen tree trunk that long had done service for a bridge. Almost at once he came up and dropped down cross-legged in front of her, dark eyes alight with pleasure.

"Say, it's good to see you, Cygie! You're rowdier than ever. Maybe I should clasp your hand . . . been a long time you know."

"Yes. It has. But I think it would look pretty stupid to sit in a pasture making hands."

"Use up on me as usual," Jeffrey replied swiftly to his knees and before Audrey realized his design, drew her to him and kissed her. "You did it on," he avowed her amiably as he felt her stiffen resentfully in his embrace.

"I did not!"

"Don't let's argue, darling. It's too warm and we've too much to talk about," he soothed. "I must have it out before the sensation faintly familiar."

"At bad parties. When we didn't know any better."

"Well, I'm not rated new. And it's I does broaden one."

"So it seems. How's Europe?"

"It isn't you get my cards?"

"Rather. They weren't exactly informative." Audrey watched her companion speculatively as he stabbed his cigarette and tossed the butt into the water. When he gave no indication of further conversation, she ventured, "Everybody's expecting that you'll go into your father's office. It will be nice for both of you."

"Yeah?" There was a quizzical look in Jeff's brown eyes. "Between pals, Cygie, I'm on a spot. You know the old gentleman gives most of his personal time to the civic. Of course there's always some practice drifting into the office—routine stuff from old clients and whatnot. But Mac Annie can do the job a heap better. In fact, I doubt if I have enough law to win her confidence."

Audrey was forced to smile at the conceit and the picture it brought to mind, of elderly Anna Dodds who had been in Judge Castle's office almost as long as anybody could remember.

"As a matter of fact," Jeff continued moodily, "I don't get much steamed up over the law. I suppose it's a good enough foundation."

"For what?"

Before he could answer a feminine voice came floating across the creek. "Oh Mr. Jeff, please!" The call came from a young woman in a maid's cap and white ruffled apron.

"What is it, Christine?"

"The operator has been trying to get you, sir. It is a long-distance."

"O.K. Be there in a minute, Bostwerian," he grumbled as he got to his feet.

"What was it you said about the old tryting place?" she inquired dreamily.

"Nothing." Jeff growled. "I say, how about a little drive after dinner?"

"I don't believe I can . . . this evening."

"Fine," he grinned. "I'll come for you at eight." With that he started in the direction of the bridge.

Audrey continued to sit motionless, thinking. It was good to see Jeff again. Almost two years since he had been back home, his father and mother busy followed by another doing Europe in a grand manner. That's what he was in the only child of wealthy parents, instead of the one child of moderate circumstances he seemed to have changed very little, but Audrey had felt a vague disappointment. His pose for her indicated that he expected the two of them would drift into the old easy intimacy of long-ago vacations. Apparently he didn't realize that things were different now.

The Swans' rambling old house stood on six-acre tract that once had been a portion of the Castle estate. Separated only by a line of ranches of Bear Creek. Judge Castle was a wealthy man in his own right and he had married money. Clipped hegetrows enclosed the formal gardens with their foundations and occasional pieces of statuary.

Young Jeffrey Castle was nine— Audrey's senior by more than a year —when he first chanced to see the "new girl" from the next house. And they proved to be a pleasant discovery. She was active and muscular and could throw a ball or bat it three times as far with greater accuracy than Jeff, and could ride bareback as well as top speed without the benefit of saddle or stirrup.

Audrey's passion for hook's was another bond and the two friends spent many an hour in the Judge's library—when he was absent—lying prone on the big bearskin rug before a crackling fire—heads together over some illustrated volume, or reading aloud in turn from favorite dated. It was in one of these books that Jeff chanced to discover that a young swan was a cygnet. From that day, Audrey was "Cygie." Today, it had been strange to hear Jeff use the old name so naturally.

Jeff's first remark, after he had settled Audrey comfortably in the sun-soaked rowdier and started the motor, was a compliment. "I'll say you've outdone yourself in the looks department since I left. Something about a wistful little girl who never smiles . . . Sorry. Bad break. Some of the cracks, and she comes from . . ."

"Your best honest parents," Audrey helped.

"Something like that," Jeff repeated dutifully. "Of course she isn't here much because she isn't home. You are tottering around proudly under a load of tack, most of which they never expect to use. I'm right, Cygie, only you make me sick."

"Sorry. But you see, like a trainer . . . although he's a darned good one. And I'm sort of an exercise boy myself."

"You still make me sick darling. You never were more good at something. What's the man's name?"

"I wouldn't know him."

"I got that phone call," Jeff observed A girl friend in the city. Maybe I'll get to meet your new complex."

"I think it's splendid."

"Her name's Olive Cooper here's fname. Met her in Switzerland. Traveling with her mother who's not so a pleasant person. Odd, you know as to their itinerary sort of fitted in with theirs, so we saw quite a bit of each other There were a good many little things I could do for them and they seemed to appreciate it no end."

Audrey smiled to herself in the gloom. "You didn't have to hide it sigh an elaborate defense. ALBERTA POOL ELEVATOR SPACE

The building program undertaken by Alberta Pool elevators during the current year, in order that patrons might get additional storage space for their deliveries, was revealed in a radio address given by R. D. Purdy general manager, last week.

The program for added space of some 4½ million bushels of grain was as follows:

Twenty one cribbed annexes.

One hundred and forty balloon-type annexes.

The country elevator system, numbering now 434 houses, with the additional annexes can accommodate 19,000,000 bushels.

All the, of course, is incidental to the tremendous task which the unit undergoes every day in preparation for whatever duties it may be called upon to perform. Until such time as the lads get into real action their fighting spirit must be suppressed and in this connection the Legion is serious in performing an essential and highly satisfactory job.

RED CROSS MAKES SECOND APPEAL—

WITHIN A YEAR the Canadian Red Cross Society is making a second appeal for five million dollars. During the twelve months which have passed since the Society's last Dominion wide appeal for funds, stupendous happenings have occurred, happenings which will outlod themselves into the future as being of immense importance. But whatever political repercussions the past year's events may have, there is one thing only too painfully sure, injury, death and destruction have kept pace, step by step with them.

Probably in no other period of history has there been so great a need for the kind of services the Red Cross in general and the Canadian Red Cross in particular are designed to give. All through last winter in France, in England and particularly on the sea and at coastal points, the need for such an organization as the Red Cross was very great. And with the coming of Spring and the Norwegian campaign the demands upon the Red Cross were increased. Then came the withdrawal from France and the terrific losses of material connected therewith. There is almost constant bombing of Great Britain with death and injury to civilian life and property.

One does not need much imagination to visualize the needs of such an organization during time such, as which we are passing through. Neither does one need a very large heart to be prompted into giving some aid to a society whose specific mission is to render succor and aid to injured and distressed people wherever they may be. There are some of us perhaps who would like to live where life is comparatively unendangered by the falling of bombs or no bombs. But we feel quite safe in saying that the great majority of Canadian citizens are deeply thankful that so far, the scourge of modern warfare, indiscriminate bombing, has not reached Canada. If the major international events of the last few years are recalled in memory, it is surprising how many countries have been subjected to bombardment from the air, Spain, China, Poland, Finland, Norway, Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Germany, Great Britain. So far the people of North America has escaped this scourge, which is something they should appreciate very much. Moreover they have escaped it, not as much by anything they have done themselves but by pure accident of birth or location. But the fact that we in Canada have escaped actual bombing and fear of bombing should be an incentive to help those who have not.

The second Red Cross drive of this war will give an opportunity to all citizens of Canada to "lend a hand", in the great humanitarian task the Red Cross is now confronted with. An appeal to farmers of this district direct from the local office is about to be made. It will be suggested that they donate a quantity of their wheat to the association. Wheat given to the Red Cross does not in any way effect the amount a farmer may deliver to the elevator, which makes a gift of wheat by a farmer the most practical and convenient method of giving for him. Wage earners and salaried people could donate cash either as a lump sum or so much per month. Last year the Red Cross had a pledge form the signer of which promised to pay a small sum per month. This is probably the most convenient way for those who are not overburdened with money. By systematic giving they have the assurance that they are doing their share for the alleviation of suffering among those situated less fortunately than they and for the welfare of Canadian Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen on active service.

THE REAL ENEMY—

THE REAL enemy is magnified governmental power; and Americans who strive to build up the power of their own government over the lives and fortunes and property of citizens at the expense of free individual enterprise and responsibility, are just as active and effective attackers of the liberty we seek to defend as are the unfortunate slaves who march in the columns of Europe's tyrants.

Political liberty and economic liberty are inseparable. The man on a government pay roll is free in no sense. A vast majority of people are not on government payrolls. Over the entire world, however, including our country, there is sweeping a revolution designed to place all persons virtually or actually on government pay rolls.

In Europe, save only the United Kingdom, the lights of human freedom have gone out. What put them out was the surrender by the people to the State of the function of providing jobs. Unless our people can understand what the real enemy is, and fortify against it, the war can be lost here in America, whatever may happen abroad and whether attacks upon us from abroad are made or are repulsed or not.—Railway Age.

R. A. F. Wakes Hitler From A Dream Of Conquest

Raids on British Reveal Unexpected Problems Facing Germany

A Neutral Observer's View of the Air-War

by Warren Irvin

Mr. Irvin, noted American writer and broadcaster, and for thirteen years a staff correspondent on the New York Times, spent the first eight months of the war in Berlin as an observer.

The amazing success of the Royal Air force in smashing the raids on British shores has produced an unexpected by-product in Germany. The air war has not yet been won. Other and more immediate fears are almost sure to follow. Germany's air bases through constant bombing have seriously reduced the strength of her aviation. She still has vast reserves; and, when conditions seemed favorable, can be expected to throw them into the balance with utter disregard for planes and men alike. That is the German method.

But at the present time, there can be no doubt as to the importance of the R.A.F.'s achievements. Here, at Dunkirk, British planes and British pilots again have demonstrated their superiority over anything which should become more and more marshalled by the enemy.

Not only have they rendered invaluable service in restoring British morale, but they have proved that they have also dealt another blow to German prestige. Here, as elsewhere at the 1917 level, is likely to be one of the deciding factors in the present war.

It is for this reason that I believe the most important news of the week of the Royal Air Force in the recent raids on Britain, has been its effect upon German plans for invasion of England. Many people, I know, do not believe that Hitler ever has, or ever intended, to invade Great Britain.

I do not share this view. Eight months of wartime experience in Germany have convinced me that when the Nazis boasted they would be in London by August 15th they were speaking truth.

Another winter of war is not a pleasant prospect for the German people. Memories of the last winter are still too fresh in their minds; memories of hunger, and I have myself seen evidence of privation and suffering; of abbreviated rations. From the poorer sections of the big cities crowding in to railway stations in an effort to get away.

If Germany hopes to win this war, she must overcome Britain, quickly and completely. But how she can attempt to do so; how she can even hope to overcome Britain's sea supremacy in the air, I do not see. Nor does anyone else. And that the Royal Air Force has proved conclusively that Germany, despite numerical superiority, is far from enjoying mastery in the air.

They Found To Weak Spot

The object of the recent raids is fairly obvious. There appears to be no question of it. They were designed to feel out the strength of the British defences; to find, if possible a weak spot, which could be made the focal point of attack. End each a spot been detected, mass assaults, with thousands of planes participating, probably would have been accompanied by invasions barges and the like in the best Nazi fashion known to German technique.

But with each passing day, the difficulties of such operations become more and more improbable. By August 15th, I believe, they were definitely impossible.

German aircraft production has been curtailed, though it is being forced drought. All available work, I am told, is being done.

True, Germany now has at her disposal the aircraft factories of France. But, even should she be able to operate them, unless she sees Frenck workers, and that can only be done at the risk of sabotage.

I don't know exactly how many planes the Germans have. Officials of the Propaganda Ministry assured me they had 30,000 at the beginning of the war. That, I think is an exaggeration. My guess would be something around 20,000, including commercial and training planes. But even if I doubt if the number of first-line German warplanes exceeds 6,000. Germany's Last Machines and Men

From the reliable German reports I know that about 800 German planes were destroyed in the Polish campaign. Losses in Norway probably did not exceed 200, and may have been considerably less. In Holland, Belgium and France—including the sevties at Dunkirk—the Germans may have lost another 1,500; and I believe their losses, in and around the British Isles since the start of the war, are somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,200.

So far as the planes are concerned, these losses, while considerable, are not unsurmountable. They may have been compensated by new construction. But the pilots are not so easily replaced as the planes. That is another matter.

Germany is now too well supplied with pilots—fighter pilots in particular. Young men are needed for this work; but young Nazis don't make the best pilots. They have been too regimented; their individuality has been stifled; they are not accustomed to thinking for themselves. And while they may perform brilliantly against undefended towns and helpless civilians, they are quickly ended when confronted by pilots of superior skill and courage.

Hence, as regards the future, the odds are all in Britain's favour. Britain's production is rising steadily; and it has behind it the production of the United States, which is also increasing at unbelievable strides. Against these, Germany cannot hope to compete. It is only a question of time when even numerical superiority in the air must pass to the Allied side; numerical superiority in pilots, as well as planes, because the R.A.F.'s advantage in trained pilots from the Dominions in addition to those supplied by the United Kingdom alone.

The Immediate Position

But these are matters that concern the future, and we are living in the present. I have already said that I believed the most important result of the recent raids was the effect upon German plans, and have pointed out that this is bound to influence the German attitude.

I know that in the German camps to minimize their own losses, while exaggerating the losses on the other side.

Years of experience as a newspaper correspondent have made me somewhat sceptical of official figures. From these figures, I have reached the conclusion that when it errs, the R.A.F. generally errs on the other side.

British Conversation

Not so long ago I met a British major, in charge of a control station, who showed me the German he had tabulated for his group. On one particular day, when official figures showed that seven bases were hit, for all the British Isles, the major's figures showed that his group alone had accounted for 168 German planes.

Of course it is possible that some of the pilots in this group may have been stretching things a bit. But then it's also possible that some of them may have been over-modest. His own R.A.F. pilot of whom I heard recently.

He took off alone from his field on the attack five Nazi raiders, and when he returned, reported that he had brought down two.

"Two! Why, how did you manage three down?" he was asked.

"Well", he said, "I saw one drop completely out of control, and I saw another crash into the sea."

"And what of the three others?" his commanding officer wanted to know.

"Oh," replied the pilot, "I couldn't find them anywhere. They were all in little bits and pieces."

THE KINGDOM OF THE NETHERLANDS HELPING BRITAIN

A fund has been established in Britain for assisting the planes and other war material for the Netherland Government which is aiding in the defence of Great Britain.

Prince Bernhard has accepted the Presidency of the Fund and, acting upon advice of the Netherland Minister of Defence, His Royal Highness has determine how the money will be spent. The initial call for contributions has been issued among thousands of pounds from Netherlanders, both in Europe and the overseas Empire.

All free Netherland subjects, many others whose fathers came from Holland or who feel bonds of friendship for the country, will no doubt wish to contribute. Cheques or money orders should be made payable to His Excellency, F.E.H. Grosmans, 18 Range Road, Ottawa, the Netherland Minister at Ottawa.

Those preferring to do so may send contributions to the Vice-Consul of the Netherlands at Edmonton, W. Dirken Craig, McLeod Building.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By R. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

September 28th is the anniversary of the landing of the Normans on the shores of Britain in 1066. The Normans mustered 3,000 vessels and 60,000 men on the French Coast during August, and in September, as a ruse, pretended to disperse their fleet and army.

The Normans then arranged for a force of Norwegians to invade the northern part of Britain. The Saxon King Harold took his army from the South Coast to repel the Norwegians, and while he was doing this the Normans landed at Pevensey in Sussex unopposed. Harold, however, had to rest on the South Coast autumn days before they were ready to fight, and then on October 14th, 1066, was fought the Battle of Hastings. The Britons lost because they were unable in time to concentrate their ships and soldiers which had gone north to fight the Norwegians.

The Battle of Hastings saved the seeds which finally blossomed into the British Empire, one of the branches of which is Canada, which became the wheat granary of Britain; and now Hitler is trying to destroy, on the South England Coast the great British Empire started on that very spot by the Normans in 1066.

Hitler likes anniversaries, so we must watch out during the month of October.—Senate Grain Co.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees here. There are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

HOG CARCASS GRADES WEIGHTS AND CLASSES

Now that carcass grading of hogs is the official method in Canada, a review of the regulations will show that they have been drawn up to assist the farmer in producing the finest bacon hogs at the greatest profit. The various grades for quality are A, B, C, D, and E.

Grade A. This is the most desirable carcass for all purpose and must be of the best quality. In producing this grade, it is necessary for the farmer to watch the weights and finish. There is only one class in this grade —Class 1. The weight is from 140 to 170 lb. The shortest length of side to conform with the regulations is 29 inches, the maximum fat on the shoulder, 2 inches, and the maximum fat on the loin, 1½ inches. The standards set for Grade A apart from the carcass being of the best quality are that the shoulder must be ballanced in weight in relation to the ham; the belly must be thick and of even width throughout, with full flank; the ham full fleshed, evenly covered with fat and of good shape; the back must have the fat firm and of even thickness within the variations allowed, and the quality must include a firm white fat with proper texture. It thinning and fat through out the carcass.

Grade B. This is a useful grade and may vary from Grade A in any weight class as last down in the regulations. The grade has two classes—1, 2, and 3. The weight for Class 1 is 135 to 175 lb. minimum length, 29 to 30 inches, and maximum fat on shoulder 2 ½ inches, and maximum lean fat 1½ to 2 inches, all measurement according to weight. Class 2 weight, 125 to 134 lb.; minimum length 27 inches, maximum fat shoulder, 2 inches; maximum fat loin 1¼ inches. Class 3—weight, 176 to 185 lb.; minimum length 30 inches; maximum fat shoulder inch, 2¾ inches.

Grades. All classes must be well finished and of good quality of flesh ing with firm fat. The grade is divided into three classes. The weight for Class 1 is 135 to 175 lb.; minimum fat shoulder, 2¼ to 3 inches and maximum fat loin, 1¾ to 2¼ inches, both measurements according to weight Class 2—Weight, 120 to 134 lb., maximum fat shoulder, 2¼ inches and maximum fat loin, 1¾ inches.

Grade D. All classes may contain overfat, slightly unfinished and slightly soft carcasses. There are three classes of the same weight ranges as Grade C.

Grade E. Includes unfinished or soft carcasses, rejects or condemned carcasses, carcasses that have suffered physical damage, and carcasses from sucking pigs and stags. Other grades are: Lights, Heavies, Extra Heavies, and Sows that have raised sows or more litters. Weight for Lights, 110 lb. and under; weight Heavies, 186 to 205 lb. weight, Extra Heavies, 206 lb. and over; and Sows, Class 1 carcasses of good flesh throughout and Class 2, carcasses that are overfat or very thin.

Settlement according to carcass grade involves a premium for Grade A while the basic price is applied to B1. All other grades and classes are subject to deduction below the basic price, according to their commercial values.

A copy of the regulations may be obtained by writing the Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

TOO LATE

General Douglas MacArthur, former United States army chief of staff, has added this momentous message from Manila to the Committee to Defend America by aiding the Allies, New York:—

"You have naked my military opinion as to whether the time has come for America to give consistent and further aid to England in the fight for civilization. The history of failure in war can almost be summed up in two words, too late. Too late in comprehending the deadly purpose of a potential enemy. Too late in estimating the mortal danger. Too late in preparedness. Too late in uniting all possible forces for resistance. Too late in standing with one's friends.

"Victory in war results from no mysterious alchemy or wizardry, but

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

It is seldom that the West has had such a fine open fall giving the opportunity, which as we should many farmers are cutting, of doing some fall work on those fields which need cultivating.

Since harvest many weed plants have attained a fair growth, but those young plants are still weak, and as a light disking or cultivation would destroy vast quantities of them.

Then, too, the same discing or cultivation would start many weed seeds to germinate which up to now have been lying dormant. The young plants, from seeds which only now start to germinate, will be tender; the cold and ice of the winter, therefore will destroy many of them. All in all, then, farmers who can do a little work on their land before freeze-up have the opportunity of destroying uncountable millions of the farmers' main enemy, and child rubber of income—weeds.

Two years ago the "Crop Testing Plan", it will be remembered, made a test with 450 plots over the prairies to see how many bushels per acre weeds stole from the wheat crop. Half the plots were weeded and half were not weeded. The plots that were not weeded averaged 18 per cent less yield than the plots which were weeded. Eighteen per cent on a certain loss of income to the farmer.

...ctively upon the commercialization of superior force at the critical points of conflict. Up to the present time it is said has been the prayer of every Commander in Chief. It is the secret of the past successes of the axis powers. In the war it is their main hope for continued and ultimate victory. The greatest strategical mistake in British history will be made if America fails to recognize the vital element of the permits again the writing of that fatal epitaph "too late." Such co-ordinated help as may be required, and proper for our leaders should be synchronized with the British effort so that the English speaking peoples of world will not be broken in detail. The vulnerability of shipbuilders will disappear before only of effort, not too late, not tomorrow, but today."

Of all the manifold services performed by the Red Cross, and one which is never seen by the Canadians whose contributions to the Society make it possible, that group of duties which originated during the last war under the category of Information and Records is distinctly feminine. Every phase of the work is done by women, hundreds of volunteers who are gathered from Canadians in all parts of the world, from women who have husbands or brothers in the service, or from British women with connections more or less close to Canada.

Originally undertaken during the Great War as a service to Canadian soldiers who were unable to ascertain the whereabouts of men overseas, the work quickly reached gigantic proportions and attained official status when the War Office assigned the task to the little group of volunteers. Recently, its duties were so greatly extended or enlarged upon so quickly as possible and notify relatives, a work which would have showed or hampered the army's official workers in their normal duty of caring for wounded.

In the rush of handling casualties, every British man has little time to notify next-of-kin of more than the bare fact that a man has been wounded, killed in action, or taken prisoner of war. The worry and anxiety of folks at home, the Red Cross set up in London in 1914, where it remains to that hospital, a friendly letter is sent to the folks at home explaining in detail other letters which are written for him if he is wholly incapacitated. Today that work is being done by a wide-flung organization in England which has a central office at 39 Berkley Square, London.

In the course of this work, many men were found who had been reported missing. So many were located by the Red Cross that the War Office endowed the organization with the job of keeping track of missing men, because many such men were found to be prisoners-of-war with whom the Red Cross alone was able to make contact. So thoroughly was the work done that the organization soon had assumed the extra duty of being the sole official organization through which prisoners could be vouched with parcels of clothing and food.

Today, in England, the work is being done exactly as it was during the Great War, with the additional services of a Comforts Department which supplies every man with a bag of comforts (made by Red Cross Jumeys in Canada) and such things as newspapers as soon as he reaches hospital; a Letters Department which provides women in every hospital to write relatives and keep them posted on the progress of a man; Hospital Visiting, which sees that every man in hospital has a visitor every day who will get things he needs and other similar branches.

Hundreds of Canadian women devote their full time to the work, aided by others who have a personal interest in Canada. Typical of such women is the Hon. Mrs. Piers Legh who spent several years with her husband when he was aide-de-camp to Canada's Governor General. She made a Department which has a home waiting for every Canadian convalescent when he emerges from hospital, so that he can rest amid homelike surroundings in the country.

John Dower, chairman of the Chimsons' Committee, a civic group in the industrial field, told the annual meeting that elections should be stopped for the duration of the war. "The Dominion government is appealing to private citizens to restrict spending so that funds may be made available for the use of men." he said. "It must be believed there was no vital civic need for a municipal election was not necessary. He stressed that he did not suggest the Civic Committee should suspend the Civic Committee government, however.

HUMANITY HAS STRUCK IT'S TENTS"

At one stroke the thousand-year-old British Constitution was abolished by the British House of Commons...

It was done by the passage of an act that could be placed on a sheet of notepaper.

In a few hours the capitalistic organization of society was undermined.

Profit as a motive in human association was suspended.

Labor relinquished cherished rights and privileges as its contribution.

This momentous change heralds the passing of an era.

Humanity has once again struck its tents and is on the march.

Join the trend and aid in placing the co-operative movement strongly in the vanguard of a new hope.

Cornhill Council Wish To Improve Weed Situation

At the regular meeting of the Council of the Municipal District of Cornhill the topic of weeds again came up for consideration. A letter had been received from Department of Lands and Mines in reply to a letter sent by the secretary according to instructions received from the council at the last meeting. The Department said they leased as much of the inhabitove land as they could but letters for grazing purposes at 2 cents per acre and hoped to get the land place of weeds that way. Council thought it was a useful topic to bring up at the annual A.A.M.D. convention.

The minutes and accounts passed for payment at the last meeting were read and formally adopted.

The question of delegates attending the annual convention of the A.A.M.D. came up for consideration. The convention will be held November 20th and Dunn Section as to the appointment of delegates from Carbill M.D. will be made at the next meeting.

The Department of Agriculture are requesting the Forage Crop Plan. They requested that the Forage Crop account be brought up to date. This had already been done.

Council also decided to have seed grain distribution sent your purchased by the government and the money in the bank, $756.00, turned over to the government for this purpose.

Letter from Hon. Mr. McKinnon re advances on grain held by farmers. Mr. McKinnon wrote a very nice letter saying that the government was doing all in its power to assist the farmers by increasing the quota wherever possible. They hoped to

Chapter II

SYNOPSIS

Jeffrey Castle rounds off his college education with a year in Europe and returns to his home in Pamville, where he is expected to practise law with his father Jeffrey seeks out his childhood friend and neighbor, Audrey Swan, to announce that "guys" are confident to her his destination in work in his father's office. Jeff in their hurry to get out of the house in Kitty's car, knocked over Grant the weather forecaster says she can't think of a good excuse

"Excuse" What the heck are you talking about now ""

"Your mother."

Bringing Mrs Castle's name into this discussion with Jeff had been much more difficult than Audrey Swan anticipated It shouldn't have been necessary to remind Jeffrey that she hadn't been in his home for several years, nor that the lady from the big house on the hill had seldom found it convenient to recognize her young neighbor. At least Audrey thought so But it wouldn't be very sporting to tell him about it. Instead she waited a little tensely for the explosion she expected her remark to produce.

To her surprise, what she received was a mild "I don't believe my trip abroad did you much good, Cyp. I've invited you to partake before at my house. This is my party and I'm making you to be my guest. If you don't want to come or think you wouldn't have a good time . .."

"Oh, Jeff! Please . . ." Audrey caught his sleeve in a quick little gesture of contrition. "You know didn't mean that! I'd love to come, of course. But don't you see?"

"Naturally not."

But things are different now. They can't help being. It's beastly of me, I know, but you did just tell me so that your mother . . ."

"Invited Olive," Jeff broke in sharply. "Sure she did, That's different. Mother never has met her and she's known you for years.

The past hour had been so definitely like old times that Audrey had the heart to tell Jeff that they were nearly forgotten her resolve to establish a new and restored feeling for this companion who lurked her arm in his as they mounted the porch steps of the Swan home. It was a familiar part of their coming home ritual. The same as Jeff's reloading her at the door with a careless "Be back for Miss Swan."

Tonight, he dropped her arm but waited long enough for a quiet reminder. "Your chair will be at the table Friday night. In case it rains, I'll send the car. If you let me down, I'll know . . ."

"I won't, Jeff."

Anthony Swan was as English as Westminster, to use a frequent expression of his daughter. A slight man with a fresh complexion and keen blue eyes. His curling hair was touched with gray and receded a trifle at the temples, dropping on his cheeks in crinkly cropped side burns. There was something in its general trimness that suggested horses.

The Swan acreage constituted a miniature stock farm with its well designed stables and sheds, from which fences everywhere, a half-mile exercise track. Anthony had come to the States as a racing trainer of some reputation, but had left the tracks a dozen years before to establish a business of his own. He reasoned, he observed gently, as he had a limited number of fine saddle animals bought and sold others, and stabled and trained horses for patrons as well as being a riding master whose services were in demand. Martha, his wife, was a New Englander. A mild-mannered but efficient little person and much the better manager of the two.

"Your mother says Mr. Jeffrey is home," Anthony offered. "How is the lad?"

He must have been across since a year." Anthony went on "Perville will soon small to him. I wasn't like Jeff to do such a thing wouldn't doubt "

Audrey inserted a slice of bread in the toaster and closed it with an abstracted flash

"Do you want some work this morning?" Anthony asked. "One of the Judge's racehorses came over last night with the brown mare we sold Mr. Jeffrey the foal cantered home. You remember. Eleven?

"What's the matter with her?"

"Not a thing in the world save she hasn't been ridden in a long time Never by a woman, I take it."

"I get you. Abe's going to be ridden by a woman and you're supposed to guarantee that she'll take it with out too much fuss." Audrey smiled wryly "You don't care if your daughter's child breaks her neck finding out do you Eleven wasn't born for fences, if I remember."

"I've no fear for you on that more or any other"

"Sure, dear, I was only feeling Be glad to I'll change and come down as soon as I've finished my toast and your paper."

Martha Swan appeared from the kitchen Inscrutable as a fresh piece ham house dress, she came to the and sat down behind the urn to produce.

Mrs. Swan's clear brown eyes studied the girlish face closely before she observed: "I didn't hear you come in last night. Did you have a good ride?"

"You bet I wasn't late . . about ten thirty, I imagine."

"I guess it seemed pretty much like old times to have Jeffrey drop in the way he used to."

Silence, then Audrey thoughtfully crumbled a bit of toast, "I don't expect it or want it to be from now on. We'll always be good friends, but he's home to stay now, so far as I know. It won't be running in the way he used to in vacation time."

"Maybe but I view with pessimism."

Audrey was in her room getting into her shirt and jodhpurs when she heard the telephone in the lower hall ring and, after an interval, her mother answering. The words, "Hold the line a minute, I'll call Audrey," brought the latter running down the stairs in her stocking feet, with the familiar part of their coming home ritual. The same as Jeff's reloading her at the door with a careless "Be back for Miss Swan."

Audrey nodded and put the receiver to her ear. She identified herself briefly, only to hear a "Thank you. Just one moment please."

Then the voice of another woman —gracious, well-modulated. "This is Mrs. Castle speaking."

Audrey barely suppressed a gasp of amazement when she realized that Jeffrey's mother was at the other end of the wire, but recovered her composure sufficiently to respond in what she hoped was a tone of pleasant surprise "Oh, yes! How are you, Mrs. Castle?"

"Quite well, thank you, I do hope you will pardon this very early call, but perhaps you noticed in the papers that Jeffrey has returned from abroad. I am aware that this is unofficially informal, but I want you to dine with us Friday evening, my dear."

"Thank you my dear Good bye." Audrey dropped the telephone in its cradle. "Well, that's doubly settled a business of his own. He reasoned," she observed gently, as she turned to start her mother was just behind her, and added, "and others, too."

"Audrey, Swan! That was Mrs. Castle! Really, wasn't it? What do you mean?"

"Nothing. Mom I was speaking about Jeff's horse."

"She invited you to something didn't she?"

"Dinner on Friday."

"Well, for goodness' sake!"

"That puts it very concisely," her daughter approved primly as she ascended the stairs for her boots. It certainly had called for that. But Mrs. Cooper, or whoever she was, was saying things to Miss Swan having that she had been so anxious to meet her, that Jeffrey had spoken so frequently about her. Gradually the hate cleared and Audrey found herself trying valiantly to surrender the enthusiastic account Jeff must have rendered.

But it was a relief to find Vic Quinn barging up alongside. Audrey felt better. Still more so at the touch of a hand on her arm and the booming voice of the Judge

CANADIAN RED CROSS

Behind the story of the evacuation from Dunkirk, which military writers describe as one of the great feats of military history, lies a record of accomplishment which was based on preparedness and which was made possible only through the generosity with which the Canadians had responded, long months earlier, to the appeal of the Canadian Red Cross for Funds.

During the long period of stalemate which preceded the German drive through Belgium and Holland, when it seemed to the average person that lack of hostilities must have produced little drain on Red Cross reserves thousands of workers were engaged in the task of preparing for any emergency. Millions of articles such as bandages, dressings, hospital bed gowns and sheets, woollen wearing apparel, medical supplies, mobile X-ray machines and numerous other things, were made or purchased and shipped to Britain All of it was made or secured according to the scientific requirements of military authorities and was based on long experience.

In England, the organization established by the Canadian Red Cross, acting in concert with the Director of British Medical Services, acquired warehouses and depots and stored them against the day of its need. Motor trucks were obtained to handle its shipment, volunteer crews were trained and made ready to load them when it was needed. No idea existed as to the time, the place or occasion when it would be needed. The authorities merely said that when the time arrived, they would provide an Ensilon, volunteers would be called to help civilian casualties and tremendous quantities of supplies would be needed by both civilians and soldiers.

Then came Dunkirk. With stupefying swiftness a British Army, together with thousands of French, Belgian and Netherlands forces, were forced to retreat from Flanders, leaving behind all their stores of medical supplies, hospital equipment, clothing and other reserves. Four hundred thousand men, with thousands of wounded among them, flooded into England. The emergency which had been anticipated and provided for by the Canadian Red Cross bore the brunt of the load because the British Red Cross had sent the bulk of its material to France.

But those preparedness was vindicated at this time. Night and day, men and women toiled, pouring from the warehouses the materials which were needed. The Red Cross workers in English depots handled each day as many as 80,000 bandages, 10,000 pairs of socks, 5,000 pairs of pyjamas, 25,000 dressings. The quantities supplied British authorities far exceeded all figures. When these balances were asked for by the British Red Cross officials, Canada responded with 175 fully equipped vehicles. In every instance, Canada's generosity has been able to fill the demands for tremendous quantities of things.

BANK OF MONTREAL REPORT

General—The year 1940 goes upon record as a year of good crops in Canada as a whole and as a year of extraordinarily good crops in the Prairie Provinces, where the wheat yield is the second largest in history and may prove, when returns are complete, to be actually the largest. To this general picture there have been local exceptions, certain crops in Ontario having been adversely affected by cold, wet weather and certain crops in British Columbia by shortage of moisture during the growing season. For the Prairie Provinces preliminary estimates place this year's total wheat crop an slightly below that of the record production of 1928. The grain is generally high grade. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates wheat production of the three Prairie Provinces at 544,000,000 bushels, which is 71,481,000 bushels larger than the third largest crop, that of 1939, and compares with a ten-year average of 307,-611,000 bushels. The estimated average wheat yields by Provinces follow; Manitoba, 22.2 bushels, Saskatchewan, 14.7 bushels, Alberta 23.4 bushels. The 1940 wheat acreage in the Prairie Provinces, officially reported at 27,746,000 acres, is the largest on record and is more than 1,000,000 acres in excess of the record 1939 crop. Prices are generally sufficient. Production of oats is now estimated at 329,-500,000 bushels and of barley at 89,-000,000 bushels. Threshing is virtually finished in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. In Alberta operations have been delayed by frequent rains, but threshing is now about 75 per cent completed. Most marketings have been affected by movement restrictions but from August 1st to October 15th, inclusive, deliveries to country elevators totalled 156,721,-000 bushels, compared with 258,198,-000 bushels in the same period last year. In Quebec Province well up to average yields are reported of hay, grain, roots, apples, small fruits, tobacco and maple products. Early harvesting has been rapid and generally satisfactory. Fall ploughing is progressing. This is not a trade association but a business, busy with delicious juice. Eat one or three of these apples every day — they're good for you! To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other pieces of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

THE FIGHT AGAINST WEEDS—

THERE ARE MANY things about nature we do not understand. For instance it is sometimes difficult to make up one's mind as to whether a certain thing is sent by nature to be of assistance to humanity during its comparitively brief stay in this vale of tears or sent to be just a plain nuisance. A kind of whip to spur us into activity when too easy going would dull our efforts. Weeds are what we have in mind just now and while there is no question as to weeds being an infernal nuisance we leave it to individual opinion as to whether they were sent as a help or hindrance to humanity as a whole. Certainly to the present day agriculturist they are no help, for weeds rob his soil of its fertility and moisture, reduce the yield of his paying crops, spoil his grades by weed seeds getting mixed in with his harvested grain and generally plays havoc with his entire agricultural effort. Moreover weeds have a fertility of propagation and vitality of life that is the despair of many a hard working farmer. Weeds have been known, when allowed to go unchecked for a period of years to actually force farmers off their land. In other words weeds have won the fight for possession of the soil's fertility.

Regulations are hard to live down or live up to. The other day an entire paragraph to the district told us that he understood Cornhill was one of the best managed municipalities in the province. The statement was made in casual conversation, there was no bouquet throwing. But it is also considered that Cornhill and adjoining municipality were the worst weed infested municipalities in this part of the province. There is, however an explanation for this. Within the two municipalities referred to there are scores and scores of lakes and the shores of these lakes have proved to be ideal for the propagation of certain types of noxious weeds. The land in question comes under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests and there has been constant criticism of the department by farmers in close proximity to the lakes. They claim that there is little use of them working to clear their own land of weeds when government land in close proximity is infested. The department we understand desire to lease these lands for grazing purposes, and in turn urge the lessees to keep them clean as regards weeds. This is shifting the responsibility from the the department to the lessee as regards lands under lease but there are no doubt many scores that are not under lease on which in season crops of noxious weeds are growing. This is not a tirade against the department, government officials did not go to lakeshores and plant seeds to annoy farmers. But we are trying to show that the department has a definite responsibility as regards these unleased lakeshores and until the department does something really worthwhile farmers in the immediate vicinity of lakeshores feel that their efforts are at least partly wasted.

Of course there are many weeds that do not originate from lakeshores. Everywhere where land is cultivated a constant battle against weeds must be waged. And like armies in the field, weak places in the line imperil the cause of victory. One careless farmer may undo the work of a dozen careful ones. "Eternal vigilance is the price of safety", applies to many things but to none does it apply more forcibly than to the eradication of weeds.

HE MET THE TEST—

One day the manager of the Carnegie steel works went to the head of the draughting department and said, "I want your best man."

"We have no best man," was the reply. "They are all good."

The next day an order was issued stating that, in order to complete a certain piece of work, all of the draughtsmen would be required to work two hours overtime each day for several weeks without extra pay. The following morning the manager asked the draughting-room chief how the men were taking the new order.

"They are all complaining about it," was the reply, "with the exception one man."

"Let me have that man," requested the manager.

The young man thus singled out proved to be an exceptionally capable and energetic worker, and under the watchful eye of the works manager began a rapid and steady advancement which eventually led to the presidency of the company. This was the able and greatly admired steel magnate, Charles Schwab.

THAT LIGHT—

Robert Francis

The lights go out one after one
And others may be going soon,
But not the stars and not the sun
And not the little mirror-moon.

The lights man makes man may put out
But there is light he cannot dim,
And through the midnight of his doubt
That light will shine down on him.

THE PRESS UNDER THE NAZI YOKE

Newspapers in Occupied Territories Told What to Write

By J. A. Spender

To ascertain the truth about life in German occupied territory or territory in which German terrorism is at work is almost impossible at the present time. What is possible, however, is to be on guard against perversions of the truth disseminated daily under cover of German or German prompting.

It may help in this if we consider the various methods adopted. These differ as occupied countries become more completely subdued.

In Occupied Territory—

In the occupied countries what the Germans would prefer would be to keep established and highly respectable newspapers in existence and to dictate to them what news they shall publish and what opinions they shall express.

But they discover that highly respected journalists will not consent to be used in this manner. The choice will de is to refrain from operating or suppressed altogether. Sometimes and they often qualify this negative attitude by consenting to write the coercer perceives to have an anti-German tendency. They are then subject to the usual military censorship and if this does not bring them to heel, they are suppressed. Many newspapers employing them suppressed.

Holland—

There is no censorship in Holland" said the Nazi Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, soon after the occupation. "Instead, what Freedom." papers are supposed to take account of the new situation."

The hint seems not to have been taken as quickly as was expected, for in a few weeks Holland was also recalled "Council of Enlightenment", with the organization of a Propaganda Company, a speech in which he warned the Dutch Newspaper Proprietors' Society that they must not "misuse their freedom" in connection with German affairs.

Belgium—

Belgium was made, but by the Germans, who proceeded to suppress three Dutch newspapers for a period of eight weeks on the ground that "they had systematically maintained an unfriendly attitude to the occupiers and had been unable to cease their one-sided propaganda in favour of the Allies."

Their offence apparently was that they failed to publish certain German White Book which endeavoured to prove that the Allies had been guilty of aggressive designs against Holland and Belgium. One of the suppressed papers was the Leipzig Conservative daily, the Standard, edited by Dr. Cellin, who was for many years Prime Minister of the Netherlands.

Denmark—

The precedure has been the same in Denmark where the newspapers were told to carry on but warned that any expression of anti-German feeling or contradiction of the official German statements would be made by public feeling in Denmark would expressed itself in current journalism. They were forbidden to mark news as coming from German sources, and the slightest freedom of comment brought the military censorship at least three heads. But the one thing the Censor could not do was to induce the Danish public to read the papers that he thought suitable. Their circulation fell, their readers turned to the Swedish papers which the invader tried in vain to smoke out.

Norway—

In Norway explicit instructions were issued to the newspapers that they must not give as an independent for obeying opinion in the manner laid down by the German News Bureau. They were forbidden to print war reports coming from countries hostile to Germany, to support any cause so made by statesmen, generals, or members of the Royal families in those countries, or anything else "likely to cause friction between the German troops and the Norwegian people". On the other hand German war reports had to be well displayed.

France—

In France the difference between occupied and unoccupied territory offered a problem which did not arise new opportunity to the Germans' manipulation of the Press.

Many well known Paris papers refused publication when the Germans entered the city, others, like the Matin, the Paris Soir, and the Dernier Nouvelles du Paris, were removed and turned in German men. Under its new management the Matin became violently anti-Jewish and anti-British.

Sometimes the means of controlling were used who were known to Frenchmen not to be living in France but would be supposed by foreigners

TEA IS BECOMING FAVOURITE DRINK OF TROOPS ABROAD

Ottawa, Oct. 15— Canadian soldiers overseas have developed a fondness for tea and are imbibing in the national beverage with all the Old Country with typical British enthusiasm.

Tea drinking has become such a custom among the men, in fact, that the overseas organization of the C.A.-soldiers Legion War Services is putting into operation early next week another mobile van to follow the troops during route marches and night manoeuvres when they are away from their new regimental kitchens. Hot tea, which is served free of charge, is greatly appreciated, especially now that cooler weather has arrived.

According to Captain Charles W Evans, overseas manager of the C.L.W.S., the van will also carry edition Legion War Services in pamphlet form and finally a copy of the Maple Leaf, official overseas daily newspaper published in the occupied territory. Both are directly under German control.

The case is somewhat different in Holland where the Dutch Nazi newspapers appear to have allowed themselves more liberty. But the difficulty is that the Dutch will not read them. The Censor an opportunity of turning the Nazi Press against itself.

The German-controlled Matin in Paris has recently complained bitterly that the Parisians have become unaccepted and that the newspapers which are providing "the only English news". Others deride or discredit the Anglo Government and contrast its hospitality unfavourably with German efficiency.

Nevertheless the special purposes of these manoeuvres is not easy at any moment, but we may take it that misleading and misinformation are the general objects in view.

Neutral Countries—

The neutral countries provide a field for German propaganda. In the Nazi propagandist. In these there are German-controlled newspapers, with little or no circulation which can be quoted as if representative of public opinion.

This is an old German trick which has been played all over the world since the days of Bismarck, but the Nazis have developed systematic and profuse in their expenditure of money in its development than their predecessors.

The general object is to present periodic hearty to be friendly to the Allies as shocked or depressed at their proceedings and in despair about their prospects. Those are details come to judgment..

But in many neutral countries such as Switzerland and Sweden there are many honest and courageous journalists who write what they think about Hitler and Nazi Germany. This, however, makes their performance in diplomatic brownbeating and threatening. So the Nazis refuse to believe that Governments cannot control newspapers if they choose to do so.

Staunchly as some of these governments have upheld the freedom of their press, the natural desire of journalists not to make trouble for them has undoubtedly kept plain speaking on the side of British which is bound in Europe. For full and frank appreciations of opinion by neutral observers we have to look across the Atlantic.

A Warning—

The general conclusion is that the Nazi stranglehold of the Press is almost complete in Germany. Nothing can come out of France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark or Norway except with the consent of the German Censor; much that pretends to be impartial neutral opinion is of German authorship.

The object of the Nazi propagandist is to deceive and mystify, and the exposure of the falsity of the facts he alleges deters him in his pursuit of it. He has continued to repeat that Churchill ordered the sinking of the Athenia and that Mr. Chamberlain secretly attempt to assassinate Hitler, and apparently he still hopes that perpetual repetition may cause these stories to be believed.

No proof to the contrary will prevent him from multiplying the losses of British ships or aircraft by five or twelve or any figure that may serve to him. It is enough for him if he causes some neutral or British observer to doubt the veracity of the British figures.

The only safe rule is to accept nothing in which his hand may be suspected at its face value. About all this the question to ask is not whether it is true, but why he says it.

A PLEASANT AND FERTILE LAND

In song and story for over 2000 years Britain has been lauded as being a pleasant and fertile land This good reputation, however, has never excited envy in the hearts of other peoples who lived in less kindly countries, and so from time to time Britain has been invaded.

The Greeks in 350 B.C. looked upon Britain and commented on its fertility. Julius Caesar invaded it in 55 B.C. and the Romans then ruled and occupied it for about 450 years, for a longer time than Canada has been known, and for almost three times as long as the United States has been a nation. The Picts and Scots from time to time raided Britain's fertile fields. The Angles and Saxons came in 448, as invited visitors for a "week-end" fighting party as to speak, and have remained ever since. The Danes came from time to time during the next 600 years, and were bought off for such each time, and finally in 1016 even the Danes came to stay and gave us the famous King Canute in 1066 the Normans came and have lived in England since. From time to time groups of Norwegians and Swedes raided the country and liked it so much that they forgot to return home. The Dutch made great efforts to occupy England, and actually succeed into the Thames and burned some British ships. Phillip of Spain sent his Armada to occupy the country, many of his ships were wrecked on the shores of South-western England, his Spanish sailors stayed there and their descendants are part of the British race today.

It was Napoleon Bonaparte's great dream to conquer England, and now Mr. Hitler has the same eager desire.

The plans selected for the invasion of England by all these forces of glee were much the same as the methods now being tried by Mr. Hitler.

What is it all these people sought in England? The Greeks wanted tin, the Romans wanted tin and Britain's wheat. The Saxons wanted to help their friends the Britons against the Picts and Scots, The Picts, Scots and Danes, and the Vikings of old wanted just plain loot. The land-starved Norsemen wanted a pleasant fertile country in which to live. The Dutch wanted to stop the export of corn, and power Napoleon wanted, and Hitler now wants, to destroy British sea power and to stand against the importation of force and tyranny upon the peoples of the world. —Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

Chapter III

SYNOPSIS

Audrey Ross, nicknamed "Cygne" in the early child of a highly respected horse trainer. Her farm adjoins the estate of Jeffrey Cooper, wealthy young man recently returned to Parville expecting to work in his father's law office. Audrey and Jeff have been lifelong friends and now Jeffrey is interested in another girl, Olive Cooper whom he has met abroad. Mrs. Cooper invites Olive for a weekend visit. Audrey meets her Queen at a dinner party at the Castle home. A few minutes after she heard Olive addressed as "Mr." Judge Castle's booming voice pierces her [illegible]

"Upon my word if it isn't my little girl Audrey, you've grown up so much since a very wise some young imp. Eh, Louise?"

"You indeed! Mrs. Castle's hand plump and betrayed, appeared at a formal ovation. So pleased to have you here, my dear." Then as the butler appeared at the door with an announcement that dinner was served. "Victor, dear, you are taking Miss Ross in. See that she is steely taken care of."

"To the death," that young man promised gravely, offering his arm. By the time she was seated, Audrey reached the conclusion that she quite approved of Victor Quinn.

He wasn't handsome, like Jeff. But he was very much alive and very interesting. There was a tongue-in-cheek quality to his remarks and the suspicion of a twinkle in the deep-set gray eyes.

"It seems to me Jeffrey said you were a school friend," she suggested quietly to break a somewhat awkward silence.

"More than a friend." Victor admitted. He lowered his voice to a confidential tone. "You see, Jeff doesn't care for her. I had to, and it was due to me that he didn't flunk out. God help him if he ever tries the State exams!"

Audrey had her bonillon spoon aside and lifted her napkin to her lips, controlling an impulse to choke. Mr. Quinn's next remark was no help. He must have been watching her but he looked the other way as he observed gently: "That's the reason little trick your nose did just then."

"How? you like it?" was the de- more retort. "I can't help it."

Of course I do Only it makes me feel that I should offer you a carrot. I was prepared to like you, Audrey Ross. But not so completely I had a pet rabbit once and I loved it."

"I believe I like you, too, Mr. Quinn. In spite of your mesmerism."

"Then call me Vic We're old friends now."

After dinner the general conversation seemed to languish and the party revealed an inclination to separate into groups. "Look, Audrey," Vic remarked suddenly "That pet room appears to be the Judge's library. Let's slip in and have a look and invade Mind"

"I'd love to."

"Sss!! You know this is what I call swell!" Vic stood by the big table with its softly glowing lamp, a among the shelves that lined all the available wall space, reaching from floor to ceiling

Audrey stood with her back to the table, leaning her weight on her two palms. A long time where she had been in this room, and the familiar surroundings brought a little pang Like [illegible]

She was recalled to the present by Vic. He was regarding her through half-closed eyes, his head on one side. "What did you want to do next, Audrey?"

She looked up with a start, utterly disconcerted by his shrewdness. "What made you think I want to ask you anything?" was he parrying report

"Deduction my child. Didn't I tell you I was a lawyer? So what was it?"

"When you were telling me about those people at dinner I thought you were careful not to include

"The guest of honor? Maybe I was overly informative about the rest. You're right. Would I have been putting my finger on a tender spot?"

"That's ridiculous! Jeff told me ever so much about her, only he didn't happen to mention that she was married Or had been. It did jolt me just a little when she introduced us. I wondered if I misunderstood."

"No. You didn't misunderstand. She was married about two years ago. Still is. But the mill is grinding."

"Mill You mean she's getting a divorce"

"It's in the bag. I happen to know I'm a sort of satellite of Mrs. Blumenthal and Brand We don't tie-tie with such asses as a rule, but Olive's papa is the great and only Harvey Harmon. Hence Mr Cooper will be egged out of the screw without any fanfare of trumpets And prefer ably too"

"Then I'm sorry for her."

"I can The two were staring through the drawing-room door. People in her crowd don't exhibit the bottoms of marriage It's like buying a car wrap If the style changes or you find you're not becoming, you work it off on the second hand man and pick out something different You wouldn't know about that"

"We're getting quite too serious," Audrey decided "Could we dance?"

"The very thing I was going to suggest," Vic declared. "It's my one social grace."

Victor Quinn proved to be an accomplished dancer and Audrey felt a momentary regret when Jeff cut in after one circuit of the big hall. "Most sorry you came" he asked almost at once.

"What do you think?"

"That if you're bored, you're big in it very well. You must have had a spell over Vic He always suspects the females of being on the prowl."

"Perhaps I am. I like him a lot."

Queer chap in many ways No nonsense about him, but he's got a fair amount of dough can get you. He's been a self-supported zombie to me and I don't mind telling you that I was him a lot. He probably has a yen to settled it ta you. One day, he'll make his mark . . . a high one. Say Cygne?"

"I know you haven't had any chance to get acquainted, but—"

"She's lovely, Jeff."

With her mother and father for an interested audience, Audrey had been detailing an account of the Castle dinner over her morning coffee and a cigarette

"Oh, Miss Audrey!"

The girl turned to see the cook's face peering through the kitchen door. "What is it Julia?"

"A man at the back door what wants to see you."

"For goodness' sake!" Audrey half arose from her chair, sank back with a brush "It's Ned Moon, then him or Quinn"

It was none other than Victor Quinn who strolled in smilingly as if called a cheery greeting. "Hello, And ers! You're looking very well indeed this morning."

"I am Mr. Quinn, my mother."

"Mrs. Ross, I am delighted to meet you Please don't get up."

"Oh, we've finished breakfast long ago," Audrey smiled. "We'll find more comfortable chairs. It may be pleasant out on the porch."

"But I want to stay here," Vic objected/ed. "I want a cup of coffee too. That's what I came for. Don't let me Do too long."

"Of course you're not!" Martha exclaimed, taking refuge in a burst of hospitality "You all right don't sit here with Audrey I'll have some hot coffee for you in just a minute " She caught up the pot and started out with it then paused at the door to ask "You will be fix you some eggs, too? You must be hungry after your walk"

"Well"

"Of course you will."

"Do you mind telling me what all this is about?" Audrey demanded when That busied up on the bill doesn't seem to go in for getting up at all after I prowled all over the place with it bed. seeing any sign of life until I

It happened before they could reach the room Edna, head in close, hair, barely had her forlorn over the top which she crushed down, pleasant looking house I could see in tioned an almost complete somnothe distance. He told me And here I am Oh, thank you!"

The last was for Julia who had come pudding in with the bacon and eggs. Audrey poured her guest's coffee and made toast.

"You know, Audrey —" Vic began for a satisfying bite, "I don't recall ever talking part in a domestic scene like this. Not in years, at all events. I can't tell you how it makes me feel"

"I'm sorry we haven't a pet rabbit for you."

"But I'd rather have you and your mother, he grinned impudently. "And that reminds me I think you'll get on for a tour later on be ready to join us."

"Maybe."

"Maybe you can. Say, Cygne, Vic Quinn's coming over this morning. Nobody's seen him."

"He's here."

"The devil you say! So it's as bad as all that!"

"I'm not," she admitted to Vic who stood smiling at her from the doorway. "Let's go."

The children were reached, Audrey introduced the guest to her mother and noted with a little twinge of relief at Vic's attitude He displayed a keen interest in all that was going on in the barn, and was still deep in conversation when her mother announced the pounding of hooves in the lane

"Company comin," she announced "Let's go and meet them, Audrey dear, too, Dad."

Audrey could not keep her admiration of Olive's smiling face and trim, erect figure. She was even more attractive in her riding clothes than in a dinner gown, the acknowledged to herself as they greeted on Olive.

Jeff was looking particularly well in new whipcord breeches, his shirt open at the throat, bareheaded. The group chatted with gay informality, with the exception of Anthony whose manner and attitude was decidedly unsuitable to Eileen's restless movements.

It was Olive who created a diversion with a direct question to Jeff, "Where are those horses you were telling me about, Jeffrey? I'm anxious to try them. So is this mare," she added, as Eileen tossed her head fretfully

"Dear, there in the paddock" Mrs replied with an indulging wave of her crop, then an uncertain look at Jeff "I'm told Anthony rode a splendid pair"

"Yes, indeed," was her smiling rejoinder "I'll be with you presently" She turned and rested her arms on the top of the rail and watched the others ride away.

"Why, Dad's left Mr. Jeffrey tell that young woman to go away on the porch" Anthony's usually mild voice carried a growl.

"That's what I'm thinking." And Jeff turned to tease little Vic's [illegible] too high his share of the fence, but the other end of [illegible] in the words he had just heard The stood in a tense scathing Then he turned and rested his arms on the top of the rail and watched the others ride away.

CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY ALBERTA DIVISION

Worldwide organization, which knows no boundaries in the performance of the tasks for which it was formed 76 years ago, is reflected in the recent assumption by the Canadian Red Cross of the duty of supplying food parcels to thousands of British soldiers who are prisoners-of-war in Germany. As an example of the work which Red Cross is asked to perform, and which no other agency is able or empowered to do, care of prisoners is graphic.

Without such an organization, shipments of food and clothing would be wasteful, if not impossible. No record of their eventual destination could be kept. The hostility of warring nations would prevent their delivery no knowledge of the prisoners' condition could be obtained by their relatives. And, most important of all, treatment and employment of prisoners could be unscrupulled and inhuman if there were not for the Convention under which neutral Red Cross observers have authority to inspect camps and question prisoners.

Prior to the days of the Red Cross prisoners were the most pitiful of war victims. They were subjected to acts by the enemies among whom they lived; they were fed only what their captors willed. They suffered from exposure and hunger, and when war ended they were turned free to find their way home as best they could, through a nation still bleeding from the effects of war. It was to remedy such conditions, after previous wars that certain conventions (the last of them in 1929) were formed, to which 48 nations, on princi[illegible] themselves.

Basically, these provide that rank may be compelled to work, but officers need only work if they wish to, and must be of the same grade and type as supplied to the soldiers of the belligerent power. But especially, such as any belligerent supplies its own men, are included. As a result, during prisoners-of-war camp nations during the Great War and thousands of these attested in letters afterwards that Red Cross parcels of food and clothing through months or years they were inspected especially was the true of men who served in other on the poor rations of war-beleaguered Germany.

however, boundaries are wiped out because the belligerent nations accept the basic principal that Red Cross workers are not seeking to undermine their war effort by attempting to free prisoners, supply them with weapons or other acts of sabotage. On this foundation, an international committee performs the task of sending food parcels (each one box of a certain weight and dimension) from one belligerent nation to another. Then parcels from Canada to Germany pass through Switzerland, where every shipment is checked for total number of parcels. The International Committee ships the necessary parcels to each country, sends an official Red Cross guardian with the shipment, and distributes it to the men under the eye of this guardian. The tremendous job of preparing, shipping and distributing food and clothing parcels is bound about by rigid restrictions issued in the international conventions. For instance, certain types of food are barred because daggers, bibles, files, bits of wire or similar or other articles which can be hidden in them. These restrictions emphasize the importance, to the safe keeping of the parcels, by an organization with nationwide facilities for mobilizing the necessary foodstuffs, packing it and shipping it. And it stresses the importance of Red Cross needs, because all this task requires funds. For instance, to carry out the task placed upon the Canadian Red Cross by the Motherland, it is estimated that $1,500,000 will be

PIONEER RESIDENTS HERE PLAN GOLDEN WEDDING FETE

Tofield, Oct. 29:—Two celebrated pioneers of Alberta, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morton, residents of this district since 1905, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next Sunday.

They were married in Arlington, Kansas, and moved from their Oklahoma home in 1904, to Edmonton. A year later, they went to Tofield. It was there Mr. Morton and his partner, R. E. Adams, built and operated the first store in South Beaver lake district. Business was good, they served a large area.

Mr. Morton knew Tofield and its surrounding district well, as he has seen it grow from a single store and post office to a thriving town.

The pioneer tells of how the town site of Tofield was moved three times before the Grand Trunk railroad went through in 1910. The last time was laid out beside the new railroad. Mercer-Adams original store now is a clothshop.

It was very difficult to get supplies to Tofield before the railway went through, said Mr. Morton. The two men freighted their stock along the old lone trail, with horses and wagons. Greatest difficulty was found in crossing muskegs, as wagon wheels often sank to the hubs, requiring much effort to get them out.

The Mortons have found this district a pleasant one in which to live. It was not lonesome for them, for a year after their arrival, 88 friends from Oklahoma moved into the district. Three people found pay in those days. Their land was good, and gradually they built a well-organized and prosperous community.

Through their Tofield store, Adams and Morton supplied "all the land that went to build the railway from

"PUT UP OR SHUT UP"

In an editorial on its front page "The Canadian Veteran" (September 20) has this to say about the Canadian Red Cross:—

"Not once, but on a number of occasions in recent months we have been told that the Red Cross is selling socks, etc., which have been given to it to be distributed to men on service. Invariably, as in the years past, we have endeavoured to check the rumours to their source—to establish the truth of the story. Invariably, again, we have failed. "Pinned down, the narrator of such tales will every time lead his hurry back through a winding maze of "I heards" or something of that sort. Never, in all our investigations, have we been able to find a glimmer of truth in the rambling stories of gross waste.

"We do not believe that the Red Cross is a 100 per cent perfect organization. But we do believe that for many years of its existence the Red Cross has, as a society, administered its affairs honestly and in the highest sense of trusteeship. We believe that this would without doubt be as much worse place than it is today if we believe that the men back of its accomplishments, in peace and war, constitutes one of the greatest humanitarian welfare units that the world has ever known.

"Its money may be shattered but on the production of definite and incontrovertible proof that the Red Cross, as an organization, is guilty of malfeasance—that it has sold, as unscrupulous profiteers, goods entrusted to it in order that those goods might be cared for—we will pay the men or women who bring the original query to us the sum of one hundred dollars.

"In other words, our present answer to anonymous letters, to malicious recitals, is, "Put up or shut up."

"And to those who are guilty of spreading falsi and scurrilous rumours we say this: That they are just as guilty of sabotage, of destruction of the national morale and faith as any "Fifth Columnist."

Well-meaning as they may be, they are assisting nobody but the enemy. They are harming their own country—and stabbing in the back those who are sacrificing their own comfort and convenience when it is vitally needed."

GREAT CARE TAKEN WITH ENGINES

A fighting aeroplane with a balky engine is as useless as a crippled duck. Lack of engine power might leave the crew helpless before the foe in battle or might plunge them into the sea or into rough ground in able country on a long flight.

Royal Canadian Air Force pupil Air Observers and Air Gunners have a warm regard for the highly skilled Aero Engine Mechanics of the R.C.A.F. who keep the aeroplane motors tunable. Their work is unspectacular, but just as important in its way as the work of the trained men who fly the planes. / crew hanged with taking a bomber 400 miles out over the Atlantic on convoy patrol, for instance, must be sure that the engines will maintain a constant rhythmic roar and not falter, and fail mid-silence when a landing field is over the horizon.

The powerful engines of R.C.A.F. bomber, Maintenance Squadrons receive all the care and attention of thoroughbred racehorses. Engines are inspected before and after flight, and any worn parts immediately replaced. Valve clearances are carefully checked and everything possible done to keep the engines and controls in perfect condition at all times. At regular intervals of 300 to 400 flying hours, the engines are temporarily removed from servies for a complete overhaul. The engines are taken apart, cleaned, and all parts minutely inspected for flaws and for signs of wear. Any worn parts are replaced, and the engines are reassembled and tested on a test stand before being put in their mountings in the aircraft.

The modern aircraft engines are complicated pieces of machinery, and their care and maintenance requires careful training and the R.C.A.F. operates its own Technical School at St. Thomas, Ont., which has turned out some 1,500 mechanics of all types so far and is turning out 150 more each week.

The aero engine mechanics course lasts about 18 weeks and provides a practical education in the craft for Canadian Boys, many of whom come from garages and technical schools, all over the country, so that they have a trade to work at when the war is over.

A CHALLENGE TO CANADIANS

EMERGENCY CALL!

From the shores of our Motherland comes an appeal for help which no true Canadian can fail to heed. While we live in comfort, death drops on that embattled island. The need for Red Cross assistance is urgent. Our sons and brothers are over there. On land, at sea, in the air, they face death daily. We must be prepared to help them when they are sick or wounded.

Red Cross help is needed on behalf of soldier and civilian alike. Hospitals and hospital equipment, surgical supplies and dressings, ambulances and X-Ray equipment will be needed. Overnight the need may become so urgent that lives may be sacrificed if help cannot be sent at once.

Never before has there been so great a need for Red Cross assistance. This challenge to humanity must be answered. Give to the Red Cross. Give to the utmost NOW!

Chapter IV

SYNOPSIS

Audrey Burns, nicknamed "Cygie," is the only child of a highly respected horse Trainer, whose farm, adjoins the estate of Judge Lester. The Judge's only son, Jeffrey has been Audrey's close friend since childhood. After a trip in Europe Jeffrey is back in Parville to work in his father's law office. He is introduced in Olive Cooper, whom he has met abroad, at a dinner party at the Castles', Audrey meets Jeff's friend, the Baroness Lorna Von Hoff. Week end guest The Castle party comes to the Swan farm to jump their horses. Olive is thrown and her mare's leg is broken.

"Carry her to the home," was Anthony's order to Jeff "Audrey, you go with him. Lay her on a bed and call the doctor I'll be there as soon as I can."

Anthony ran over and took a quick look at the prostrate Eileen "I fancied so much," he reported grimly "Mr Quinn, will you be good enough to stay at the stables and ask for Jim? Tell him it's a broken leg He'll know what to do."

When Anthony Swan hurried into the front hall he encountered his wife at the foot of the stairs.

"No sense you! I'll look at the girl. Where did you put her?"

Jeff, white and shaken, stood beside the bed looking down at Olive, who lay with closed eyes.

"Do you think she's badly hurt, Swan?" was his low voiced question

"I fancy not," was the quiet reply under Anthony elbowed the young man aside, bent over the bed and began a gentle but thorough investigation. "It will be an arm or leg if anything worse than a shaking up. She's breathing well enough." He pulled a knife from his pocket and opened its heavy blade. He looked up rather apologetically at Jeff. "Sorry to cut a new boot like that, but its uncommonly tight. I'm afraid to drag it off."

"Oh ahond," Jeffrey urged nervously.

Audrey watched her father part the leather with cautious strokes drag the boot off carefully and drop it. Then he turned to her. "Maybe you an do a better job with my girl getting that clothing off."

As the sheer silk hose was freed from the breeches cuff, Audrey rolled it down with gentle fingers "What do you think, Dad?"

"I can't say. It may be no more than a sprain, or there may be broken bones or teeth ligaments."

"Listen, Swan," Jeff whispered somewhat irritably "What was the matter with that farmer mare, anyway? My man brought word that you said she was O.K. at the jump you were watching." His acted as though he'd been put at a fence

"There was nothing the matter with the mare whatever, Mr Jeffrey." The last word sneered had left his lips when the silence was punctured by the distant crash of a rifle shot "She'll not be jumping again," he added with grim bitterness

It seemed as if the report might have startled Olive into wakefulness. Her eyelids fluttered, then opened wide They was a helpless dazed expression in the large dark eyes. She might have recognized Jeff for a moment as she called his name faintly and he stepped to his house at her side. "Olive! Are you all right?"

"What happened?" She was looking wonderingly at the others. Oh! I remember."

"Fancy that wretched mare refusing an easy jump like that!" and Olive I hope she broke her neck. Oh! My ankle!"

"You wrenched it a bit," Jeff soothed." The doctor will be here shortly."

Olive looked at the faces about the bed and managed a smile "Sorry I'd make such a spectacle of myself I'm all right now. If you'll help me up, Jeffrey ."

"You may right where you are, Mrs. feels up to it."

Cooper," Martha directed. "I think that's better Bardsley coming up now." As she spoke were voices on the stairs. "Here it is now. Run for Dr. Quinn, Jeff, let the room be empty except for you and Audrey. Swan found himself being escorted before he could say Victor Quinn. "Audrey," he said, "my operation gloves are depressing. But I couldn't help think no from some remark your father made that the accident shouldn't be charged family to

"Mr. Quinn, you have nothing to do with it. But please don't quote me."

"Naturally not. I'm sincerely glad the girl was not seriously hurt, but I can see where it definitely puts an end to the party."

"I'm sorry. But I imagine you're right. Mrs. Cooper will be up to much of anything for a while, I suppose."

"Maybe she'll have to stay on with you," Yar suggested maliciously.

"We'll try to take good care of her."

"I was spoofing Mrs. Castle will have her over there before sundown. You'll see. May I come back? I mean it terribly."

"You will be welcome any time of course."

"Thanks a lot for everything. You're a nuts number, Audrey. Good by." And he was gone.

Audrey was in the dining room, followed by the others, when the mother entered. "Audrey, did you have a chance to get acquainted with that woman?"

"Mrs. Cooper, you mean?" the reply was delayed slightly. "Yes, I've had a chance at the dinner. And you know that she's not the bad sort only a few moments after they came over here."

"She's pretty," Martha admitted. "But I hate to see Jeffrey taking up with a divorcee at this time."

"Oh, that's nothing these days," Audrey was thinking of what Vic Quinn had to say regarding modern marriages. "Besides," she added with a faint smile, "she isn't divorced Yet."

"Then she should wait till she is before she lets men start fussing around her. Jeffrey's clear out of his head over her. Your father is really upset about that horse."

"I don't wonder," was the grim retort. "That was entirely I suppose she didn't know any better, but . . ."

"Did you hear what she said about me?"

"Yes I hear."

"Oh, you bone," said Martha, I would have liked to see more of that Mr. Quinn. He talks a heap of foot schnoss, but seems pretty well bred eye can see there's a lot to him. He's smart A lawyer, did you say?"

"Yes Maybe you will be pleased to learn Mrs Swan, that he has asked your daughter's permission to call her back again. Do you mind?"

Indeed, not!" Martha regarded her daughter curiously. She could not quite understand this sud den light hearted mood. "I think that would be very nice," she amended. "He seems to like you."

"Oh, he does. He thinks I'm a cute number. He just told me."

"Audrey, isn't that Mrs. Castle's car ?"

Audrey turned acutely, in time to see a blue limousine roll past the windows. A chauffeur in smart livery was at the wheel, and a passenger in the rear

"It's her Royal Highness," she reported briefly.

"I've never done more than speak to her!" Martha recalled in sudden consternation "You go to the door, I'm not dressed."

"Why, good morning, Mrs. Castle!" Audrey tried to put delighted surprise in her tones. "Come in."

"I just heard about this dreadful thing and dashed right down," the caller began a trifle breathlessly "Is your child much hurt?"

Doctor Bardsley said, "The young lady appears to have a badly wrench leg and managed a smile "Sorry I'd make such a spectacle of myself I'm all right now. If you'll help me up, Jeffrey ."

Mrs. Castle turned to Audrey, "It's a miracle the child wasn't killed! I should have starved her. She is not responsible for the reckless way you young people in the country ride. I dare say it was one of your father's horses"

Jeff Bet it is dear now."

"How she king! It might so really have been put the other way."

"Yes They had to shoot the horse."

Mrs Castle stared unpleasantly as this information was imparted, but before she could decide whether or not some explanation was intended, Jeffrey appeared on the stairs with Olive in his arms While fa-ced, and with her hair in disorder, she looked very small and childish. One arm was around the lad's neck, her other hand held her hat dangling by its elastic

"Hello, Mrs. Castle," she called with attempted gayety. "Aren't I a mess?"

"You poor darling!" The other unbent instantly, and was breathed a kiss on the patient's cheek. "Are you in great pain? I'm so relieved to know that your eyes are not badly Olive turned her head and looked at Jeffrey. "Darling dear, to have caused all this commotion. It spoils everything. But you'll come to see me tomorrow, when the doctor has seen your father and mother for their verdict."

The late afternoon found Audrey on the side porch trying to forget everything but the book she was reading, when the sudden crunch of tires on the gravel drive caused her to look up, she was startled to see Jeff in his roller skates.

She was more puzzled when she discovered that her caller was decidedly ill at ease. "Where is the lady now?" she inquired dutifully.

"Olive? Oh, she's all right Sleeping when I came away She de-lded not to go to the hospital until today. Anthony and Martha Swan are both behind in the excitement," he added miserably. "I thought I'd drop in and pick it up."

"I'll run and get it for you," she said, and appeared with it almost at once "Pity Dad had to cut it," she added.

"Oh, well . . . You know, Cygie hang it all, I feel pretty rotten about what's afoot. It was the fault, after all."

"I don't see why."

"Sure you do. I know you well enough to guess what it would do to Olive's pride to have it known that she was all right at the bars if she hadn't."

"I had no trouble with her," Audrey answered quietly

"Olive told me to ask you up to the house if I saw you. I wish you would come, Cygie. Will you?"

"Let's see," Audrey mused. "To-morrow's Sunday, isn't it? I'm due to during the afternoon. Will that do?"

"Thanks a lot, Cygie." He rose to his feet. "See you tomorrow, then." He turned and started down the path to the house on the hill

Audrey watched Olive Cooper to suggest the invalid She was propped up in a nest of pillows and wearing a long negligee of orchid silk that set off her coloring. Her hair was perfectly arranged, eyes shining, her cheeks flushed She extended her manicured hand, her left in a graceful greeting.

"She sweet of you to run in Cygie you don't mind if I call you by Jeffrey's name, do you? It's so cute This is one time I really am going to have a chance to visit with you."

"How's the ankle?"

"Doing nicely. We went to the hospital this morning and had its picture taken. Just a bad sprain, but they say I must keep off of it for a time. It's a dreadful nuisance, but those dear people."

"Terrible!" Jeffrey laughed. He brought a chair for Audrey, then stroked himself for a few moments, eyeing with speculative exclusiveness "I know you two girls would like to have an uninterrupted gabfest for a bit I'll go down and bother the old folks with my knight sayings" He went out and closed the door softly behind him

Edmonton, October 29:—Hay sales in Alberta have shown a substantial increase for the first 40 weeks of the year compared with the same period of 19-39. The total of 273,347 tons sold compared with 263,-147 in 1939. But the number of bags grading select was down, being only 12.9 per cent. compared with 26.7 per cent. in 1939. The Agriculture Department, while recognizing that 10 per cent. select gradings are virtually impossible, points out that farmers lost through inferior marketings $825,000 in 1939.

Edmonton, England, is in possession of $25,000 which Edmonton, Alberta raised to help buy a fighting fighter plane. Norwegians Still Sail the Seas As Hardy Allies Of Britain

London—Descendants of the Norsemen and Viking mariners of old are out on the seas of battle in full force once more. At 1,000 years ago they sailed in their hordes in conquer and invade; now in 2,000 ships they sail to help the Allies in the reconquest of freedom.

The Norwegian mercantile fleet is a great important contribution to the common cause of the Allied nations. It totals 4,280,000 tons. Less than 5 per cent of the total were in Scandinavian ports when Norway was invaded, leaving some 4,500,000 tons in various harbors throughout the world The whole of this strength has been requisitioned by the Royal Norwegian Government, now carrying on the struggle on British soil under King Haakon, a monarch who will not give in.

Some units of the small Norwegian Navy, which, at the outset of war included four small cruisers, five modern destroyers, nine submarines, and several large and small gunboats, also escaped the German onslaught.

One thousand best growers of Southern Alberta will receive an increase that will bring the price of 1940 crop on November 6. This is the latest initial payment yet made, and it will be several months before delivered before October 19. With a record average yield of 14 tons to the acre, a total yield of 230,000 tons was reaped from 21,000 acres.

During the week commencing November 25 Alberta poultrymen, including all who possess 50 birds or more will be asked to decide whether they wish to market their eggs through a marketing board organized by themselves, it was announced by Hon. R. C. Mannix this week. Poultrymen were requested to watch for the advertised dates of meetings in their district and to attend them. Poultrymen will outline their own proposals at these meetings, after which a vote will be taken. It was stressed later in the week by W. C. Hoover, Provincial Poultry Commissioner, that both Dominion and British Food Ministry officials favor the concentrated plan of marketing and shipping eggs

Southern Alberta farmers who will represent their Province at the Toronto Finals of Junior Judging contests were named this week. They are Gerald Norce and Frank Nation, Calgary Club; Allan Stewart and Stan Gould, of Dalhousie and Bonnie Brae respectively; Canmore Dairy Club; Richard Borgo, Bettrel and Vair Reid, Cremona representing the Cam-rose

PROPER ADDRESSING OF MAIL TO ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE OVERSEAS

As some misunderstanding exists in the mind of the public as to the correct manner of addressing mail to Canadians serving in the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force overseas, the following statement has been released by Postmaster General Mulock.

Care must be taken to distinguish between the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Air Force.

ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE

All was addressed to the officers & men of the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas or included among the Base Post Office letters from the Postmaster General in England.

"We shall continue to mark personal mail: Mrs. Campbell added, "and, of course, our knitting for the active service forces will not slacken. Two more pairs of sleeveless, turtle neck sweaters and seaman's stockings are needed in large numbers, and all other knitted articles, with the exception of wristlets, are still required."

Up to August 31st, 50,570 cases containing more than 4,000,000 articles were shipped overseas by the Canadian Red Cross, that of the 45,000,000 contributed last November, a sum of $1,500,000 was spent on the purchase of materials from which the women of Canada have made the majority of these supplies. Part of the money raised during the Canadian Red Cross Society's present appeal for funds will be used to buy more materials for urgently needed supplies.

THE GREEN HORNET

The makers of Lotterine have booked the "Green Hornet" to run over CFRN, commencing Wednesday, November 6th. A story of the thrills and thrills of newspaper detective work. The "Green Hornet" is a show of universal appeal to young and old alike. The Green Hornet follows the Adventures of Charlie Chan, which has been running over CFRN for the past 52 weeks.

CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY ALBERTA DIVISION

The names of the 9,000 Red Cross Branches and groups throughout Canada will concentrate on the making of half a million articles of clothing which are needed urgently for refugees and evacuees in Britain, Mrs. Wallace Campbell, National Chairman of Women's War Work committee of the Canadian Red Cross and Asserted.

"I am confident that we can accompany this task in full measure," said Mrs. Campbell said. "I the meantime we are sending aid to many people in Europe who suffer from Canadian Red Cross warehouses in England.

"We shall continue to mark personal mail: Mrs. Campbell added, "and, of course, our knitting for the active service forces will not slacken. Two more pairs of sleeveless, turtle neck sweaters and seaman's stockings are needed in large numbers, and all other knitted articles, with the exception of wristlets, are still required."

Up to August 31st, 50,570 cases containing more than 4,000,000 articles were shipped overseas by the Canadian Red Cross, that of the 45,000,000 contributed last November, a sum of $1,500,000 was spent on the purchase of materials from which the women of Canada have made the majority of these supplies. Part of the money raised during the Canadian Red Cross Society's present appeal for funds will be used to buy more materials for urgently needed supplies.

PLASTIC PLANES

When about six years ago chemistry introduced transparent plastics for aircraft protection, there appeared most new possibilities in the field of aircraft design. But fighting today with the air force these modern materials are destined to live and fly another day and give some idea of what aeroplanes of 1944 may be like in the new Aerial Age, writes G. H. Hosier in the October issue of C-I-L Oval.

Designers seized upon this crystal clear substance which had the translucent properties of glass but was shatterproof and could be moulded under heat treatment to any required curvature. With it they achieved advanced streamlining and great smoothness in speed. As war aircraft production became imperative and more widespread, transparent plastics were used for gun turrets, bomb- aimers' windows and windscreens on bombers and fighters.

Why the Red Cross is in urgent need of funds

1. At the request of the British Red Cross, it has undertaken to provide 10,000 parcels of food each week from Canada for British prisoners of war in Germany. Canadians can thus help to insure the return on Britain's food supplies.
2. The Canadian Red Cross will provide, equip and co-operate with the Department of National Defence in maintaining a number of convalescent hospitals in various parts of Canada for use by Canadian soldiers, here and from overseas, who are sick or wounded.
3. The Canadian Red Cross will help to supply clothing and other necessities to the more than 100,000 evacuee children in Britain, and the 100,000 refugees from invaded countries who have sought shelter under the Union Jack. Many articles of clothing have been supplied, but another half million articles will be needed from Canadian Red Cross workrooms.
4. The Canadian Red Cross is sending an increasing flow of supplies for the alleviation of civilian suffering caused by enemy bombing of Britain.
5. As Canada's own armed forces grow, on land, on sea and in the air, the need for Red Cross services increases.
6. The Red Cross must be ready and fully equipped to meet any emergency at the moment it arises.

These are tasks you must not leave undone. Support the Red Cross with all your heart.

CAMPAIGN NOW UNDER WAY

The local and district Red Cross Campaign is now in full swing and the active members are busy collecting both money and articles for this most worthy of worthy causes.

Perhaps its lack of urging perhaps farmers as a body have not yet got roused to the idea of donating wheat, but so far the response to the circular appeal for grain has not been very large.

We are not in the least afraid that the farmers in this district will not respond. We are quite sure they will. But there is a tendency to put off until a more convenient time many good intentions, and a decision of this kind falls in that class.

It would be alright but the need is great — now. Farmers intending to donate wheat should do so now

Wheat donations have been received from the following: R. E. Bailey, J. W. Cookson, J. B. Warner, F. Wilhemine, Neil Phillips, W. J. Martens, J. Reugel, S. Brown, H. Wetherell, A. H. Murray.

Plans for the Auction Sale are going forward. If you have any article you would like to donate see D. McCarthy, W.K. Bellamy, J. E. Hilmes or J. W. Morton.

Chapter V
SYNOPSIS

Audrey Bean, nicknamed "Cygie," is the only child of a highly respected horse Trainer, whose farm adjoins the estate of Judge Castle. The Judge's only son, Jeffrey, has been Audrey's close friend ever since childhood. After a trip to Europe Jeffrey is taken into partnership by his father's law office. He is interested in Olive Cooper, whom he has met abroad. At a dinner party at the Castles, Audrey meets Jeff's friend, Val Quinn and finds she is a welcomed guest. The Castle party comes to the Bean farm to jump their horses. Olive is thrown and her mare's leg is broken.

"Don't be precious!" Olive asked with a light laugh "He reminds me of a little boy I gave ——"

"Yes."

"Has Jeffrey told you about ... us?"

Audrey Bean was conscious of a curious sensation. It was almost as if her heart had stopped a beat at Olive's smilingly demure "Has Jeffrey told you about ... us?"

"I don't believe so. You mean there is congratulations?"

Olive nodded and lowered her eyes. The admission came shyly. "Yes. We're engaged." With the words, her hand came out and Audrey clasped it firmly.

"Congratulations!" she exclaimed cordially "I think it's wonderful!"

"So do I" Olive admitted, withdrawing her hand somewhat hastily. "I suppose Jeffrey's breaking the lodge to his parents now."

"I'm sure they will be very happy for him."

"Hope so" Olive's smile vanished. "Of course, darling, you understand why we are not making a general announcement. I haven't my dress at least, I don't think I have."

Audrey experienced another inner shock. The explanation had been only a matter of fact. "I see," she said simply.

"And are you properly appalled," Olive supplemented good-naturedly. "It's only a matter of form My heart has been free for a long time" that is, until I met Jeffrey that ... over in Europe."

I think marriage will be very good for Jeffrey," his fiance went on complacently. "He has lived a horribly life, after all. That's the trouble of so many children don't you think? He never has had the real advantages of a social life of the sort we will have. I'm selfishly glad that it isn't really necessary for him to work for a living ... garish, I mean. Clubs and sports and meeting the right people will do wonders for him. I don't believe he is ... cut out to be a business man, do you?"

"No," Audrey admitted slowly. "I doubt if he is. But his father's people have been lawyers for several generations. I understand. I imagined that he would follow his father's profession and take his place there. That's what everyone has always thought."

"Well a connection with ... one important law firm in the city might be an asset ... like Val's But he won't dreadfully hard, and it will take him years to get anywhere! There's no point in Jeffrey's keeping on ... a grindstone."

Then you don't plan to live here?" My dear child! I'm planning marriage, not retiring to a convent! Every life a week or two at a most is bearable, but that's enough."

When Olive spoke again there was an earnestness in her voice that made it almost sharp. "There is one thing, Cygie, I want you to understand ... before. I really love Jeffrey."

"Why of course you do!"

The door opened at that moment and Jeff thrust in his head.

"Secret session over?" he wanted to know He kept his eyes on Audrey as he entered, closed the door after him and leaned against it.

She rose, went to him with her hand extended in a frank gesture of congratulations, Jeff Lets ... them ... her ... and ... happiness" ...

"Thanks Cygie. Hoped you knew. Like it?"

"Of course!"

"Think it's pretty swell my own self."

"What did you mother and father say?" Olive ask abruptly.

"They beer up very nicely, thanks. Think be up shortly to ... anyhow. Dad, Of course ... I told them ... there was nothing ... moment and all that ... he turned to Audrey. "You're the only one in on the dark secret."

And I shall be very discreet," she ... "I approve ... the honest. Bout ... I have ... with it really must be going."

Jeffrey went down to her car with her. "I wanted you to know first thing, Cygie" he exclaimed boyishly, once they were out of the house. "Told Olive that you were one the nicest girls and if she didn't tell you by day I would. I'm a lucky guy, don't you think?" He was wistfully anxious that she should agree with him.

Judge Castle's ... relating to his library after lunch hailed him with, "Want to see us?"

"Want to see ... I wish to talk to you, I believe, ... matters now stand ... except to marry Mrs Cooper before ... be free."

"I ... yes. That ... the arrangement, ... ding"

"I am quite aware of the provisions ... father in Harley Harrison of the Harrison Products Corporation. Personally, ... is a very wealthy ... A millions or seven ... over ... should imagine"

"It wouldn't surprise me."

"I should judge ... rather, I am ... you would have ... a spanker of a man who has ... consent to live upon his wife's bounty. Had you given the matter any serious thought, may I ask?"

"Why, no," Jeffrey was a little taken aback by the direct question. "Of course I had always thought that ... "

"That you would be associated with me in a business way. Such an arrangement was in my mind when I sent you to law school. You know I have always been my hope and intention."

Jeffrey, for the first time, was ... to pretend to misunderstand. "My success had not been particularly handicapped by the million-dollar dower brought him by Louise Langdon. He contented himself with, "That is the nicest ... you wish to ... rase, sir?"

"There is nothing particular to ... sure. If Judge retired, ... town of a long vacation and your interest to support a wife, I ... that you are ready to settle down and think of a professional career In ... that event, I am ready to arrange a partnership with you. More than ... that, I am willing to guarantee ... a substantial income from the start ... Doesn't that appeal to you as a proposition?"

"Very." The quiet agreement ... effect.

"Now see here, my boy." The Judge's heavy features relaxed in a ... frosty smile. "I need you. In fact, I need you particularly just now. You are not planning to be away long, are you?"

"You mean when I go to the ... I understand that you are ... Mrs Cooper home."

"I haven't planned definitely. ... quite so, if she is expecting me to stay a few days."

THE TOFIELD MERCURY

A Weekly Newspaper Published at Tofield, Alberta

W. Worton, Publisher

"AN OUNCE . . . "

IT WOULD SEEM that since the fall of 1918 when this paper was started, about this time of the year, we would sieze on the subject of fire prevention as editorial meat. The subject is getting worn pretty thread bare and perhaps to some readers a little tiresome.

Consequently we don't mind in the least if you read the first line or so and skip the rest, providing you have made every precaution against fire occuring on your premises this winter.

We have reference more to rural residents, than town residents as while a residential fire is bad enough in town it is doubly worse in the country where a home may be one or more miles from its nearest neighbor. As a school boy we remember the teacher stressing that fire, not water and wind, was the mariners greatest enemy, and while no doubt modern ships have decreased that danger, the lesson "stuck" to a certain extent, a lone prairie dwelling is akin to a ship as regards fire. Particularly so when snow lies on the ground and the temperature is away below zero. Isolated from its neighbors by a mile or more of snow covered ground a fire occuring during a sub-zero period makes it a tragic event for the occupants of a farm home.

And this is really our excuse for harping on this subject every year or so. The risk is great, the consequences can be so tragic, that even at the risk of repetition, we again urge that every precaution against fire occurring in your home be taken now Stoves, stove pipes, chimneys, nearness of stoves to walls and stove pipes to ceilings should all be checked before the real cold weather commences. You know the old saying: "An ounce of prevention . . . "

"A PLEASANT TIME"—

NOT SO VERY long ago a press despatch carried the story of a young French lad who having recently landed in Canada was asked what he would do if he met Hitler. "Shoot him on sight" was the prompt reply. We do not doubt the young French lad's sincerity, and he having just come from war zone was making extensive plans quite justified in his remark. But we also feel that we would think up a more delectable form of retaliation for all the life Herr Hitler has brought upon the world, if he was ever in our power. For after all mere shooting is quick and if done neatly relatively painless.

A compulsory companion we would like to take Herr Hitler to quite a few places and show him quite a few things. As a start the Variety Theatre would come in for attention. Preference would be given to a "Judge Hardy" show. We would stress upon the famous man from Germany the more of life, the freedom of the average Canadian and American home. The absence of medals and uniforms would be stressed and the homely philosophy of the Judge about truth and honor, obedience to superiors and generally playing the game would be rubbed in good and plenty. Then a trip to Edmonton would be in order. A trip round the stores showing the bewildering variety of articles ever the common man of Canada or the United States have within the range of their purses. Lunch at any large lunch counter would be a revelation. The diversified menu of the main courses and the liberal choice of desserts would attention would be drawn to the butter consumed and also that lef, on the plates. The steady stream of diners coming and having hearty meals, leaving only a few to be replaced by others would be evidence of plenty within the reach of all.

There would be a reminder that democracies may be ... but not ... and at least they are well fed.

A world series baseball game would then be in order. The visitor could be ... and attention while the band played the "Star Spangled Banner" but the spontaneous yell from thousands of throats, it would be stressed was not in homage to a general or an admiral or even a great statesman, but in honor of a country whose athletic elite were to compete strenuously, bitterly perhaps, for the baseball crown of supremacy. An event in which skill, speed of thinking and acting is brought to a very high degree of perfection. An event in which the whole country is interested and an event in which a win or loss is a win or loss to Americans not a neighboring state whose territory is coveted.

There are plenty of places that could be visited. A large factory in which thousands of employees journeyed to and fro in their cars, bought and paid for out of their wages. It would be made abundantly clear that a land of plenty is not a land of war, that peace and prosperity are handmaidens of contentment — not war and aggression.

As parting entertainment attendance could be made at a Winnipeg—Calgary football game. A close up view would be preferable and we would like to see Herr Hitler placed in the middle of the field while the game was in progress. The Rough Riders tactics together with the Bombers strategy might leave Herr Hitler a bit mussed up—but then look what he has done to the rest of us.

The Week in Edmonton

COMMUNICATION

Edmonton, November 6:—Death of Hon. D. R. Mullen, Minister of Agriculture cast a gloom over the legislature buildings Monday. Always an energetic and democratic executive, his well-known figure will be missed by his associates. Burial services were attended by large numbers of civil servants as well as his colleagues in local appointments while paid tribute to his fine handling of the agriculture portfolio since his appointment in 1937 to one of the most important ministries in the government. He pushed the policies of "improvement" in grain and live stock which he had furthered during his term of office.

Official opening of the new Edmonton Air Training elementary flying school in Edmonton will take place November 11, buildings having been completed this week. Still under construction is the new aircraft repair assembly building, which will be the largest of its kind in the West. Attending the opening of the new flying school will be the premier of the province of commerce officials.

The R.C.A.F. is still seeking radio operators for enlistment as signal officers or mechanics, according to Flying Officer W. M. Thomson, R.C.A.F., Edmonton recruiting officer. The age limit is 45 years. Officer applicants must have at least Grade VIII education, and preferably a degree as physics or electrical engineering, and a first class knowledge of the theoretical and practical radio. Mechanic applicants must have high school entrance qualifications, knowledge of radio, practical knowledge of modern superchargers, transmission, reception and receiving sets.

Work of the Canadian Legion auxiliary war services section, assisting members of an Edmonton service club this week by Donald Cameron, director of educational services for Alberta. So long as the war continues, said Mr. Cameron, the organization will continue to offer any soldier sailor or airman opportunities to complete high school training in order to qualify for higher posts.

Denial of a report that the special bonus rates charges but is always the same. It would be the greatest factor in the promotion of security of the British Commonwealth of Nations always in terms of war instead of peace. There are those who foresee into the future, but in this world it is more convenient to be behind the times than ahead of them. In the vernacular of the streets, the former is lopsy and the latter is goofy.

What is the matter with this crazy world? is a frequent question. The answer is that the whole world Christian more the absolute—suffers from acute disregard of moral principles. National hopes, aspirations and security are wrecked on the shifting sands of world politics. The treachery of governments supposedly Christian expresses all understanding.

It may be that a new age is coming, and from the anguish and ashes of the present greater conflict will come and better ore, and an Empire greater than has been.

F. E. BURNHAM.
Brigadier-General.

Joint Control Road Transport

Halifax, N. S. November 6:—Registration of road transport service and rates under uniform legislation not administered jointly by provincial and federal authority in the national interest was suggested by Herbert Allen, Economist of the Research and Development Department, Canadian Pacific railways, in an address ... of a recent address delivered to the Canadian Club. Mr. Allen stated that "The Conflict of Railway and Highway Transport in Canada," and discussed the vital factors involved "Rails in the street" in obtaining proper ... adjustments of these two types of land transport.

Mr. Allen began by insisting that the conflict between railway and highway transportation is not a "dogfight" but traffic but an important economic problem of immediate concern to all citizens. Each type of transport has a definite field of activity, he said, and failure to function in their proper field of endeavour will perpetuate an ever increasing and unnecessary economic loss.

The importance of highways in time of national emergency was clearly demonstrated during the first year of the war when they moved freight and passengers in such volume as could not have been handled by highway transport. The work now being done by the railways was made possible ... of their peace-time preparation such as betterments in roadbed, improvements in power and equipment, and increasing speed of freight trains which now carry heavier loads with less coal consumption.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange
Director, Research Department, Searle Grain Company Limited.

A series of momentous discoveries have recently been made in Great Britain, and because of it all an action has just been taken by the British Government which may in time completely solve Canada's and the world's surplus wheat problem.

The discoveries are that the new famous vitamin B-1, sometimes known as thiamin or aneurin, controls to a great extent the health, the energy and the well-being of people; then that this vitamin can be produced artificially at a low cost; and more important still that it can really be added to wheat flour, so that results in an additional consumption of this more nutrious and even more palatable bread.

I have calculated that if every person in the world now using bread flour from wheat would consume as little as one extra slice a day, then the entire World surplus of wheat would quickly disappear, and wheat acreage would have to be increased.

Canadians Hold Grudge Against This Mean Nazi

Somewhere in England, November 6:—There is one Nazi airman who will get a hot reception if he is ever taken prisoner by members of this particular Canadian brigade. It's his mean disposition they don't like.

The men learned the airmen shot blackout to ... enjoy a moving picture ... performance arranged by the Canadian Legion War Services. The ... theatre hall was at the extreme end of the camp compound and several hundred of the lads had elected ... through mud and water to reach it.

A few minutes after they had ... themselves in ... chairs to watch the antics of a silly symphony star, the Nazi dropped a bomb just outside the theatre door. Fortunately, it didn't explode but for reasons of safety the hall was quickly vacated and the show was held the next night postponed — at least until the bomb could be removed and rendered harmless.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

CHECKERBOARD LOVE

JOSEPH McCORD

CHAPTER VI
SYNOPSIS

Audrey Swan is the only daughter of a highly respected horse trainer. His farm adjoins the estate of Judge Castle whose only son, Jeffrey, and Audrey have been lifelong friends. Jeffrey's engagement to Ellen Lloyd just announced to Audrey. Castle's wants to make Jeffrey a partner in his law firm does not relish the idea. Mrs. Castle, who has but Anne Dodds, the Judge's elderly secretary, is feared by all health to retire, and Jeffrey must help his father through the summer. Audrey Swan meets Jeff's friend, Victor Quinn. She is walking with him to a favorite spot of hers and mentions that but also of a real time once was to come there with a good book and a couple apples.

"I don't wonder. It's beautiful." Vic looked about soberly, then down at Audrey. "I'm sorry with you, little Audrey Swan. Deeply and truly. And there it is."

Until this sunny Sunday afternoon, no man had ever told Audrey that he loved her.

In the manner of every normal young woman she had dreamed and dreams in solitude, dreams unknowingly influenced by romantic stories and pictures. If they awakened no perceptible longing for love they did bring a knowledge of the thrill that most come when the words were spoken softly by the man to whom she was ready to give her heart.

"I love you, little Audrey Swan." No one could have uttered those words with quieter sincerity than Vic. Yet there was an thrill, no particular sensation of amazement or resentment. Instead a little feeling of pity. It might be akin to love, but it wasn't love.

"Why did you?" was her low question "Oh, why?"

Vic's smile was pathetically twisted, but Audrey was looking down into the water and did not see. There was no smile in his voice or eyes.

"I guess I had to, Audrey. Would it ever have a chance?"

"I can't tell you, Vic. It's because I don't know. Honestly."

"And that's fair enough."

There was nothing in cry about, but Audrey felt perilously close to tears. There was something pathetic in Vic's acceptance of things "If I behave nicely," he asked, "can we keep on being friends?"

"Oh, of course, Vic. Your friendship does mean a lot to me. Really it does. I want it to go on."

"Then everything's all right with the world. We'll sauté all this from the record and start where we left off it K."

"It's a bargain."

Vic's principal reaction to his visit at the Swans' was a suspicion that he had made a first class fool of himself and destroyed any vestige of future happiness by being too perceptive. Yet he could find no genuine regret. His love for Audrey had become such a part of his life that he had been unable to suppress a hope that she had at some time may felt it. The great comfort was that she even had been kind to him, that she hadn't dominated him forth with and permanently. As long as she hadn't, there was some hope. He would never give up, but he must have some enough to watch his step from now on.

The following morning he presented himself at the Castle office promptly at nine-thirty. To his surprise, he found his friend in the private office, feet up on the desk and puffing contemplatively on a pipe.

Jeff's smile came down with a crash. "Well, of all things! Where the dickens did you come from, Vic? And at this time of day. Come in and have a seat, fella."

Vic shook hands and dropped into a chair. "Why, I'm on tour at the moment. Vacation. After reading the paper yesterday morning, seemed to me that it would be no more than decent to break my trip long enough to offer congratulations and all that sort of rot. So here I am. Accept my good wishes if you will."

"Thanks, Vic. This more is a tough bump on which to endure a Sunday. Why in the world didn't you go out and put up with the folks? They would have been tickled to have you," Jeff added reproachfully.

"Well, as a matter of fact . . ."

"As a matter of fact, you were lonesome around Audrey. Maybe you mean it need congratulations."

"Be yourself! Just dropped in to say my party call for the breakfast give up a permanent job for a honeymoon. That was all. I did want to see you, too. Looks to me as if double congratulations were in order. Now another birth I knew dawned well to see you at work Permanent. I that Father would make it worth your while."

"Just the same it appeals to you—

"It a way I don't think you appreciate the reputation your father has in this state as a jurist. It would be quite an opportunity for any calls himself to be associated with him. That's the only reason I'd ever consider it . . . not at all for the reason you have in mind. That's crazy still."

"Please think it over carefully, Vic. You can earn the happiness of several people, I suppose."

"I wonder. It will take a lump of consideration. See me next time you're up. I won't promise a thing I still think it's crazy."

Jeffrey Castle's suggestion that Victor take his place in the office while he would be on his honeymoon brought the considerable the young lawyer promised, and a great deal more. Victor realized that he was time in her determination to keep bring him as near Audrey Swan. Now he entered himself definitely for having told her of his love.

Therefore he put in a call for Audrey without any clear idea of what he was going to say. He would have to invent up some excuse for an interview; then what?

Unfortunately, the operator reported that party was not at home; number given Would he talk to anyone else? It was Mrs. Swan who took the call "I wanted to speak to Audrey, but she is not attempted well she be at home after dinner?"

"I doubt it." Martha replied. Audrey's day is her own. She rode a horse yesterday and left early this morning for the races. I don't think she would be able to take care of her today. If not, she said she would stay over, her decision. Doctor Llewellyn He's in the Medical Arts You might happen to catch her there. I know she would be glad to see you."

"That's a lot I'll do that tonight," Victor replied. "We're going some place to have lunch." Vic hung up and left the booth on the way to the elevators

Victor pondered a little over his next move. "If the situation were difficult I'd admit I'd jump at the chance, be to accept the old Judge, money to lose. It would be the most profitable investment of a lifetime

What's holding you back?"

BRITAIN AND GREECE

It seems fitting indeed that Great Britain and Greece should be standing side by side defending democracy against a common enemy.

Democracy or those principles of freedom and liberty which insist that the individual citizen is superior to the State, and shall not be merely the pawn of a monarch or of a dictator, was first invented by Solon the Greek in the year 594 B.C. and was actually put into practice as a system of Government in Athens—with a democratic assembly which met continuously throughout the year to design laws and to govern the country, in the B.C. or 2,443 years ago.

A description of this democracy was given some 20 years after its establishment in a famous speech by the immortal Greek Statesman and Orator, Pericles.

"Our constitution is called a democracy because power is in the hands not of a minority but of the whole people. We do not feel called upon to be angry with our neighbor for doing what he likes or even to put on dodgy in those injurious looks which cause real pain, though they inflict no positive penalty . . . But all this ease in our private relations does not make us lawless as citizens . . . We three principal reasons for this. We are taught to fear the laws, paying special reverence to those which are for the protection of the injured as well as those unwritten laws which bring admitted shame upon the transgressor . . . while in education our adversaries from their very cradles by a painful discipline seek manliness, we live exactly as we please, and yet are just as ready to encounter every legitimate danger . . . In the matter of honor, fearless conclusions of enpendency, but in the confidence of

This speech of Pericles, and others from famous orators, made the early citizens of individual liberty and freedom, have ever been a guiding star to the people of Britain and all other democracies.

The prosperity and foreign wars unhappily eventually lost these rights to the Athenians themselves, and for a long period of time the form of Government called democracy completely disappeared from the face of the earth, not to be restored until the English won it back for the common people when King John was obliged to sign the great Magna Carta at Runnymede on June 15th, 1215

To-day this great charter of the freedom of the individual, originally won by the Greeks, afterwards lost by the Romans and the common people, the English, is again in jeopardy, and we must never, never, never allow them to deprive us free people of their cherished liberties; and as prepare it more than a mere coincidence that the Greek peoples of the British Empire are fighting side by side to safeguard their ancient and sacred rights and privileges.

The threatened danger in their entirety has certainly inspired the British people; and the whole world now sees that glowing spirit of resistance to a ruthless enemy, and the willingness to endure and to suffer sacrifices for one's country, has not been procured from British nature; and it seems one that through generations it has been passed on and modern implements of war, the patriotic and martial spirit which was such an outstanding attribute of the ancient Greeks is flaring up again in modern British hearts.

There ever has been an extraordinary similarity between the Islands of Britain and the Islands of Greece; for both countries won their place in the world and maintained it by their navies, by winning and maintaining superiority on the seas. The great victory won by the ancient Greeks in the naval battle of Salamis in 480 B.C., whereby the Athenian fleet utterly defeated the vastly superior Persian navy, is an astonishing parallel to the defeat of the Spanish Armada by the much smaller English fleet under Admiral Drake, and by which the prospects too the great empire finally achieved by Greece, mainly by her navy, have quite a similar parallel in modern British Empire

The very means which we bear to-day from the scenes of war were all on the tongues of the ancient Greeks. For the Islands of Crete, Corfu, Leukas, Cephalonia, Zante, Cythera, Samos and Rhodes of the Greeks, and the Aegean Sea, the Port of Piraeus, Salamis—then called Thermo—and the city of Athens, were the scenes of the defeat of Desmystery over Xerxes years ago, just as they are scenes to-day.

To Trade Is Natural—

To trade, to do business, to buy and sell is natural. As natural as breathing, eating, sleeping or walking. No race of humans are known to exist who do not buy, sell or trade to some extent. Even if one lived under a breadfruit tree in a tropical country there would still be something lacking — butter — and surplus breadfruit would probably be traded to somebody who possessed cows or goats, for butter.

This is no tropical country and there are certainly no breadfruit trees around, but there are quite a number of things that could be traded or sold. A used plow, tractor, binder or any other piece of farm equipment. Furniture too, or even clothing very often have resale value, often having done duty for their original owner. And then too, there is that extra horse in the pasture, cow in the barn, extra pigs in the sty or even chickens in the chicken house.

Somebody, somewhere, may be looking for any one of these things and the easiest, cheapest and most effective way to let people know they are for sale is through a CLASSIFIED WANT AD in the MERCURY.

At same time, he stressed the fact that each man must sign the medical examination form on which Typhus the doctor's report on his physical condition.

Their place re-registration in this connection will enable registrars to obtain other eligible young men to replace those unable to go.

Any application for postponement of training must be made to the Divisional Registrar within eight clear days of the date appearing on the notice for medical examination.

Following the same procedure adopted in the first group, a number of young men called upon to undergo military training, those in the second group will have to be used finally fit will be notified. Transport warrants, covering transportation from the recorded place of residence to the indicated training centre, will be issued in due course.

Used Car Values

Today the used car buyer is getting the greatest value in the history of the industry. Improvements in design and engineering have increased the life curve of the automobile to rise rapidly, while the used car price curve has dropped sharply.

Records show that the man who buys a new car gets style and advanced features usually turns it in every two or three years, although the car may be in the prime of usefulness and transportation. This is an important factor from the standpoint of the used car buyer.

And because the average car serves approximately four years and its second from six to eight years, the man who buys a comparatively new, to-date used car gets about four times as much for his money as does the first owner.

Indians Give Furs To Help Red Cross

Winnipeg, Man. Nov. 4.—Some 600 Cree Indians living in the vicinity of Nelson House, Man., a remote trapping district 300 miles north of Winnipeg, are making their contribution to Canada's war effort in true traditional style by donating pelts of fur-bearing animals, according to advices received by the Canadian National Railways' Game Department. Furs are sold to traders and proceeds turned over to the Red Cross.

In The Automotive World

The theory that a speedometer from a wrecked car records the speed at which the car had been traveling is a fallacy, and one which has been presented frequently in court, Bosch a leading manufacturer does not appear to be true in the light of opinions recently expressed by competent authorities.

For instance, it is the considered opinion of C. E. McVay, Chief Engineer of Parts and Service, General Motors Products of Canada Limited, that very seldom would the speedometer from a wrecked automobile record the speed at which the car had been travelling. Mr. McVavish points out that if a person takes a speedometer in his hand and turns his wrist quickly, the speed dial may register as high as 100 miles an hour. On the other hand, he explained, the speedometer on a car which had been travelling at 50 miles an hour might register practically nothing, if the car were struck on one side and the dial were swung in the other direction due to the blow.

"It would be practically impossible for the speedometer to register the speed at which the car travelled prior to the accident," declared Mr. McTavish, "unless the indicating hand remained immediately before the impact—a very rare possibility.

SPAIN AND THE WAR

Hot-Head Philologists Cry For Empire But People Need Peace and Bread

S. D. Gamma

Spain holds a key position in the Mediterranean. Will she remain neutral? Will Hitler and Mussolini, in order to attack the British hold on Gibraltar and the Western Straits, force the Spaniards to enter the war on their side?

First, Spain needs peace. For two and a half years, she was ravaged by a Civil war, intensified and prolonged by foreign intervention, in which the lessons in man-power, material and trade were very heavy.

In transport alone, half the railway rolling stock and road vehicles were destroyed. At the end of the war, eighteen months ago, production had fallen very low. There were no reserves from foreign markets and there was great civilian distress.

Spain is now apparently agricultural, but since the war agricultural production has fallen by a third. Only 25 per cent of the national consumption of milk is being produced. 25 per cent of the wheat supplies have to be imported at heavy cost and there is a shortage of bread in many parts of the country.

There is also a shortage of cattle, particularly draught oxen for ploughing.

In order to develop her great potential agricultural and mineral wealth Spain needs peace.

Paying For Axis Aid

But the price of victory has to be paid. Germany and Italy are now selling Nationalist Spain to forget that they are authors of her victories.

The present form of government, the Falangist National Syndicalism, with the administration organised in "Movements" and the first group of young men called upon to undergo military training, those in the second group will have to be used finally fit will be notified. Transport warrants, covering transportation from the recorded place of residence to the indicated training centre, will be issued in due course.

Spain pride demands independence, and Spaniards know quite well that it was not love of Spain that moved German and Italian to Franco's help. Nevertheless Axis pressure is strong, and its more open and perhaps less dangerous form is shown in the violent anti-British talk of the controlled Press, the demonstrations on the arrival of the new British Ambassador in Madrid a few weeks ago, and in the renewed claims of Gibraltar.

Drift Towards War

On the contrary, indeed, it has at times appeared that Spain is drifting towards complete alliance with the Axis powers. In July 1939, in an interview he gave to a Portugese journalist, General Franco, stressing Spain's need for reconstruction and peace, said that in the event of a European War Spain would be "as neutral as possible".

On the outbreak of war Spain declared herself completely neutral and, though military missions visited Rome and Berlin, the neutral attitude was correctly maintained, and even re-affirmed on the invasion of the Netherlands in May.

But after Italy's entry into the war Spain adopted a policy of "non-belligerency" and the Fy. 8, which recommended by the Axis powers as the news favourable to the Allies, broke out in exaggeratedly hostile Axis sympathy.

In June, the Spaniards occupied the international zone of Tangier, this the first consequence of the French collapse, was a reminder of the Imperialist ambitions of the new Spain. This move, and the claim to Gibraltar, made in the Phalanx paper "Arriba", and later in the whole Press, showed that the desire for reconstruction and peace" did not preclude a lively interest in foreign affairs.

There is a good deal of artificial stimulation by foreign propaganda behind the press campaign for Gibraltar, the recovery of which, though a patriotic ambition, has never called for the ordinary Spaniard a vital issue.

The Real Issue

The only vital issues in Spain today are bread and work; and though hot-heads in the Phalanx may have immediate ambitions to close the Straits of Gibraltar from both sides there are signs that the Spanish Government realises the danger of reinvolving in the webs of Germany and Italy.

The Italians have never enjoyed the esteem of the Spaniards who, after fighting alongside them, have a low opinion of their valour The Germans are better respected and better liked; Spaniard has a ready admiration for technical efficiency, and moreover, the Germans in Spain behaved well.

WHAT BRITAIN HAS DONE

Galloway Gazette, Scotland

If ever there has been a country for which a man might work with loyalty and pride surely it is Britain. A mere speck on the ocean, and yet four-fifths of the world's ships fly the British flag. "The flag that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze." It is true that our geographical position is more favourably situated than many other countries We have a bracing and genial climate. An American writer described his country as being bounded on the South by the Equator, on the East by the Atlantic ocean, on the North by the Aurora Borealis, and on the West by the setting sun; but we can go further and boast of the we never nothing upon our glorious Empire.

We British should reflect with more pride and satisfaction that our brave soldiers are everywhere present not as enemies, but as friends and protectors. The motto of our Home Guards—"Defence, not defiance." is also applicable to our Army, Navy and Air Force. This great Empire of Britain has been built by the peace, energy and industry of our forefathers, and we have a duty to preserve it for our children. We must feel that "come what may come," we are ready to defend it to the last drop of blood.

It is not sufficiently known by the rank-and-file that our Royal Family has done what no other country has ever attempted to do. At the end of the Napoleonic struggle France was crushed, and the Allies occupied Paris. Britain was not so embittered that the entire cost of abolishing the slave traffic amounted to over £100, 000,000 sterling.

From 1850 to 1860 our colonies were loaded with £54,000,000 and yet we are told by Britain's enemies that our colonies have been bled dry by Britain. The statement is false, and it has ever occurred.

Charles, Prince of Wales, in his address to the Welsh Catholic country which underwent three years civil war to secure Parliament.

Then the British collapse brought the German army to the Pyrenees. Spain's own claims that these ambitions Germans military ambitions. A proposed parade of victorious Nazi troops in Madrid, and the rich mineral resources of Spain.

Then the Falangists part in a set-back for German influence. Spain's hostility to Russia is a fixed principal in the Anti-Catholic country which underwent three years civil war to secure Communism.

LAND FEEDING

Loads feeding is becoming more important as tuturest develops in sheep raising. Profitable returns from cowship be made from fattening lambs if they are properly fed and managed.

At the University of Alberta considerable work has been done with the fattening of lambs as a result of which the following recommendations are made. These are contained in Bulletin No. 19 "Sheep Production in Alberta" issued by the Department of Animal Husbandry of the University of Alberta.

During the first two weeks in the feed lot a mixture of grain consisting of oats, 2 parts by weight, and wheat or barley one part by weight is a satisfactory ration. For the next two weeks equal parts of oats and barley or wheat are recommended, and during the third two weeks one part of oats and 2 parts of barley or wheat is satisfactory. For the rest of the feeding period the wheat and barley may be increased to three parts to one of oats. Most satisfactory gains are obtained when these grains are fed whole.

Rates of feeding grain are variously stated. When lambs are first placed in the feed lots they should get not over 1 1/2 pounds of grain per day per head. For strong thrifty lambs weighing from 75 to 85 pounds this amount may be gradually increased until at the end of the month each lamb is receiving from 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 pounds. For rapid finishing up to 1 1/2 pounds may be fed, and towards the end of the feeding period from one to sometimes consume two pounds of grain daily.

Good quality roughage is essential One greenfeed should be supplemented with 1 1/2 pounds of grain per head per day. Alfalfa hay is being fed over a prolonged period, lambs should have access to clean, bright straw as well

When legume hay is not available, mixed leaf meal should be fed with the grain. 10 pounds of meal to 90 pounds of grain ration is the proportion suggested. When legume hay is lacking, about one per cent of ground limestone should be added to the grain ration. Salt should be available at all times.

The Invasion Of Britain Planned — Foiled

By Connie Stebbins, Student Tofield High School

Prime Minister Churchill revealed to the world on October 8, that Germany has amassed 1,800,000 crack troops in southern France and had sufficient transports for 500,000 of them, preparatory for the long promised invasion of Britain. The Prime minister gave the account of the work of the Royal Air Force in destroying the sea transports and key military concentrations during the night of the planned battle Mr Churchill gave his account of recent war developments against the invaders and the attacks Germany has yet caused at Britain — an attack matched only by a record breaking raid against Berlin. The failure of this attack is regarded as of the same importance as the shifting of the theatre of war to another part of Europe.

Hitler's drive for a widening of the axis, has met with natural setback of success and failure.

France, suffering greatly under the Nazi dictatorship, views this opportunity to raise the stream and to set up her former relations with her enemy.

The French were in no position to resist, therefore the Germans were able to make their own terms and to enforce them. The use of French bases for the invasion of Germany will prove annoying, but for real value they won't alter the situation much.

In Spain, Hitler failed. Spain is a neutral country and remains so. Facist militarism and economic system, and has shown friendly relations with the axis powers. Nevertheless Spain has a no position for war and General Franco, realizing the hardships of war, refused have been outlined as follows:

1. Spain has not recovered from the disastrous Civil War.
2. The economic decade of Spain would be too effective.
3. Spain has not been convinced that Germany will be victorious.

The British, undeniably the greater leg of Europe, have again blown up. Following a brief visit of Hitler to Mussolini the peripheries have been finally swung into effect. Greece, as ever before stood to defend their country and appear to be doing so effectively. As the winter campaign develops the position of the other Balkan countries is pointing Russia's way virtually in the possession of Germany Bulgaria has shown friendly relations with the axis. Russia has become more perplexing as she will greatly affected by any advance of axis in the Balkans. The opening of this new front, affecting an area in which Russia claims a vital interest, should enable us to define, pretty accurately what the future attitude of Russia will be The attitude of Turkey is still undefined but in any event the axis move into Greece is a direct confliction to Turkish interests.

HASTINGS LAKE

The pie-social and dance held at the school on the 8th under the auspices of the Winona Club proved to be quite successful. Despite the prevailing low temperature and rough roads the attendance was large, Lunch-break, Splattered and even Ketchup-mood being represented. A sum in the neighborhood of twenty-four dollars is realized, a new little contribution indeed for the Red Cross. Fine work, there ladies.

The next entertainment billed for school house will be on the 19th of this month and is all probability will be a dance, the purpose of which will be to raise funds for the children's concert The children are busy just now selling tickets on a draw and a dressing is scheduled to take place prize is a grosse combination—ham and Eggs. Incidentally the first prize is a goose and the second a table cloth Sounds interesting Are you going? Disappointed Miss Coughlin and the children? We'll be seeing you then

We were sorry to note that the travelling writer (Hastings Lake has a change of correspondent, Editor as the weather) made reference to the "Aves" in a somewhat derogatory tone While perhaps she doesn't realize it, despite the fact that a good many visitors have gone by since the "Aves" first shaved the down off their faces (thereby removing that last vestige of boyhood) the dear boys are still able to navigate the end of a toboggan. It is true that "Aves" will not be so much in evidence this year but this regretable fact is due entirely to lamentable pass this on for what it is worth. The new training officer described the boys as these:

In all tests we made they passed with flying colors.

These boys they call the "Aves". They will go far and stop at nothing. You can tell that by their faces.

Finer manhood we've never seen. With clarions great and shots so true. Veterans all of many a battle Oh Aves! Why weren't they all like you

Which after all only exemplifies the spirit so characteristic of the famous boys.

Quite a few people from this district are planning to celebrate with the Old Timers on Thursday in Edmonton.

Tuesday afternoon a number of local ladies gathered at R. C. Phillips where they held a shower in honor of Mrs. Donald Phillips. Seeing that this was put on by the ladies of the L.C.C. for the Red Cross we guess that their special reporter will dish up the trimmings in their official report, re social and financial aspects of the party.

Mr. Ralph Kortzman returned home from his work at Lethbridge where he has been all summer but has left again in company with Mr John Pruden for Breton where they will work in the lumber camp.

Messrs. R. Scott and C. Lindgren returned home from Calgary, lately They have been there harvesting and threshing ever since the early fall, but say they have returned to Calgary, possibly to resume threshing operations.

FIRE ALARM

About 11:30 Wednesday morning the siren sounded a fire alarm at Tofield. The blaze occurred in the left rear room at the cutting rink where some boards overhead had become ignited from a stove or the wiring, we guess.

The chemical responded and put out the blaze before it did very much damage.

United Church News

The Church Board that met after the close of the evening service last Sunday, reviewed the work and life of the congregation.

There is much to encourage the attendance at church, the work of the Sunday School, the CGIT activities etc. But the financial standing leaves much room for improvement. The Board sincerely hopes that there will be a generous response before the end of the year from all.

A short sing-song preceding the service was suggested.

MONEY RETURNED TO OWNER

Legend has it that Diogenes, an ancient Greek, despaired of finding an honest man. Perhaps in his age he would have since they were hard to find, but in these days, well, the Club Cafe at Tofield would be a good place to look.

Earning money by pounding nails on grain elevator construction is not much reward for the gutter in the shekels and when the money is left by error in a police restaurant, most people would count the hard earned money lost.

But it so happened that Dave of the Club Cafe found the money, a nice little sum, and returned it to the delighted owner.

I Would you mind sending to the Camrose Library a complimentary copy to your paper? I am sure you local boys, when they are in camp, would be happy to find it here.

2 Would you be good enough to insert an appeal for books to be donated to our library, good reading and in as good condition as possible? We NOW need books at present, except that we would be happy to have some Canadian or National Geographics.

If books from your community could be sent to your office for shipment together, express would be a small item. Possibly the Legion or I.O.D.E., or W.I. or some such organization would be glad to take care of the cost.

We would like books within the next week or ten days. If possible, for cataloguing before the next camp opens on November 22.

Chapter VII

21 Months

Audrey Swan is the only daughter of a highly respected home. Her father, Curtis, adores his pretty wife and daughter, and they have many friends. Jeffrey, a newspaper man in New York, is just divorced, to somewhat Judge Castle's desire to make Jeffrey a partner in his law firm does not fit in with Jeffrey's plans, nor Oliver's, but Annie Dodds, the Judge's elderly secretary, is forced by ill health to retire, and Jeffrey must help his father through the summer. Audrey loves Mona's Jeff's friend, Victor Quinn. She is walking with him to a favorite spot of hers and mentions that but also of a real time since was to come there with a good book and a couple apples.

"You look here, Audrey You know what I'm driving at. Nothing has changed with me. But suppose I'd turned up in Parville for an indefinite stay. Frankly, wouldn't you have thought it pretty poor taste not to say how!

"No. Why should you think I would ever stand in the way of your helping a friend or helping yourself to something better? There's no reason that I can see."

"That's mighty swell of you. I believe I'll broach the subject to the chief Brand this afternoon if I get a chance. If he's agreeable, I may do it."

• • •

Henry Brand listened attentively to his subordinate's request and was unexpectedly co-operative. "I can't wonder, Quinn, that you wish the association with Judge Castle. It is a real opportunity for a young man. I think it could be arranged if you wish."

Victor's next move was to call Jeffrey Castle at Parville. "I say Jeff," he began with a carelessness that would have done credit to Jeffrey himself. "I just talked over that proposition with Mr. Brand. He was good enough to urge me to accept. I think it will mean a lot for both of us. I guess he's right."

"You mean you'll come, then?" Jeff's relief and delight were apparent. "That's the best news I've had in an age!"

"Yes. That is, if you plan to be away long enough to make it worth while."

"Oh, it will be plenty long."

"What about your father?"

"He'll be tickled pink! He's away for a few days. But I take him I was trying to get someone to help here and he'll be delighted to know it's you. Don't worry. He's all settled."

"Well, look for me about the third. That's next week."

Marvelous! Come right to the house. We'll put you up until you have a chance to look about."

I'd rather you didn't mention it to anyone until it's settled."

"I won't . . . you sly dog! Good-bye."

He hung up before Victor had a chance to refute the final innuendo.

• • •

December had come before Jeffrey appeared again in the Parville office. After an enthusiastic greeting, his first question was "Is my father at home?"

"Ha." Victor returned in some amusement. "He went up to the city on business . . . plans to return tomorrow. Evidently this is a surprise visit. Did Mrs Castle come with you?"

"Ha," Jeff answered shortly . . . she is at home. We came back rather unexpectedly. Dave wanted to rest up and I thought I'd run out and see how everybody was . . . got a report of your stewardship."

"That's easy." Victor laughed too. "My talent at all wrapped up in a man like Dave. She won't consent to little Jeff running to travel. That's her home, either. She is starting out a little over your head, I know. I on an apartment hunt today. That's about say that married life seems to all settled, too. You know, Ver, I'm agree with you."

He had been appearing Jeffrey closely since that young man had good in a chair with graceful ease. He was faultlessly attired and had a healthy outdoor colouring. But Victor thought he detected an expression on his face, lines at the corners of his mouth that never had been there before. Jeff's eyes were not those of a happy man.

"I am going pretty fit, thanks," Jeffrey admitted. "How everything around the dump?"

"All right. I would say. When do you plan to settle down at Castle's?"

"You don't have to give any particulars if you don't want to," Victor added politely, you know."

"No . . . not about that. Ver It's going to take me a little time to get straightened out . . . settled, I mean. How's Audrey and her folks? I suppose you've seen quite a lot of them since you've been here."

"In a matter of fact, I haven't been out a few times to visit them. I must run out and say hello before I go back Mother's in town, I suppose?"

"So far as I know."

"Guess I'd better jog out there and give her a look. Friend of following up his suggestion, Jeffrey lighted a cigarette and sat smoking quietly, staring at the wall in front of him.

His absorption in his thoughts became evident that Victor somewhat strained to break the silence. "Looks as if you're doing some heavy thinking me" he suggested.

"I am. Eh? . . . me. Look here, Vic Jeff was still staring at the wall. " . . . what sort of a deal did make with Brand?"

"They expect to take care of me when I come back." Victor said briefly without taking his eyes from his other man's face.

"I see Then you could stay on here indefinitely."

"Look here, Jeff. You can't do that."

Instead of replying directly, Jeffrey observed: "I had only one letter from the old gentleman while I was gone. It mailed from Honolulu. Most of it was panegyric devoted to you. I wasn't unimpressed, knowing your efficiency of old. I could see that my absence wasn't disrupting the scheme of the Parville universe."

"Don't be an ass!" Victor retorted sharply. "Look at me if you don't mind, and tell me what all this drivel is leading to."

"I'm not coming back to Parville." "You don't mean that, of course. There's nothing else for you to do, man.

"Think not? You're not married, Vic. But you must have some imagination. Do you suppose I could have your wife's affection for the sake of a mere business partnership?"

"I'm afraid I'm not acquainted with that sort of affection, Jeff do. I suppose you're going to tell me that Mrs Castle is standing by her determination to remain in the city I recall you mentioned it before you went away."

"That's right. I must but unwise. She sees no reason for me commute back here, and that's all-sufficient. There's no argument."

"But good Lord, Jeff! A man's self-respect counts for something! Surely a woman . . . those I suppose have to take on

Chapter VIII.

"That's a pity"

"It's one of those things," he offered grimly. "The sooner it's over with, the better. I suppose you think it's funny, Clyde, that I should come barging over here with my troubles. You've always been an understanding kid."

"Best of luck, Jeff. Always." The surprised man bounded forward and settles into a swinging gallop. Andrey was thinking that Jeff never would be coming back any more.

Dust, or something was sashing her eyes smart.

It was almost lunch time the following day when Judge George Castle arrived home from the city and greeted his newly returned son. "But where's Olive?" was almost his first question. "I particularly wanted to see her."

"I left her at home" was the brief explanation.

"When do you expect her down?"

"Soon I dare say."

After that the conversation among the three Castles was of a general nature, devoted largely to an account of the wedding, business and political conditions as Jeffrey had observed them. When the trio left the table, Mrs Castle smilingly remarked that Olive might return to her room for a little while "Jeffrey," his father announced, "I have an errand before we settle down to rest. I should need the car Tell Dean that you will drive me, if you don't mind."

"I'll be very glad to, sir." Jeffrey was experiencing a momentary thankfulness He had intended to blurt out his last news to his father without any preliminaries, once they were alone But this made it easy to postpone the ordeal.

Down at the road gates, the Judge dismissed a left turn and did not speak until they neared the Rose estate "Is here please, Jeffrey." The latter negotiated the circular drive in some surprise, brought the machine to a stop at the foot of the porch steps.

"I've a boy somewhere," the Judge said. "The dood and title search for this plane came through the office not long since Quinn looked after it for us." He stepped heavily from the car. "I have been cousins to see the general conditions of things. Come along. Let's have a look."

Jeffrey followed his parent with all much enthusiasm, helped him with a door and the two began a circuit of the orderless rooms.

"I should say that it is in excellent shape" the Judge decided when the inspection found "How do you like this house, my boy?" he inquired abruptly

Jeffrey felt his heart sink It was his first possession of a fresh domestic "Why, place, he managed daily

"Do you think it will appeal to Olive?"

"I, Olive?"

Judge George gave vent to a throaty chuckle. "This is your home from now on, my son and Olive's! A little gift from your mother and me." The words seemed to be coming from some distance off "Now things known that we could n't keep you at home," Jeff heard dimly. "But it has been our ambition to have you close by so that we could enjoy our grand-children."

Jeffrey sat staring at his father with such a vacant expression that the Judge smiled an rangy-rated, "Well, what ails you?"

"I wish I had known about this sad, Father Wish you had told me It's perfectly swell of you and Mother But it's like this I'm not sure how much of the time we'll be here at Parrie like after this. You see Olive likes the city She's never lived on a small town or on the country and the idea sort of gets her down."

"Interesting, really May I ask where she does intend to live?"

"She wants me to take a position in her father's office. Mr Harrison has been kind enough to ar- range it."

"What sort of a position" What are your duties?"

"Oh, executive of some sort. We really haven't thrashed out the details, naturally."

"Naturally. But you are thinking of allowing your wife to support you."

"Of course I'm not! Harrison's is a huge concern There is no reason why there can't be a future in it for a young man."

"Hi- not for you, Jeffrey You will learn that they have not the slightest need for your services. I wonder that you can accept the situation We spoke of it once before, prior to your marriage. You were quite independent then. You led me to believe that you would settle down here as we had planned — many times."

"You don't quite understand, Father, I

"I presume," the Judge went on coldly, "that this was all arranged before you were married. Did you know it then, Jeffrey, or did you not?"

"I did not." Jeffrey turned appealingly to his father. "See here, sir!" he exclaimed "I can't let it stand like this, if there is anything out of it. I'm thinking about the house. I know that Olio was under the impression that if we came here we would live with you and Mother for the time being I real home like the one you have given us may appeal to her She could have the bureau and all that sort of thing don't say anything to mother yet. I'll drive back to night and have a talk with Olio to- morrow morning. Don't you think I would be a good idea?"

"You are a better Judge than I, Jeffrey." The older man's voice sounded coldency tired. "Did you tell Quinn that you were not going to have a home here?"

"Yes He was thinking about lunch."

"But he will remain now?"

"He wasn't sure, Said he would have to think it over."

"He will stay here, by golly! the Judge retorted explosively. "I do not intend to be let down by everybody."

"Well, and how did you find everything down in the stacks?" Olive Castle walked up at her husband from her breakfast tray

"Oh, fine," he assured her "The books are both well Very much disappointed that you didn't remain- ing Had a chat with old Vi in the office He looks like a million dollars."

"How's Audrey?"

"The unexpected question caught him off guard this morning. He recovered Olive's last word

"Audrey"

"Why, yes. You seem to have rounded up everybody you know in Parrelle. I could have graven you wouldn't overlook her"

"Oh, sure. Yes, I did see her. Happened to bump into Audrey on the road. We had a little visit from the saddle. She looked very well, I thought."

"That was nice." There was much ing but interest pleasure in his wife's face and words, but Jeffrey felt a sudden discomfort. Darn it all, he HAD met Audrey accidentally— merely riding past when he saw her At a distance surprise that she didn't sound as well as a story

"What sort of a day did YOU have him?"

"Terrible enough. Looked at the apartments and further on when suited, We really don't need more than two rooms, if they are arranged right."

"Ah," Jeff agreed smilingly. "that's fine agaeee. We ought to be able to keep out of each other's way on clear days. Speaking of shades, darling, have you ever thought it would be nice to have a country place of our own?"

Hardly Dad has his hunting lodge in Maine. the place in the mountains and the one down at the shore They're almost always empty."

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, November 18:—What was probably the quietest civic election in Edmonton's history passed off this week with the return of the political slate in power. A record was created in the return of Mayor John W. Fry for his fourth term. But no sensation was the public it was possible to find people everywhere who bore "forgotten in vote".

Another record was broken this year in the number of pleasure car licenses issue; in Alberta, with 3, 506 more than the whole of last year. The total so far is 81,000. With truck licenses, the total has reached 113,000, as compared with 112,450 for the whole of 1939. Drivers' licenses, too, have increased. Up to November 13, 146,000 had been issued, compared with 137,000 for the whole of 1939

University students who join the active service forces will have their Students' Union fees refunded, it was ruled by the union council this week. Other activities in the union will include the raising of funds for the annual Christmas fund, which is used to aid needy players to mostly families of the District Nursing Service of the department of health.

Edmonton's new health units have commenced operations and more than 50,000 Albertans will immediately begin to benefit from their membership in what is probably the most successful form of public health effort in Canada today. The new units are Bracken, covering the Sturgeon school division and serving 19,000 people including Calling Lake, and Rossdod, with headquarters at Olds and Didsbury which serves 18,000 people including 7,000 children. There are six municipal districts in the latter. The Sturgeon unit is organized between the school division providing the original field of operations. Records indicate a great saving in human life, especially among infants, in Health Unit organizations.

LONDON

(Bi monumentum requiris, circumspice.)

Old London's time-encrusted walls
Are but the work of human hands.
What man has fashioned for us falls;
What God has breathed into us stands.

What if the splendor of the past
Is shattered into dust? We raise
A monument that shall outlast
Even the Abbey's span of days.

On broken homes we set our feet
And raise proud heads that all may see,
Immortal as each little street,
The soul in its integrity.
—A . A. Milne, in "The Times" (London).

"TIME MARCHES ON"—

WE WERE riding on the train last Friday and in the same coach were a number of young fellows enroute to do their thirty days military training in Camrose. As the train moved along we thought of other days when we had been riding in a similar railroad coach among a similar bunch of fellows. A time going back thirty years. In those days from the city of Edmonton there would go out periodically many young men. They had reached Edmonton from many parts -- "the old country" (really meaning many plleces), south of the border and and heaven knows where. They were out on a big adventure which to some proved a great success and to others a mere changing over from one mode of life to another.

These trains carried carefree young men enroute to the inmber camps, railroad construction gangs, and homesteads of which they had heard much and seen nothing. The train service, at least this part of it, was not particularly good in those days and when you left Edmonton in the morning it was quite common to reach Stony Plain for a late mid-day meal. We frequently saw the men pile into restaurants by the score, hungry but happy, for what did a few hours mean then?

Last Friday's experience caused us to ponder over some of the changes that has taken place in Canada since those days. Then here in the west, certainly in the small towns, a military or naval uniform was rarely seen and of course "air-force blue" was an unborn thing. A mere recital of changes brought about by the passing years in the mixed trains of thirty years ago went out individually and collectively to help build up a country. There were few emotions and energy and initiative plus good character were about all that were required to ensure a measure of success.

To put it briefly, those boys of thirty years ago built a country—the boys we saw last Friday were going to learn how to defend it. And of the two, we doubt whether Solomon himself could say which is the most important.

WE COULD BE WORSE OFF—

(The Hanna Herald)

. . . . These matters are serious but the fact remains that we are infinitely better off than millions of unfortunate people in embattled Europe. We have first of all an abundance of food and ample facilities to produce more. Then we have a degree of personal security to be not known in Europe. We need not crane our necks daily and nightly to watch for aeroplanes with cargoes of bombs to drop on our homes. We never think of looking for advance guards of invading armies, which would compel us to gather a few belongings and fly to some place of imagined security. We are not handicapped by blockades nor worried by continual threats.

In these eventful times, while the greater part of the world is in the throes of terrible agonies, we are comparitively safe and secure and our concern does not lie directly with prospective battles. Our economic troubles are trifling compared with the vicissitudes of other peoples. S we should not dwell too much on possible troubles ahead. The best thing to do is to deal with each problem as it arises and do our part. No person can do more. If things turn out adversely it is just unfortunate, but we can console ourselves by the knowledge that matters might be much worse.

We are living in a time of dire peril. The threat to our nation and empire is real and terrible. But, as Mr. Winston Churchill advises, we should thrill to the fact that upon us depends so much, and also that we are living in one of the periods of history when world-shaking events are in process of developing.

A little less complaining and a little more fortitude is what is needed. There is no place in the whole world where there is complete surcease from tribulations. We have to bear what troubles come our way as bravely as possible.

RACE TRACK BETTING IN CANADA IN 1940

During 1940, the Dominion Department of Agriculture supervised pari-mutuel betting at the tracks of 26 racing associations, holding 35 race meetings, comprised of 284 days racing. 2,807 races had 27,625 starters, as compared with 28 racing associations holding 35 race meetings, comprised of 285 days racing, 2,861 races and 27,874 starters, in 1939.

FEAR

The great God Pan grinned back at me;
"I am the foe men never see,
I am the fear they never feel," said he,
"I am the wrong they never bear,
The poison they themselves prepare,
I am the shadow on the stair.

"I have no voice as yet I speak;
No strength and yet I blanch the cheek
And leave the strongest mortals weak.

"I am the blackness man befriends,
Hands must, fiends, cherishes, attends!
And 'gainst all counsel wise defends
"I fire as gun, I make no cry.

No lodging place in fact have I.
Yet I'm the countless deaths men die
Mine is honor ghastly grim,
The lamp of reason I can dim.
The I am casting but a whim.
"I am man's cruelest, bitterest foe,
Yet past his door I could not go.
Had he the will to tell me "No."

BANK OF MONTREAL REPORT

Simply in all departments, the Bank of Montreal's annual financial statement (issued today), reflects the increasing rate at which business throughout the Dominion has been operating during the past year.

After a year of war assets of $961,234,000, show some contraction as compared with the previous report, when an all time record of $1,022,500,307 was established—due in part to investments of a special nature, as was explained at the annual meeting of shareholders—but show a substantial increase over the total of $871,455,000 reported a year ago. Deposits at $848,865,349, compare with $811,234,000 a year ago. Loans on circulation at $10,816,528, are less by $1,506,572, as compared with the previous year. CHECKERBOARD LOVE

CHAPTER IX

"You thought he'd be returning. It did not seem too much to expect. It appears that it was quite too much, however." There was deep bitterness in the older man's voice.

"I'm sorry," Victor offered simply. "As you can well appreciate, Quinn, this situation is unfortunate for me, aside from the personal and family standpoint. I can no longer count upon Jeffrey And Miss Dodds will never be able to return to her duties. Victor made no response. He could guess what was coming.

"I still be perfectly frank with you, Quinn," the Judge continued, "I am aware that Jeffrey has planned you to stay on permanently with me. I am sounding that request on my own behalf."

"That is exceedingly kind of you, Judge Castle, but I . . ."

"I know. I know. You are under the impression that your legal career will be modified by what Parville has to offer. I can appreciate that, but I believe that I can assure you that you are wrong. How old are you?"

"Twenty-eight."

"And well matured. You have been of very great service to me during your stay. I have learned to my satisfaction that I can depend upon you. There is and will be plenty of practice here for a young man, and my attorneys, such as it is, will be at your service. I need you. What do you say, sir?"

"I am offering you a partnership, Quinn. A full partnership here. That is what I promised Jeffrey. It does not interest him."

"That's a bit overwhelming," Victor managed "I don't think that I need tell you I never anticipated . . ."

"No, no!" the Judge interrupted hastily. "If you can see your way clear to accept my offer you will be doing a long way toward making up to me what I have lost."

"Yes, sir." Victor sensed the conference was concluded and went back to his desk in the outer office. He sat for a long time making aimless marks on a pad, his brows contracted, and his strong lower jaw set grimly. Without waiting for a reply, he At length he tossed aside his pencil clutched off his cap and addressed and reached for the telephone. "I'm sure Jeff doesn't want to come back here any more."

"It's . . . it's a little worse than that, Audrey. He can't come back. His father-in- will be cashed.

Jeff"

Audrey caught her breath at Victor's blunt announcement. She knew what that expression meant, but it was difficult to comprehend Judge Castle didn't want Jeff to come home any more. There was something unreal about it—almost melodramatic.

"I don't know that." A stupid thing to say under the circumstances. "I shouldn't be thinking of myself." Victor admitted grim town, evasively. "It's not going to be easy for all of them. At the same time, it puts me in rather an embarrassing position Audrey," he added quietly. "I have made a habit of never the impression that your legal career will be modified by what Parville has to offer. I can appreciate that, but I believe that I can assure you that you are wrong. IT'S NEVER TOO LATE

Edmonton, November 12:—When Matthew B. Fyffe, 11424 86A street, steppe, set at Argyrelle on his way to Regina and had to pay his fare from this town to the Saskatchewan capital because his ticket did not see-over privileges he was very much annoyed

That happened 21 years ago — June 8, 1919 — and a few days ago Mr. Fyffe was seeing belated satisfaction as he brought his original ticket to the Canadian National Railways downtown office for a refund on the unused portion of his original Edmonton-Regina ticket.

The original ticket came to light during the week as Mrs. Fyffe was doing a little house cleaning She came across an old purse that her husband had used when a member of the famous Royal North West Mounted Police. The purse was kept as a souvenir.

In it she picked it up she felt the parchment, and took it out to examine it. She showed it to her husband, who chuckled. "This is where I got my money back from the railways. He took the ticket to the railway offices and it is being forwarded to Ottawa for secrete there, his request for the unused portion of the ticket

The ticket was issued on a mounted police warrant, and formed part of the equipment issued to Mr. Fyffe when he left that force on discharge.

CURE WHOOPING COUGH BY AIRPLANE FLIGHTS

(from London Times)

Interesting experiments have been made in switzerland with the idea of curing whoo ping-cough by airplane flights. Profes sor Alfred Vogt, with the permission of a army command, has carried out flights with sick children most of whom have shown a rapid improvement

IT'S TIME TO GO HOME

Canada is urgently in need of aeroplanes, aeroplane engines and parts and other vital war requirements Most of such materials must be purchased in the United States and must be paid for in cash, in United States dollars, or in exchange for goods.

There are large quantities of aeroplanes of the purpose to which one can exchange resources may be diverted, aeroplanes and other munitions of war are more important to the national interest today than pleasure travel and should be given preference.

A resident of Canada must have a permit to take Canadian or American money back from the United States. The Foreign Exchange Control Board specifies United States dollars and silver coin. To secure these, his request for permit of the unused portion of the must be made on the prescribed form.

It is not as if Mr. Fyffe will have any further rest ore from the ticket, and also the last chuckle

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

From information which the "Crop Testing Plan" is receiving it seems that farmers are hesitating about their usual crop plans in purchase some better seed to improve this coming crop.

One can understand this hesitation, for so many different ideas are being expressed about what should be done about the next crop. Some think there may be a complete "Wheat Holiday", or that acreage will be drastically reduced by Government control. Some even think, when they see the great surplus, that there is no future for wheat growing.

For my own part I do not hold with these views. I believe that almost all the present acreage should again be sown, for we shall most probably have a market this coming year in Canada and abroad for some 215 million bushels, which would require a crop of 250 million; and even the present acreage could easily grow a smaller crop than this.

If a sensible course is made, the world will remain in the future. I believe, more Canadian wheat than it is to-day. In the past, and no I regret farmers should not hesitate to carry on as usual with the plan of crop rotation which is useful to maintain and increase the quality, hence the value, of their wheat crop.

LEADERSHIP OF THE YOUNG—

IT IS GENERALLY conceded that wisdom comes with age, that with the passing of the years, knowledge gained by experience, together with a more deliberate "weighing of the facts", brings about a more considered judgement. As proof we only have to observe the men occupying positions of great authority in the world today. Rarely do we find the ages of men of prominence under 50, but rather over 50, often over 60 and it is not unusual to find men that are occupying important positions having reached the three score years and ten mark.

But, if the records tell the true story, there is a field in which the "nimble mind of youth" apparently predominates. We refer to the exhibiting of seed grain. Wheat Kings and Oat Kings at the large livestock and grain show at Chicago are announced annually and it is surprising how the young men of the grain growing profession have found a niche in the grain exhibiting hall of fame. Herman Yeile was comparatively young when he made the Wembley distinct famous by winning the highest wheat award three years in succession. Lloyd Ruby of the same district is also quite young and he too has won the coveted distinction of being wheat king for three years in succession. But perhaps the most notable feat is that of Paul Pawlowski of Vilna. This lad is still in his teens and is able by seed selection, planting, caring for, harvesting and again seed selection, to exhibit a better sample of grain than any other persons no matter his or her age. Those who followed the articles appearing in this paper a few years ago regarding the growing and preparing of grain for prize seed will remember that Paul won the award of painstaking labor required to produce a prize winning sample in one of the large shows. And this increase has developed a keenness on the part of young people to take an interest in their work and be sufficiently interested to go to all this trouble and win out over many much older and experienced persons.

Whether the Junior Grain Growing Clubs derive inspiration from the wheat and oat kings, or whether these notable persons derived inspiration from the Junior Grain Growing Clubs we cannot say. But we do believe the Junior Grain Clubs and similar livestock clubs rank among the best movements ever set going in this province. Commercial prosperity have always depended upon the use of the application of superior knowledge have been able to grow, raise or manufacture a superior grain, animal or article. Perhaps the nimble fingers and keen eyes of the young are responsible for repeated successes at Chicago; perhaps it is enthusiasm fired with the zeal of youth; perhaps it is a combination of many things; but whatever the reason, these young grain growers are laying the foundations of a future grain growing Canada, the greatness of which has not even been visualized.

NO BLAME TO POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT—

A LE. TER TO the Mercury from the proper authorities states that the Post Office Department is having no end of grief this year particularly regarding letters and parcels addressed to soldiers in England. In spite of all the admonitions as to correct addressing of letters and parcels it is found that thousands are incorrectly addressed, poorly wrapped and generally difficult to handle and got to the proper destination.

It should be remembered that when letters are incorrectly and insufficiently addressed, such mail can be delivered only after a search of military records to ascertain the address. This causes inevitable delay and the blame of this delay is only too frequently placed upon the post offic : ffic ials.

There is another point on which the public should be informed. It happens that some of the ships recently sunk by enemy action in the Atlantic were carrying mail, either to or from Canada. This mail went down with the ships and, of course, is lost forever — for instance, the C.P.R. freighter "Beaverford" was sunk recently. This ship carried a large volume of mail and was just one of the many attacked by the enemy raiders.

In the meantime, people must get it into their heads that unless all requirements as to proper addressing of letters and parcels are carried out, they are are creating difficulties both for the post office and the military officials who take charge of the mail service. This is especially important at this time of the year when Christmas parcels are going forward by the hundreds of thousands.

CASTING OUT FEAR—

Many an American is wondering and asking how the British people can "take it" the way they seem to be doing. . . .

There is a hint of explanation in some comments made by a London writer. It seems to be because Britain has "cast out fear." They were terribly afraid for a while. Then they summoned their resolution. They marched up to the peril, faced it, and started doing something about it. Since that, they have not been afraid.

It seems to be a good remedy for any fear. When you have once honestly faced the worst and defied it, no harm can come to you. That is, no real harm. Because It is not loss or death that harms you—it is being afraid of them.—Corning (N.Y.) Evening Leader.

War Savings—

Alberta's new quota for war savings has been set at $980,000 monthly, W. H. Somerville, chairman of the national committee said here recently. New objective for the Dominion has been set at $10,000,000 per month, "Canadians must save and save regularly, so that our factories and workers may be free to concentrate on production of tanks, ships and airplanes," said Mr. Somerville.

Delegates from more than 100 locals were present. C. G. Hansen, Heavy Hill, was named president of the organization for the coming year, while W. G. Logan of Holden was elected first vice-president and E. McMillan, Haley Hill, second vice-president.

He said the first class of young trainees to be trained at Namao for fighting and bombing will arrive early in December.

For 32 years statistics published in first Alberta cities during the third week of November showed were 730 unemployed persons. The figures were released by the Alberta Employment service. A total of 248 applications were received, 168 vacancies open to women. At Edmonton 161 persons registered and 87 cities but in Medicine Hat only five were over a quota of 12 positions available. Little, city medical health officer, last Tuesday morning when he said he was experiencing is a very mild type of flu, but highly contagious." The mild weather throughout November is said could be blamed. "Patients should be isolated and kept in bed," said Dr. Little. "Efforts to fight off the illness while continuing normal work are apt to result in serious after-effects."

Flag Raising Greater

More Alberta boys have been married to date this year than in the whole of any previous year, it is stated in a recent report from the provincial department of agriculture. Previous record for the whole year was in 1936 when Alberta farmers had 1,200,000 For the 48 weeks ending November 14, the value is computed to be 1,500,000 bags.

Kerr, president of the university, Dean Robert Newton of the Agriculture faculty, and Donald Cameron, director of extension department. The power of station CJCA is being increased from 500 to 1000 watts.

Fraser Survivor

Ray Fraser are high in spirit, Sergeant-Lieutenant T. Blair MacLean told a recent meeting of the Edmonton Conservative society at the University of Alberta. Dr. MacLean was a friend of both the Fraser and Sargeaves dentists.

He told of the duties of navy medical officer as well as his experiences on convoy duty and declared the British people are due to the final outcome of the war.

ALFALFA FOR SWINE

Alfalfa is most valuable as a feed for swine when fed to pregnant sows. It is high in vitamins, contains protein and mineral matter, all of which contribute to the farrowing of strong, healthy litters. Alfalfa may be fed as long hay or as meal added to the grain ration.

For market hogs not over 5 per cent alfalfa should be fed on account of its fibre content. Good grass alfalfa meal made from fine leafy hay is most satisfactory for market hogs. Its greatest benefit is obtained when it is fed in small quantities as part of the combination protein-mineral supplement.

THE VALUE OF PLANTING TREES

By Honourable N. E. Tanner, Minister of Lands and Mines

The systematic planting of trees in the Province of Alberta is a most important and most necessary form of endeavor.

Apart from the question of beautification, always a prominent one in the improvement of private or public lands, such activity is of great value to farmer and market gardener as a result of protection given from cold winds.

The Forestry Division of the Department of Lands and Mines has for many years now made an annual distribution of transplants to residents of rural areas, with a view to creating improvements from time to time in the general establishment of windbreaks and shelter belts over a provincial wide area.

L. For requirements within natural popular or willow bluffs.

2. For additions to established windbreaks or shelter belts.

3. For new plantings on the establishment of new windbreaks or shelter belts. Persons applying for trees to be planted are set out close enough to the old established that they will receive protection against the cold and in the case of conifers, against the sun, by the established trees.

Applications for rural schools and municipal parks will be considered on their merits.

Trees are not available for beautification only, nor for the establishment of new windbreaks or shelter belts. Persons requiring trees for these purposes should obtain information from commercial nurseries, and not from the Forestry Division or Permanent Agriculture, Tree Planting Division, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

Trees planting were ordered in the spring of 1941 include the following: Caragana, Russian Poplar, Green Ash, Red Oak, Bur Oak, Red Pine Siberian Larch (not more than 10 per applicant) Scots Pine (not more than 5 to each applicant) Arborvitae, Lilac (not more than 10 to each applicant).

In addition to the above, cuttings of Golden Willow and Laurel Leaf Willow are available, the number of applications and locations renders it impossible to attend and fill the trees for which applications are received.

All applications must be received in the office of the Director of Forestry, Administration Building, Edmonton, before February 31st, 1941.

C.W.V.S. CONDUCTING SIGHT-SEEING TRIPS FOR TROOPS OVERSEAS

(from London Times)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 30:—"Going to the Royal dogs" is the way the C.W.V.S. (Canadian Women's War Service supervisor with a Canadian infantry bobbing unit overseas describes it.

The Legion, as part of its non-profit making efforts to safeguard the morals of the troops during these days of comparatively inactive service for the army, has been conducting sight-seeing trips to points of interest throughout the Old Country. He'retofore, the Legion has confined its activities to the provision of canteens and recreation huts, but it would seem that the time has arrived for a more active campaign to keep the troops from the temptations of the streets.

PLAXSEED PRODUCTION

(Experimental Farm News)

The production of flaxseed in Canada for crushing purposes fluctuates widely from year to year. This is due in part to climatic conditions but mainly to the wheat flaxseed price ratios. During the past few years the price situation has favoured the production of wheat rather than flax seed with the result that the acreage under flax was relatively low, states W. G. McGregor. In the spring of 1940 however, the situation seemed to promise better flax prices as regard to production of wheat and as a result the most acreage 18 per cent. The United States normally has a heavy importer of flax finds herself this year with the largest crop since 1924 This is greater than the consumption of the last exceeding year. In spite of the rising trend in industrial use, any domestic supply will leave little room for imports. ONE-WAY FARE FOR CHRISTMAS OR NEW YEARS LEAVE

All cards of the C.A.S.P. proceeding on leave during Christmas or New Year's will be able to secure a return ticket to their destination at the cost of one-way fare. The duration of the leave will be six days and no more than 50 per cent of the strength of any unit, in any rank, will be permitted to be away at one time. The Defence Department expressly stipulates that whether leave can be granted will depend in all cases on the nature of the service being undertaken by the man concerned, the necessity of having certain types of training completed speedily, and the importance of the service from the point of view of the defence of Canada and of war conditions generally.

The IODE will hold a meeting in the basement of the United Church on Tuesday, December 10th at 2.30

Mr. R. Layton will conduct service of worship this Sunday, December 8, in the Louma Viola school at 11 a.m. and in the Bethel school at 2 p.m.

COMMUNICATION NOTE

Farmers in the prairie provinces will be interested to learn that the Department has decided to offer germination tests of field crop seeds as a free service. In order that the tests may be thoroughly reliable, modern thermostatically controlled germinators are being installed. The equipment has been designed in consultation with officials of the Production Service, Plant Products Division, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Reports on samples submitted for testing will include remarks on the presence of noxious weeds and general "cleanness."

Samples of seed should be taken by the same method as that used in sampling at any of the line elevator companies associated with the work of this Department. These companies are listed on most of the publications issued from this office.

Sufficient material will be provided by 2-ounce samples, but these must be delivered at the earliest possible date. It is necessary that our laboratory be in full operation by January 1st in order to avoid congestion in March.

In addition to the germination tests, we shall be glad to make grading tests and to report on the purity and suitability of the various seeds in district commercial. If the grading test is desired in addition to the germination, it is only necessary to inform the head grain buyer

LAUBER—BENDER

A pretty wedding took place on November 30th at the home of Mr. D. Stutzman when their daughter Erma Blossie was united in marriage to Harold Lauber, Rev. J. B. Stauffer officiating. The bride wore a lovely gown of rose sheer. Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served to about a hundred guests. The young couple were the recipients of many lovely and useful gifts. They spent a few days in the city and are making their home on a farm near Dedds.

The best wishes of the community are extended.

TOWMAN—WEBER

A wedding of interest took place on December 1 at the Salem church when Myrtle Weber, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Weber was united in marriage to Clarence Towman of Greenfarm, Sask. Rev. J. B. Stauffer officiating. The bride was lovely in a gown of white crepe and her attendants Misses Edna Weber and Freda Towman wore dresses of sand and blue crepe. They will make their home at Dechen, Alberta.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the town council was held on Monday, December 9, there being present Mayor Swift, Councillors Hammesley, Bell, Lavasy, and Lovel.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and the general run of routine correspondence dealt with. Financial Statement for the month of November was read and approved placing the mill rate at 30.

A letter from the Edmonton hospitals advisory committee advised council that it was likely there would be a raise in hospital rates of fifty cents per day per patient, applying to all Edmonton hospitals. Councillor Hammond chairman of the fire, water and light committee reported that three five gallon pump tanks had been purchased and installed and had been placed on posts in various parts of the town. Three other tanks and a similar type filled with water are placed in heated buildings, and the work done throughout the year by night or day for fire prevention.

BARDO

Congratulations to Miss Myrtle Logan of Tofield and Gunvald Nerland of Bardo, who were married in Edmonton recently. Mr. and Mrs. Nerland will reside on the groom's farm here.

Friends and neighbors gathered at the Nerland home Friday night to Charivari the newly-weds. After the usual treats and bonch, a purse of silver was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Nerland.

At the annual business meeting of the Bardo Ladies Aid, the following officers were elected: Pres. Mrs. Helen Mees; Vice Pres., Mrs. Alice Pinseth; Sec. Mrs. Mable Fallside; Treas. Mrs. Myrtle Bierman. Mrs. A. Steen resigned as secretary, a position she has held for 27 years. The ladies also raised $14.60 the past year through donations, $100.00 was donated to Mission's and Charities.

Teachers and pupils are busy practising for the Christmas concert. Glad to report that Mrs. G. Sohken is recovering from a siege of "flu" Xmas festivities as everyone of the community goes to Mr. and Mrs. Sohken and Englerde family in their real bereavement.

Gen. Hendrickson has purchased a 828 Chrysler sedan.

Leonard Stauffer has gone to Camrose, where he has a job with Yodermeyer Delivery.

Milo Pickard is adding his house.

The west grouup of the Y.P.U. gave their annual entertainment last night. Bill Simonson is leader of the group.

Lief Foshaug and Hans Krogen have returned home from Calgary, where they have been working.

The Bardo Ladies Aid raised a splendid sum at its annual bazaar-tea day, which for the last few years has been substituted for the usual dinner and sale. The bazaar-tea was held this year at Mrs. Bob Berresheim's. The free will immission brought in the day, together with some previous donated, amounted to $14.00. The Mission Band brought around $64.00. Then there was a great supply of fruit about 40 quarts donated to the Bible School, and a tasty "cookie shower" for C.L.C. The work done throughout the year in the line of sewing, knitting, etc. and other hand work or donated articles brought in a good sized box of supplies for Banff Sunset Home and knitted articles for Xmas gifts for the Seamen's mission at Seattle. The annual business meeting report will be given later.

LINDBROOK

The recent mild weather here is very welcome and helps everyone considerably, also easy on the hay stacks and livestock.

Mr. R. Hammersley had the misfortune to fall rather heavily and in doing so sustained rather nasty injuries. We hope that these will soon pass off, especially seeing how close Xmas is. You must be a good man Reub, for it is written that "only the best stand in slippery places," avoid-ently you didn't.

Miss Christie Robinson is back home from Dedds where she has been for a few weeks.Jr., Miss Thelma Kortaman also is at home again after her operation in the same vicinity as Miss Robinson.

Mr. W. Glenn is away on a visit to her niece, Mrs. Harrison of McLaughlin, Alberta, probably better known to us as the former Miss Evelyn Glenn.

There is we understand a dance at the hall on Friday 13th "nuff" where's rabbit's foot? This dance is we believe for the benefit of the children's Xmas festivities so everyone should make it their business to attend and help make a splendid evening.

The hall is having its stage fixed up for the Xmas concert and the improvements will be permanent and suitable for further occasions. A portion of hardwood is to be laid practically immediately. Chimneys have been built of late and several other improvements are in groups so it looks as though Lindbrook Community Hall is a cure go ahead affair.

HAY LAKES

Privates Hansen, Schlender, Paul, Kief and Knapp were home on leave last week-end.

The Hay Lakes Christmas concert and dance will be held the 20th of December at 8 p.m.

JUST IN CASE

Letters are still being mailed at the Tofield post office. This is just in case you should be misled into putting your mail into one of the newly painted boxes around town. This contains chemical for fire fighting purposes and may prove to be very valuable in an emergency

LAKESHORE

R. C. Phillips left last week for the coast where he plans to spend a few weeks holiday.

Mrs Bill Tiedeman is at home once more. Though far from well, she is feeling better, and able to be up—and when she is up she is working, quite some of that.

Don Phillips and Eddie Ferguson were home about 10 days ago on week end leave from the big camp at Camrose. Doug Baines of Tofield spent his leave with M & Woodley.

Chapter X

"Skip that, please, three it's silly."

"Oh, yes" It should be but it isn't. Do you suppose I haven't been asked to see why it was so hard for you to tear yourself away from that old town and why you are always the one running back there on the slightest provocation? I've done everything I can to make you consider your self-respect, but this is intolerable." Tears suddenly filled her dark eyes. "Don't go, Jeff! I'm asking you not to."

"I'm sorry, Olive, but I'll have to go down there I mean I'm going." He went out into the hall, closed the door and looked back. And closed the door it would be cancel."

If only he could have read a particular meaning into that! By the time he might have hoped for some encouragement in his suit. But Tony Swan stood between him and his desires as insurmountably as death itself. Audrey and her mother knew it and the fact was the beginning of a strange, but strangers he felt in love with a stranger. All their contacts shadowed it as did the feeling although Jeff could not see other man And a man was married or mother and it made him resentful and supposedly out of the picture. It wouldn't have hurt them to come. There was many an occasion when he After all, the Swans were their near- would have refused Jeffrey Castle's neighbors. sentiment with whole souls I never.

When Jeffrey filed out with the others, nodding to an occasional acquaintance, he stood irresolutely on the sidewalk until a hand was laid on his arm and a quiet voice said "Glad you made it, old man."

"Oh, hello. We had business, that."

As they moved off, Jeff remarked "I rather expected I'd bump into the faiths here Maybe you're just as well."

"Your father can in the city. Jeff He said he would be back this morning, but he hasn't shown up when I left the office."

"Hmm . . . If I were sure I wouldn't barge into him. I'd run over and say hello to Mother But I guess I'll be showing back. I don't feel up to another scene."

As he opened his car door, Virginia Swan called: "Jeff, if you can arrange it, try to see Audrey before you leave I am sure she would appreciate it very much."

"Think so?" There was almost an impertinence in the question.

"I know it. I called you the other night at Audrey's request." It cost something to say that, much as he owed to smash the realization. "Did Then I had a deep desire to say was There.

It was not an hour later that Jeffrey drove up to the Swan home and gazed back at the cabins Audrey's step. "I've had a different the place I've affected. It was a re- complete indifference.

Nothing startling, dear Your mama's going to work. Had a good cry and talk with your aunt. Now I'm starting in on Monday. Have mail parked, well you?"

"What are you going to do?" cried dark eyes narrowed a trifle

"I don't know. Going to take the usual course for salesmen . . . a matter of study, I guess, at least."

"What did Father offer you? How much?"

"No figure named He did intimate though, it would be the same as the other recruits got Doesn't want any hard feelings."

"In other words, you gave him a story of wanting to work up from the foot of the ladder without any favors."

"That's the story I gave me."

"You seem to be going out of you was to humiliate me of late"

"For Pete's sake, Mother! I sat by his office and I don't intend to. Beside- I was your idea in the first place Judge Castle's suggestion."

"I'm going down to have a little talk with my father He doesn't seem to understand. Quite "

Audrey Swan opened the door and ing into Judge Castle's motor off- "Good morning, Judge Castle. I was looking for Mr Quinn."

"Why, there my mail! Come in, Audrey, come in. I haven't seen you for a long time." He brought a chair to the side of the couch with a courtesy gesture. "Sit down, my dear, and let me look at you."

"Mother asked me to stop in with some papers that Mr Quinn wished to see. He has been ill, you know, and looking after things for her."

"Of course. He should be." Judge Castle's face grew suddenly grave "Life brings bitter trials to all of us, I've in mind if I speak of your father, my dear?"

"Of course not," she replied coy some surprise.

"He had one child, the same as I have watched you grow up, my dear, and I am confident that your faith would tell me that you have never caused him an hour's grief"

"I hope that's true," Audrey said softly "About my father."

"I had one child, too," the Judge remarked grimly. "I said that before, but you can draw your own conclusions."

"Aren't you just a little hard on Jeffrey?" Audrey asked, astonished at her temerity. "After all, he married the woman he loved. I will never believe that he will ugly gave up his prospects here with you."

"Nevertheless," and the Judge stubbornly, "the place is here. I have been reminded of it daily by seeing Quinn on the pave that should be Jeffrey's Not that I grudge him his opportunity. Not only am I exceedingly fond of him, but I have found him invaluable He is a very reasonable young man, Audrey."

"He is men."

For the first time, the Judge's face relaxed. His eyes twinkled under their shaggy brows "Is that the best you can say of him? You should be more also . . . to him And you should find it easy. By the way, did you see the door - you came in?"

"The door?"

"Yes. The outer one. There's a rather new one on it. It says, Castle and Quinn, Attorneys at Law."

"Oh! Isn't that splendid!"

"It's deserved it. I need someone here who can take complete responsibility of the Castle estate, and it did not take Quinn long to show me that he could do that to my satisfaction." The Judge chuckled.

"I am very glad for him," Audrey replied, although she was not sure. "I wonder if I may leave the paper- here. I must be running on."

"Certainly, my dear." He extended his hand and held hers for a moment when she rose to her feet. "Audrey, I wish very much I might have had a daughter like you. If I can ever be of any service to you or your mother you have only to let me know Please convey my respects to her."

The Merciful Man is Merciful To His Beast

If one touches his tongue to a piece of steel in subzero weather he is unlikely to repeat the experiment of his own free will, says W. D. Albright, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Sub-Station, Beaverlodge, Alberta. Most persons remove their eyeglasses when outside in very cold weather, finding even the dry metal painful to the tender of the cone

Horses, whether in spite of or because of their vegetarian diet, seem longer than humans, put it is not for nothing that poor Dobbin lays back his ears when a bit far colder than ice is forced into his mouth.

If horses could talk, many commendations would undoubtedly be shown them. Therefore, they should be trustful in the belief that human beings like to be treated if positions were reversed. Rabbits bite are merciful; Ann alternative is a steel bolt especially wrapped with cotton or some equal-rending fabric, well flushed around the bit rings. If upon occasion an unwrapped steel bit must be put into a horse's mouth it is a humane- temperature, dip it first into water to "take the cold." Otherwise hold it and rings in the hands until warmed to 98 degrees Fahrenheit. "The merciful man is merciful to his beast."

War auxiliary services operated by the Y.M.C.A., Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army and the Canadian Legion and other organizations are adding much to the comfort and entertainment of the armed forces, said Lieut.-Col. E. A. Deacon, deputy director of auxiliary services for Canada, when he visited Kitsonton this week. He stopped in the city in the course of an inspection tour from coast to coast. Soldiers, sailors and airmen will benefit still more from local and national co-ordination of the splendid voluntary work being done for them, he said.

Government officials joined with all citizens this week in lauding the province the world's wheat and oats crowns from the Chicago show. By winning the wheat crown three running, Prairie Right is barred from participating for three years, but Alberta agriculturalists are confident that another citizen of the province will show the best spring wheat next year.

MILK—

EVER SINCE MILK distribution of any kind started in Tofield, it has had a checkered career. Our first recollection of milk distribution is of the "Brown Boys" delivering milk and some other lad delivering cows each evening to their respective owners from pasture. And there were quite a number of cows too. This was an ideal way of delivering milk, providing the cow did not take a notion to go up one alley when her barn was on another. As pasture immediately adjoining town became more scarce the number of people keeping a "family cow" became fewer, most families buying their milk from dairies operated through the years by different people.

Regulations covering milk distribution at Tofield have never been very strict. The recognized dairies have always had to compete with the competition of the one or two cow people who sold enough milk to make the volume sold by the recognized dairies so small as to be unprofitable, governed as they were by provincial regulations. At one time a town license fee was charged but this was subsequently dropped. The idea of this was to try and make it possible for one or at least two dairies to do business, these being under provincial supervision. But the "little man" was too tough, he would not be squeezed out. There is a story glibly told, which is just as likely to be untrue as true, that a one or two cow man went to the town office and stated that if he could not continue to sell milk he would have to go on relief. The story has it that he was promptly told to continue selling milk.

The distribution of milk is a serious business. Everybody knows that there are few things that will spoil as quickly as milk. Added to this is the risk, possibly slight, of contracting or transmitting some form of tuberculosis from the bovine tuberculosis germs that may be contained in the milk. Of course the cows supplying milk to dairies are all tested for tuberculosis but it is also obvious they can not be tested every day and even healthy cows are liable to infection.

The answer is pasteurization. This is simply putting milk into vats through which hollow coils pass. These coils turn round thus keeping the milk in motion. At first hot water or steam is run through the coils and the milk is heated to approximately 175 degrees Fahrenheit. Then immediately following, ice cold water is run through the coils, rapidly bringing the milk down to a low temperature. It is this sudden change from a high to a low temperature that kills the bacteria.

We believe, with a good many other things, the danger of using unpasteurized milk is exaggerated. This is of course providing all usual barn, milk house and kitchen sanitary precautions are taken. But the risk of infection is always there when unpasteurized milk is fed to children. The risk is lessened when milk is obtained from tested cows and inspected dairies but only pasteurization eliminates it. The important thing to remember is that while the number of children who contract tuberculosis from infected milk is comparatively small in proportion to the number who drink milk, those who do become infected suffer so acutely, that those connected with them immediately become rabid passionate advocates.

Quite a number of years ago we were travelling on the train with young children in our care. While fixing up the bottle with canned evaporated milk properly diluted, a man stopped in the aisle, gave one look, and then in horror struck tones said: "You're not feeding children that stuff are you?" We replied: "we were," and continued with our task. The trouble is, the poor guy did not know what he was talking about. There may have been times when canned milk was not all it should have been, but if complete sterility as regards bacteria is required, you are more likely to get it out of a can of milk produced by a modern factory than anywhere else.

As regards Tofield's milk supply, each user should be made acquainted with the true facts concerning pasteurized and unpasteurized milk: milk from inspected and unimpeached dairies and from tested and untested cows. If the buyer of milk is properly informed he or she will probably spend milk money wisely. If not the most milk for the least money will have some weight, regardless whether it is delivered in a lard pail or not.

WELL! WELL!!

[Extract from a letter from Hazeldene Shropshire England, to a friend in the United States.]

. . . During the summer some of our Home Guards were having an exercise. Parachutes were supposed to have landed and the guards had to round them up. One of these parachutes landed in a deep old woman's garden. You know the old-fashioned cottage garden with a well at the bottom. She saw this man in her garden; so she grabbed him and said, "Who are you?" He answered, "I am a German." So she grabbed him tighter and said, "Into this well you go!" And she would have put him in only some of his mates came and rescued him. But I believe she quite put the wind up to the man, and she took a lot of convincing that it was only makebelieve.

Roominess and Comfort Features Of New Cars In Ford Mercury Line

Windsor, Ont. Dec. 9:—With longer wheelbase, much roomier bodies and improved riding qualities, two new Ford cars for 1941 are announced by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited. Also announced is the redesigned Mercury 8 which also is larger, more comfortable and smartly styled.

Named the DeLuxe and Super DeLuxe, the Ford cars represent the most complete change in body design and chassis engineering made in Ford cars in the last five years.

The wheelbase on the Fords has been lengthened by two inches and overall length is slightly more than 16 feet. Riding qualities have greatly improved. New long, softer springs; improved shock absorbers and a new-ly designed stabilizer to smooth out rough roads and maintain balance on turns, combine to provide a new ride-ing sensation described as a gliding ride.

The new Ford cars have the safe and the roominess generally associated with cars of higher price. The bodies are longer and much broader —no bread, in fact, that running boards are now concealed. Seat widths have been increased as much as seven inches, and there is greater room for elbow and head room.

Much greater vision is afforded both driver and passengers in the new Ford cars. Glass area has been substantially increased, the increase being as much as 25 per cent in the coupes. The larger rear window, of one-piece curved tempered glass permits greater vision of the road behind.

The new wider seats are built with a soft "floating" edge and individually pocketed cushion springs. Springs are covered with a thick, rubberized pad. The driver's seat, adjustable over a 4½ inch range, rises as it slides forward, making better vision and easier control possible for drivers, regardless of their stature.

lights to the sloping rear the new Mercury has been designed as a complete unit, with body sides flaring out over reinforced running boards.

Windshield and window areas have been increased to permit greater vision for drivers and passengers. This, in combination with the slightly higher position of the driver's seat, contributes to driving safety and ease of handling

The Mercury retains the 95-horse-power V-type 8-cylinder engine and the power-to-weight ratio which has been a major factor in its flashing performance, but transmission gear ratios have been changed to give even greater acceleration

Interior treatment is entirely new and is designed to give a bright spacious effect. Tones are lighter and in complete harmony, and close attention has been paid to every interior detail

The Mercury ride has been completely re-engineered. The long, softer springs are slower in action, and operate with improved shock absorbers. A new ride stabilizer has been perfected which holds the body under all road conditions and maintains body action on curves or in heavy cross winds.

A feature which combines safety with comfort is the adoption of 6.00 wheel rims and larger tire size. Thin-ner rims with a 5-inch base in combination with 6.00 tires increases the traction surface on the highway. This reduces skid danger and tends to smooth out minor jolts

In the Fords there are five body types in the DeLuxe line: A Tudor sedan in both cars the Fordor and Super De Luxe Fords are available with automatic top, and a sedan coupe, new this year. Also available are the Super De-Luxe.

The year station wagon has been added to the list of Mercury body types which includes a sedan with two doors, a town sedan with four doors; a six-passenger sedan coupe, a coupe, with or without extra folding seats, and a sporty club convertible The latter features an automatic top actuated by two electric motors which operate under any conditions regardless of whether the engine is running.

Flying Spooks of the Night Woods

(By Kerry Wood in Forest and Outdoor)

Newspaper readers all over Canada followed with interest the news in the paper story about the thirty-pound lumberman who threatened to spit on his bare forearm if a "spook" that straight at your mouth. That'll stop anything that flies, even the old boy who walked in the woods at night. Probably most of us suspected that an owl would take the object if attacked but few actually had seen it happen. Dad was to blame, and now that the culprit has been shot and revealed in reaction in the smelly sense is to be such a bird we can all rush around and say, "I told you so!"

Great Horned Owls have been in the news in this distressing habit of snatching long before lumbermen and trappers invaded the North American woods. The Indians have many a story to tell about such owls; some early redmen believed that when a village Indian died, his nasty spirit entered one of these big owls and from then on he it is somewhat converted for an evil haunted the night winds near his former encampment, using keen talons on any Indian who ventured into the dark. Even Horned Owls have taken flight with full grown Indians proved adult beavers in a spirit of revenge, and often wear and tear hooves and large dogs. It takes into the during the spring, summer and fall range of a horse that happened to be nearby, so the owl takes some into sleeping hard against a tree in direct contact with the shaven Indian and watched its face at the time of pale and loud, aboriginal howls, pantomime when an evil spirit was supposed to be exhaled to the far corners of the and my own head and hat have been keenly loud. When the white man came, and targets more than twenty times the stubbornly kept hats on their heads and rather spoiled the good salutation of soft, velvety rapping to train for the owls were having, to make them sound-proof the owls had to be content with hat watching.

To understand the spooky aspects that makes it more unnerving, not of the habit, one must be familiar with the Great Horned Owl's hunting method. There are two different types of hunting in the family they get. In terms of hunting. The last method is blame a fellow for being startled. And for the best start on a stump and then, when a man then dealt with pat-eatly wait for something to move shrilly around to have a look at you in the vicinity then grab it. Then attacker and maybe bob him one if there is the Traveling salesman he ain't too far, and absolutely sure method, or the up-and-at-em school, ing can be seen. Why, naturalwhen the bird goes out and flaps in a man's going to jump at spooky silently around through the night conditions. The explanation that an woods and pounces on an attractive owl usually strikes from behind and target that presents itself. Let a rent mice its fast enough and it can't help some chirp, a rabbit wag a leg, or and therefore can't be seen when the a partridge stir a feather, and the human looks in the opposite direction big owl instantly swoops at full speed, doesn't help much down a body's fall. The same of direction is amazingly legs right at the moment. All the senses, for instance, the half-inch victim can think of is that flicker of movement of a mouse is enough to zoom out of the Night and Whammed gride an owl drawn from a height of him Hard, to Nothing must be a dirty thirty feet, the talons clutching at the old Spook! half-inch space where the mouse moved.

While owls grab men's hats at any (You'll doubt that statement, of and all seasons, most owl attacks take course. Okay. At the a length of cord place in the spring of the year. Owls to a bit of stick and hole yourself in are extra hungry then, and a mouse, an owl infests wood using some night and a batch of Greatlings or Hi-linings or do some Fat-band experimenting. (Hi-linger or whatever Great Horned Place the stick about out in the centre Owl babies are rallied sitting on the of an open field and get the other end edge of a nest waiting on Pa and Ma

W.C.T.U. Bardo

The Bardo Branch of the W.C.T.U. has finished the service of programs for this year, and the members are highly satisfied with the results. We were specially favored with good weather throughout and also owe a vote of thanks to those who so willingly took their cars out time and again. Then of course we want to thank again those of the children, young people, and members who took part in the programs, and lastly the appreciative crowds we had in attendance at Bardo, Kingman, Tofield and Round Hill. We always aim to have in each place who really entertains and we know they our work had not been in vain. Our hope is that more people will wake up the fact that there really is such a thing as temperance, even in this day and age, and it means to continue the fight, even against overwhelming odds. The Bardo (W.C.T.U.) will meet on Wednesday January 15 for its annual meeting.

How many of you remember the Canadian Federated Temperance Campaign? In July a delegation of all the loo-ing church leaders of Canada also interviewed the Dominion government asking for some action on the curtailing of selling liquor during the period of war. All the church leaders are asking if you'll get behind this thing. We all want to help our country in every way possible but country, we all want to help win the war Well, here's one good chance to help win the enemy in our midst! We cannot be strong as a nation if we are intoxicated, and when we ever heard of beer or wine or whisky being an asset of any country Will you help us in our campaign to be w'Ing to do something about it, please write your M.P., your Government, and send your resolution direct to Prime Minister King. You can send three or eight or ten if you can get them with you. Don't think that what you do doesn't count. What can you do in this case and for this cause? Are you willing to walk around with a petition? Are you willing to get your support? To inquire interests advertising all these things? Then how about the Temperance people beginning to advertise for a change, then we'll get somewhere. This is a matter which demands the gravest consideration by all and sundry, and all branches within your church, be it Sunday school, or Young People's Society, should take up the discussion.

McKENZIE

(To Late For Last Week)

Mrs. Wm. Kennedy is the host ored guest at a party at the home per son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fr. Kennedy, on Monday December 1st. Several of her neighbors and friends were there to help here celebrate her 82nd birthday. A pleasant afternoon was spent and on the behalf of those present Mrs. Booth presented her with flowers and a gift.

On Sunday evening some of the neighbors surprised Mr. Jacobson, the 1st of December being his birthday also. A pleasant evening was spent.

Evelyn Moss met with a painful accident on saturday p.m. when the tractor back-fired and bit Evelyn in the face cutting and bruising her badly and knocking him unconscious.

Mrs. Marguerite Jacobson has been quite sick since Monday but is reported some better.

Mr. Secord had a severe cold and was not feeling so well last week.

Mr. Olson is now teaching the High School room at McKenzie school.

Mr. Bagnall joined the Air Force and left here in October

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Steen were city visitors Saturday.

We were sorry to hear of the accident T. A. Jones had with his truck. It was lucky no one was hurt badly

Ray Anderson left on Saturday for Edmonton where he will go to a technical school for a few months. He then plans to join the air force

Rooms to be going the rounds. Who's next?

That Mrs. H. Weatherill visited the home ranch for a day or two.

Hastings Lake seems to be coming into its own. Mr. Hoover, Mr. Kyle and George Weslake jr. are the latest ones to go in for sheep. Weslake—a few miles of sheep fence, no corners or stray dogs, sounds weather at lambing time and I suppose while we're at it a little rise in wool prices. So far we know our sheep are in very little more than it did two or three years ago. Still, things could be worse.

As this will likely be our last chat before the holidays we tender the customary seasonal salutation, "A happy Christmas and success in the coming year."

Hugh Bruce has returned from Copper Mountain B.C. and will return to Vancouver after the New Year.

M. D. of Cornhill Council Holds Regular Meeting

The regular December meeting of Municipal District of Cornhill Council was held at the District's office on Friday, December 13th. Those present: Reeve Walker (in the chair); Councillors Anderson, Brown, Coombes, Kortzman and Swabey.

The minutes of the regular meeting together with a list of bills passed for payment at the last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. A. Rowland interviewed Council regarding title to S.W. 18-51-20-W4. This quarter was formerly owned by Mr. Rowland's father. The municipality some years back took title for taxes and it has been in the name of the municipality since 1934. Mr. Rowland is anxious to have all patents from his father and taxes now owing paid up. On the motion of Councillor Swabey the secretary was instructed to proceed with the return of the land.

Mr. Nick Hrehiretsk interviewed Council regarding the imposition of a cattle incident dealt with at the last meeting of Council. At that meeting it was decided to have all parties interested at Mr. McLean's office when the meeting of Council Councillors Coombes and Kortzman would try to have the parties present. Hrehiretsk however did not receive his letter until after the date mentioned and was unaware of the meeting. He stated that the amount of damage claimed was exorbitant and not in keeping with the actual damage. The cattle were in the field three days before threshing and it was not until after threshing and other work he was unable to impound them until after threshing. He would bring witnesses who would testify as to the amount of damage done. After discussion it was decided on the motion of Councillor Coombes to have the matter dealt with next time Mr. McLean was in town. All parties will be informed as to date, time and place. A report on the recent Municipal District's convention recently held at Calgary was given by Councillor Anderson. Like every convention, he said, there were many resolutions dealt with, some quite important, others not so important. A resolution dealing with old age pension problems and one dealing with a resumption of government road grants to municipalities were the two most important. He felt that the time and expense involved in attending annual conventions was justified as a great many problems peculiar to all municipalities came under discussion.

Messrs. Christensen and Sons interviewed Council regarding taxes on lots in Kingman. They were represented by the Kingman Lutheran Congregation and stated that the congregation intended building a church there this summer. On motion of Councillor Swabey the taxes were removed from the congregation for the purpose of building a church, the lots to be free from taxation. This to be subject to the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

Letter from the Dept. of Agriculture saying if the District wants seed grain some seed over and above that supplied for the Forage Crop Plan, they can get it at cost. On the motion of Councillor Swabey it was decided that should additional seed be required that it be purchased through the Dept. of Agriculture. Also that notice be placed in the Tofield Mercury that grass seed may be parcelled through the District at cost and that application for seed be in by February 1st, 1941. Also that a deposit will be required with each order.

Letter from the Dept. of M.A. regarding attestation of discount. It was, the letter stated, impossible to alter the time and amounts of discounts as laid down by the act.

Letter from Geo. Westlake re assessment on building on lakeside. Mr. Westlake thought an assessment of $150.00 was too high, that $75.00 would be enough. On motion of Councillor Swabey it was decided to reduce the assessment on this building to $75.00.

Councillors were asked to sign all road allowance Orders.

Letter from Salvation Army thanking the District for the grant of $60. Moved by Councillor Swabey that certain taxes be cancelled in conformity with consolidation proceedings.

The appointment of Returning officer and deputy returning officers for the various polls were also made.

Mr. A. G. Dodds was appointed Returning Officer.

Mr. Clarence Simonson was appointed deputy returning officer for division one, replacing Mr. Dodds in the Kingman Hall.

Mr. Leonard Murray and Mr. A. Anderson were appointed deputy returning officers for division six. Polling place to be at the home of Mr. McKenzie schools.

Mrs. A. Cook presented in enclosed council requesting obtaining relief. She said that Mr. Keppel had joined the army in August as physically fit. In November he was discharged as being unfit for military service and returned to his home in Tofield.

Mr. Keppel himself should be present and Mrs. Keusch was requested to have him come in.

Mrs. Rahorge would like the council to use their good offices regarding getting her son Norman from England where he is with the Canadian forces. Since he has been in England he has been in the army service. Councillor Swabey the secretary was instructed to write to the proper authorities.

Roland Herbert wrote the Council regarding the Kingman Lutheran Church property taxes by rule passed. The amount involved was not very large and Councillor Kortzman will attend to this.

There was a suggestion that there be a Herd Law for the whole municipality. Council not agreeing to this, matter dropped.

Letter from the Edmonton hospitals advising that their rates had been increased 50 cents per day. Under agreement with the hospitals the municipality pay a portion of ratepayer's hospital charges The letter stated that if council did not agree with the new schedule of charges they could accept the letter as notice to terminate the agreement. The new schedule did not increase the rent to the municipality. On the motion of Councillor Brown council agreed to accept the new rates.

Letter from Mothers' Allowance Department, drawing attention that council owed considerable arrears. Council paid some of the arrears off last year and on motion of Councillor Swabey payment of a sum this year was left to the reeve and secretary.

Chapter XI

"I will Thad, you very much." And Audrey made her escape in some confusion

When Clive Castle went downstairs to have her "understanding" little talk with her father he found "Pa" Harrison alone in his library seated in an easy chair reading a scientific magazine. He seemed unaware of her presence until she uttered an abrupt, "Daddy!"

"Yes?" He did not raise his eyes, but his daughter lost no time in coming to the point.

"Will you please tell me what all this is about Jeffrey? He has been telling me some fantastic story about starting to work for you . . . as a beginning, salesman! It's positively ridiculous! Starting at that way."

"I don't see why my dear He admitted to me that he knew nothing about the business. On that basis I scarcely could start him out as a department head!" Harrison removed his magazine on his lap, reached for his pipe lying on the table, and lighted it. "I believe it was your idea that I find a job for him, wasn't it?"

"Of course it was! Anything to get him away from the notion of setting down in that village office of his father. But I took it for granted that his education would fit him for some sort of an executive position, such an office of his own, I won't endure it, I say! I'm not sure Jeffrey will suffer, if he finds that he has to depend on his little pay envelope for his spending money. He has expensive tastes and practically nothing with which to back them up."

Harvey Harrison set up with a jerk. There was a cutting edge to his voice that Clive seldom heard. "Let me tell you something, young woman. I have made two generous marriage settlements on you. It is too late to do anything about it, except to warn you now that there will never be a third. I have a great admiration for Castle. Your empty headed set seems to think that marriage is some sort of a game with rule trips. So Rose thrown in. If you have a misfitting like that in the back of your mind again, understand now and for all that you're going to do the dirty work. You'll hire the lawyers and pay the bills. No more of it for the ill man I've some regard for, my stat on, too."

For several weeks after that there was an armed truce between the two Castles. For the most part, Clive kept out of Jeffrey's new job was ignored several times he had some difficulty in keeping out of the office. Last had to [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

He had been in military hospital and had been discharged as unfit for military duties. Mrs. Mary Dolnik requested ... He would like relief as the family were now without funds.

Asked whether he had made formal application for relief he replied in the negative. Council promised to consider the case further.

It was recommended that Grover VanBuskirk be allowed $10-00 per month starting December.

The application of Mr. Ransome Brown was taken for the present.

Letter from Mr McLean regarding trails. Mr. McLean stated that when the public has been using a trail for a long time, and there is no other way out, owners cannot cut it off.

Again pondering the Keatch problem, Council considered if Mr. Keatch was in category A when he joined the army, and developed sickness later, he should be a responsibility of the Dominion government.

Council agreed to pay Mrs. J. Letourneau $100.00 for extra work done in the office.

A number of bills were presented and passed for payment, after which meeting adjourned.

A Merry Christmas

There is an old spruce tree by the side of highway number fourteen. Not so very far from Cooking Lake, it gains the attention of nearly every traveller on the road. Standing erect, in austere simplicity, it is symbolic of steadfastness of purpose, the wisdom of the ages and above all a nativity to the soil in which its roots are embedded. How long it has stood, high above its fellows, quite likely no one knows, but since the highway in passing almost "skinned its roots," it has looked on, as if in sombre and doubtful approval of all men and their ways as they shuttle back and forth, east and west, according to their wills and purposes. Standing in solitary grandeur, it gives the impression of observing with disdain the goings and comings, the fast moving stream of life, humanity in motion. Through many hot blistering summer suns and cold winter blasts, through many years of nature's aged, yet ageless, sequence of natural growth and fruition, the old spruce tree seems to say "I am a native, I am a Canadian, I am an Albertan, I am of the Beaver Hills, I am nothing else. The earth in which my roots are embedded is me, 'God's Country' be it covered with the snow of winter or carpetted with the green verdure of spring and summer. My children are by the winds of heaven or by the hand of man scattered far and wide, but I remain, faithful to the land of my birth, even to the end."

Here in the province of Alberta are many people whose early boyhood and girlhood days were spent in other lands and climes. Lured to Alberta by the spirit of adventure, they brought to this part of the North American Continent, a diversity of language, customs and tastes, almost a modern Tower of Babel. But whatever language they spoke, whatever everyday customs they observed, they all had one thing in common—the Spontaneous Happiness of Christmas.

As with the passing of the years there is unfolded the comedy and drama of life and death, there is coming into being in Alberta a generation of natives. A generation of Albertans among whom the diversity of language and customs are being smoothed out. A generation among which "A Merry Christmas" means much the same thing. A generation in which "A Merry Christmas" means some sacrifice as well as some happiness. Sacrifice in order to cheer those situated less fortunately, and happiness in celebration of the birth of Him, who, were His teachings universally observed, would make this world a vastly better place in which to live.

CHAPTER XII

Audrey laughed softly as she said: "I don't wonder, Mr. Quinn. She's been a pretty constant bother to you, I'd say. But since you've been so uncomplaining about it all Mrs. Swan is going to ask you now for a few moments.

A few moments later they were standing at the sideboard. A little feeling of constraint came over them as they hesitated with their glasses poised. The atmosphere seemed charged with a sudden change in their relationship. Victor felt it keenly. He knew that in some way they were closer than ever before. There was a gentleness in Audrey's eyes when she lifted them to his that gave a new thrill of happiness. "Many happy returns, Vic."

"Thank you, Audrey. It's all been very beautiful, but I'm afraid its late." Audrey followed him into the hall without speaking.

Before saying good night, Victor paused for a last look at the silver white furore in the dim glow of the hall lamp. Never had Audrey appeared so beautiful in his eyes, so altogether desirable. "Tell me something," he demanded in a low insistent tone. "Have I — I'm not slipping, am I?"

With a swift movement he caught her nearest hand and pressed it softly to his lips. As if unable to trust himself, he turned without a word and left her standing there.

He was whistling happily when he let himself in his front door and was about to extinguish the lamp on the table when he caught sight of a bit of paper. A note in his landlady's pointed handwriting:

"Mr. Quinn

"Dear sir, the long distance wants you. Even if it is late when you get in the says.

"Respectfully,

"Mrs. Caroline Asher."

In a few moments a familiar voice came to his ear. "That you, Vic? Hope I didn't get you out of bed."

"No. You caught me cutting in. What's up? Anything are is?"

"Plenty. Vic. I've got to see you, and under the circumstances I can't very well come down. Can you get up here by ten-ohve evening? Or, I'll meet you half way if you'd like rather."

"I was planning to come up in the next day or — I can make it my morning. Where shall I find you?"

"Make it the bar of the Adams. Ah, it's all right."

"Jeff — is all right?"

"Sure. I'll be seeing you. Just another case of the well-known jam a person gets himself into. Thanks a lot, old man. So long."

When Victor Quinn hurried into the Adams House bar he glanced apprehensively along the line of men at the mahogany. When Jeffrey saw him he had sounded as if he might have been drinking, and by this time he might not be in shape for a satisfactory conference.

To Victor's relief, Jeffrey was immediately dressed and apparently in his best business mood. He got up from a table and greeted his friend with a hearty handclasp. "Sit down, Vic. Have a drink. Or — I'll order a pot of coffee. Thought we'd have a little talk before we went over to your — to the office."

"Glad to see you," Victor returned, sensing his fine cloudy. "You look pert. But that's out. No matter what as if you'd been working hard. What have you been doing with yourself?"

"Me? Oh, I'm in the way of being over, that will be something else. I'm planning to be a captain of industry. Been having an afternoon with my dandy in-law for this experience with Harrison's law quite some time. He turned out to given me a fat of confidence in my be a decent chap after he was one-self."

Victor knew that was the case, but Jeffrey was in such a mood that he would not be quite himself until he had unburdened himself of his secret. "Look here, Jeff, we seem to have pals and wanted to settle down. I'm the ones usually face up. Why did in the calm interest to say, I've been you call me last night? Did you more getting cash — kick out of it.

"That's ground."

"Maybe. The old gentleman has a notion of his own, and it might be a fair idea to send me abroad for — and I thought maybe you could help me a bit. You have."

"What about your father getting on on this?"

"I don't know. I've never told anybody about our last session. He probably thinks there not, even if it was done with a fine gesture."

"Let me tell your father. He's going to find out sooner or later. I believe it will give him a big lift."

Jeffrey drained the last of his ale and sat staring in deep preoccupation at the empty glass.

"On one condition," was the final judgement. "Exactly one, Vic — "Say on."

"That you don't pull any fine gesture on your account . . . about the cost of the picture and the rest.

"Maybe he'll once me out."

"Hardly. You can make it plain that I've definitely resigned to stay here on in the future. I should like to feel free to visit, on my mother's account, you know. And in your diplomatic fashion, you might drop a couple hint t on the first move is up to him."

"O.K."

"I have your word for it?"

"My word of honour."

Victor had promised to the one errand he had in the city and day. He'd find him at the road to Parville. He stopped on route for a hasty breakfast and was in the office first thing after Judge Castle arrived.

He walked into the latter's room, closed the door after him and plunged into a situation that he had been contemplating to rehearse as he drove. Good morning, Judge. I have some information that I believe that I should share with you. I have just driven down from the city after spending an evening with Jeffrey."

"Jeffrey looks fine . . . been working hard. He is with the Harrison office and by all accounts is doing well."

"Humph! And did he ask you to exhibit that report?"

"He did not ask me to tell you anything. Nor was that Mrs. Castle in residing at Reno at the present moment."

The Judge sat back weakly in his chair. "Good God!" he ejaculated. "She's divorcing him! When will he be here?"

"He's not coming back, sir. Made it very plain in fact, he's talking about going abroad. But you will be able to find him at the office or at Mr. Harrison's house. He's still staying there."

Judge Castle muttered an unintelligible reply from his unsteady position. It was a fine morning, Quinn, will you phone Mrs. Castle that I have been called away? She will hear from me this evening."

Victor Quinn put in a disquieting two days during Judge Castle's absence, unable to overcome a vague foreboding that made him restless as a rooted animal. The last turn of affairs might effect his future almost as much as Jeffrey's.

It was a good thing. His affection for Jeffrey was genuine; he believed that he had proved it. Jeff had said that he would not return to Parville under any circumstances, but that was before he had seen his father. By this time the two Castles would have had their encounter. The Judge would bring great pressure to bear on Jeffrey in order to induce that young man to come back. He had might succeed. And then what?

The answer seemed simple, shortsighted. Of course Jeff would be taken into the firm. He should be. But the practice would not warrant the addition and both young men would be subsisting on Judge Castle's charity to some extent. In time it would be apparent that Victor was the odd man in the combination.

"HONOUR ROLL" FORMED

The War Savings Committee today announced the inauguration of an "Honour Roll" for employers and . . . employees to give recognition . . . outstanding co-operation in the regular purchase of War Savings Certificates. The Plan will be effective for the final quarter of this year, and first awards will be made early in the new year.

The number of full-time employees who are continuously pledged to the regular purchase of War Savings Certificates will be the basis of the award. To qualify, a firm and its employees who are continuously pledged to the regular purchase of War Savings Certificates will be the basis of the award. To qualify, a firm and its employees must reach 75 per cent of participation. In the class from 25 to 99 per cent, the award will be a bronze seal; from 99 to 99 per cent, a silver seal; and for perfection of 100 per cent, a gold seal. The percentage will be determined by the relationship of the numbers of employees participating to the total number employed. Awards will be made quarterly. There are already indications but a number of firms will qualify for the top-ranking gold award.

"In establishing the Honour Roll," a statement by W. H. Somerville and Dr. Gaspe Beaubien, Joint National Directors, said, "The War Savings Committee seeks to give recognition to those organizations who have given wholehearted co-operation in their efforts to help finance he War by the regular purchase of War Savings Certificates. The Committee, in giving this recognition, realizes the importance of the contribution thus made to Canada's war effort, and so acknowledges the spirit of patriotism and the sacrifices so splendidly evidenced by both employers and employees."

GRANDFATHER, isn't that the most beautiful doll you ever saw?" The little head tugged at the hand of the tall one . . . nodded down at the childish figure beside him. "I wish I had one like her." the child said in a low tone.

The man nessed with a tender smile, "it is very beautiful, dear,— but I thought I heard you say that you had all the dolls you could ever for."

"Well—I did," came the faltering answer "but—as though an inspiration had presented itself—"I could give some away I s'pose." The man's chest tightened as the girl's hand and then he reminded her gently that they must hurry if they were to be home in time for lunch. Although there were many other interesting toys in the department of the great store, the child bestowed little interest in them, and managed to work her way back to the object of her affection, and stood enraptured before it until her grandfather again reminded her that they must be on their way home.

As the child reluctantly followed the man recalled another dark eyed Marcia standing before such a doll and heard again almost the same words that Marcia had used years "Isn't" she had said, " that doll in pink just beautiful? I wish I had one like it." And he knew the man had in addr her reply: "You have more dolls there than you know what to do with," and he has added, "That is too expensive anyway." "Oh is it," the girl had asked in surprise. Yes, everything in this store is." He hadn't known whether it was or not, but he had led the child away. Later he asked himself many times why he hadn't given the doll to the child, and he resolved that never again would he be the cause of a hurt look such as he had seen in the little one's eyes that day. From then on he determined to grant her every wish that he possibly could and so atone for the unnecessary suffering he had caused.

Christmas night John Grant sat alone before a fire, his head against the back of the chair, his eyes closed and a smile of content upon his face. The door opened and a young woman's voice called softly—"Father."

"Yes, my dear," he answered as he turned toward her.

"Mother wants to know if you aren't going coming to bed," the young woman said as she came into the room.

"Tell your mother I'll be there in just a minute," the man replied with a laugh.

"Do you know, father, I think that you have made Marcia the happiest girl in the world tonight." Marcia Field said as she went and sat on the arm of her father's chair.

Her father put his arm around her. "I'm glad if I did," he said low.

"Do you know that doll reminds me of one I wanted years ago. I thought that I never would be happy if I didn't have that doll." Marcia laughed at the memory.

"And I wouldn't buy it for you," her father frowned.

"Why father do you remember that?" the daughter asked in surprise.

"I have never forgotten it, and I resolved never to be the cause of hurting you or anyone else as I did that day."

"Why you old dear." Marcia laughed as she hugged him. "I haven't thought of it for years." And then she said suddenly as in light of understanding broke upon her. "That is why you have always done so much for me, and why you gave Marcia that doll today, isn't it?" John Grant's smile was the only answer he gave for a moment, and then he said: "If I have succeeded in making both or either of you happy, I shall be happy too, for I shall feel that I have at least in part paid a Christmas debt long overdue."

"Dear, dear father," Marcia hesitantly uttered him, " you don't know how well you have succeeded."

"Then I am satisfied."

HESS MANY CHANGES IN 50 YEARS' SERVICE

Montreal, Que. Dec. 16—In the gay Nineties Miss Bridget McCarthy was taken on Bonaventure Station freight staff as an "appression on trial". As an Interchange Clerk, an amazing and responsible position, she recently retired from the Canadian National Railways credited with fifty years' service. No typewriters were in use in the freight office where Miss McCarthy began her lengthy business career at 25 a month. The letter press was the junior's chore, mechanical office aids were unknown, good penmanship was demanded, train orders were hand written and the average street cleaning was left to individual effort and when the snowfall was heavy the company's cargoe of tractors willingly offered big sleighs to help the freight office staff reach their homes.

COW "HOOPS" AFTER CALF

Sturgis, Sask. Dec. 16:—Maternal love is strong in domesticated animals; so found out John J. Rosser, of the Sturgis district last week when he sold a calf. He had sold the calf, and it was taken to Sturgis, from which point it was shipped. The mother "Hooped" it to town, four and a half miles. Mr. Rosgen knows that the cow was lost soon in Sturgis, but hasn't been able to locate her to date, and wonders whether if the cow hasn't decided to follow the Canadian National Railways trucks after her calf.

CHRISTMAS DINNERS FOR CANADIAN TROOPS IN HOSPITAL

Christmas dinners and parcels will be provided for Canadian troops in Britain by the Canadian Red Cross Society's overseas representatives, Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner, announced recently. Reports received from England indicate that everything will be done to assure a success of a happy Christmas. Volunteers Red Cross "Hospital Visitors" are busy making the decorations of wards for the occasion.

All Canadian hospitals in England will receive the attention of the Red Cross. The last report received at Toronto headquarters showed that the one bed Canadian Red Cross Hospital in England (No. 3 Canadian General) was almost full, and that there were almost 500 patients at No. 15 Canadian General.

All those men, as well as Canadians who are patients in other military hospitals, are visited regularly by Canadian Red Cross Hospital Visitors. During the past few months these Visitors have initiated handicraft work among the men in the hospitals, and it is reported that the work has become exceedingly popular with the men and is helping them feel more contented. Many of them have made such things as rugs, toiletry and baskets which they are sending to their relatives in Canada for Christmas presents.

GERMANY SAID "IMPOSSIBLE" CANADA STAGES NEW TRIUMPH

Before the war Canada invited the world to compete for a surveying aneroid required by the Dominion's Geographical Survey Department. They asked for an accuracy of 0.02 inches of mercury. The Germans said it was impossible. They flatly refused to try.

Britain decided to tackle the job. Two year's special research have been put in on it and now the makers are able to disclose the fact that they have done ten times better than they were asked to do. They have achieved not the 0.02 inches of accuracy but 0.002 or one-tenth of the error allowed by the specification.

"We feel heavily on it," said a member of the firm, "but the research we did has been of immense value."

To-day Britain's supremacy in making scientific instruments is shown by the world demand for them. Among her war time customers are Argentina, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa.

FORMER DISTRICT RESIDENT OUTSTANDING SOLOIST AT TACOMA CONCERT

The Tacoma News Telegram, reporting an outstanding concert of the Ladies Musical Club, gave much praise to Mrs. Gudrun Nesa Reuning, a former Barde resident and daughter of Mr. N. B. Ness.

"Gudrun Nesa Reuning, soprano, who had had much concert experience in the mid west before coming to Tacoma last fall to join the music faculty at Pacific Lutheran college, was one of the soloists and in her one programmed group made such an effective impression she was recalled for two encores.

Mrs. Reuning has a voice of wide range and power and passages of greatest delicacy are handled apparently with as much ease as are those calling for dramatic strength. These talents were demonstrated by her presentation of Alicia Nevada's finely drawn "Four Darks on a Pond" and Grieg's exquisite "To a Water Lily" as contrasted to Wagner's "Ho! Hall of Song" from "Tannhauser". Mrs. Reuning was ably accompanied at the piano by Miss Spencer Weber."

THE PROBLEM OF FROZEN CREAM

The cream producers of Alberta lose large sums of money annually by shipping frozen cream. The first real cold snap every Fall brings a large number of these shipments than later in the season when colder weather is often experienced. This indicates clearly that with care much of this loss can be avoided.

Cream arriving in a frozen condition is very difficult to handle and invariably lowers the grade of the butter into which it is manufactured. First, it has to be thawed out very slowly so as to prevent the cream from "oiling off". This, of course, means that shippers cans are not returned promptly, causing considerable inconvenience. Secondly, the freezing of cream very often results in variations in butterfat tests, this being due to the difficulty of obtaining a representative sample.

Butter manufactured from cream that has been heavily frozen has a "mealy" and "ragged" texture and must for that reason be placed in a lower grade than butter made from non-frozen cream, but otherwise of the same quality. The cream grade standards state definitely that "Special" and "First Grade" cream must be of "uniform consistency."

When cream has been frozen solid and upon being thawed out it is coarse mealy and partially "oiled off", it can no longer be said that it is of "uniform consistency" and therefore must be placed in "second" grade.

Second grade cream sells for six cents a pound butterfat less than special grade, which means a loss of $1.20 on a five gallon can of cream containing 20 pounds of butterfat.

1. Cool cream promptly after separation and store in a cold place where it will not freeze.

2. Do not leave your can on the station platform in extremely cold weather. If possible, plan your delivery to the station just before train time.

3. Some protection should be given all shipments made by truck or sleigh in extremely cold weather.

LIFE OF SEEDS

How long do seeds remain alive? Certainly not from ancient Egyptian times until now. Reports of the germination of "mummy" wheat are called fables by botanists.

The seeds of some plants naturally have a long life-span, while the seeds of others are very short lived. Seeds of some members of the pea family may remain viable for over 100 years, while willow and poplar seeds rarely live for more than a week under natural conditions. The life-span of any seed is naturally affected by the conditions of storage of the seed. A botanist secured 39 seeds of Dry Brook Mud from a collection made in 1778. They were sown as precious that only two were tested. Both germinated after lying in a herbarium case for 158 years. The same author reports that of ten Mimosa seeds 81 years old, five germinated. An English botanist obtained 2.6 percent germination in red clover seed 31 years old. It is difficult to secure accurate records of seed buried in soil. However, a Japanese botanist reports 16 percent germination in seeds of the Oriental Lotus flower buried for 1,000 years.

Seeds of wheat, oats and barley often germinate well until about five years old. After which the percentage of germination falls off sharply. However, due to adverse conditions during ripening and harvesting, the germination of new seed may be low. It is always wise to make a germination test every spring.

The Murrays and Eatons all out again after having put up real battles with some particularly vicious germs.

Chapter XIII

Victor gave a grunt of disgust and turned from the window. He'd better quit his mooning and write some letters. He had inserted paper in the typewriter and was sitting in an armchair with his legs thrown when the door opened and the Judge entered. Victor jumped to his feet. "You're back, sir! I'm sorry you didn't call and let me come over to the station for you."

"A friend happened to be passing and brought me over. Come into my room, Quinn, if you please. I want to talk with you."

Victor said nothing. Waited.

"I came to the conclusion, Quinn, that if I went directly to Jeffrey there would be danger that one or both of us might let our impulses get the better of us. So instead of attempting to contact Jeffrey, I called Harvey Harrison and asked if he would join me at lunch. He is quite a remarkable man in some respects, Quinn."

"I imagine he might be, sir."

"He is. Very confidentially, Quinn, I may tell you that he was frank in condemning his daughter rather violently, as, in fact, I was myself, frank in telling Mr Harrison of the hopes I always had entertained for the boy. I trusted that this turn of events would mean that he would come back here and take his right, by place."

"Surely."

"Want a moment, Quinn. I wish to make it clear that it was my idea that the turn out there should remain as it is. Naturally, I planned that you two boys would carry on together and relieve me completely from the picture, unless it might be in some advisory capacity. I have to admit, however, that Harrison talked me out of that."

"May I ask how, Judge?"

Certainly. He told me that he had been receiving very flattering reports of Jeffrey's ability and initiative and was averse to having him leave the corporation. He told me he was satisfied that the boy is not a legal turn of mind and never would be a credit to the profession. Later Jeffrey suggested that I ask you to corroborate that fact, but I appreciate that you would not care to express an opinion."

Victor smiled slightly but made no answer.

"I was about to add that Mr Harrison insisted that Jeffrey stay with him, that the divorce matter would in no way have a bearing on his business career it was his idea that Jeffrey associate himself with the Brunelle office for a year or two. If he decides to stay thereat permanently, that can be arranged. He was quite eloquent about it. All the before I had talked to Jeffrey, you understand."

Victor nodded.

"The upshot of the matter was that Harrison called Jeffrey and asked him to come down to the club. The boy apparently is a little sensitive about the whole business. He wished to sever his connections with the company. Strange as it may seem to me, I found myself supporting Harrison's contention and that in the way it was settled."

"Then Jeff is going to Europe?"

"In the very near future. Of course he will be down here to spend a few days with as whatsoeverhalls a little time with us, first. And evidently, Quinn, that solution leaves nothing for you and me to discuss. Things will go on here as they have of for that I am glad."

"I'm glad for Jeff's sake." Victor answered simply.

After Judge Castle had taken his departure, Victor lighted a cigarette and lifted his feet to his desk top to ponder the situation anew. A number of issues had been settled, mainly the one affecting his future in Turville. And he was sincerely glad that peace had been restored in the Castle family. As a matter of fact, he ought to feel happy about all the whole thing since the complications seemed to have vanished to a large extent. And he wasn't happy.

He felt distinctly depressed. When his pulse rose suddenly, he sat and "Have important we sound" answered a laughing voice. "Do you know who this is?"

Victor's feet came down and a bright smile lighted his face "I hope I do!"

"It's the shameless superstition very discreetly calling from the drug store booth Have you finished for the day?"

"Yes indeed Where ——"

"My car is parked just around the corner from here on West Street It has been a very pleasant evening, but I know that Julia is having chicken and corn fritters for dinner and I was wondering ——"

"I'll be at your car in exactly half a minute!" Victor hung up before any chance in the procedure could be suggested In the specified time he was gaining Academy through the window of her car with his hurt in his eyes.

"How's this for boldness?" she laughed.

"Heavenly! You can't appreciate how I've been wanting to see you! You said children were not to be seen and heard, didn't you?"

"What will this do if it's found out?"

* * *

Rain fell incessantly throughout the evening, but it could not dampen the complete contentment of Victor and Quinn. The climax of the day had been disrupted now, leaving him back in the glib radiance of Audrey's presence Gentle was the word that best recurring to mind Audrey appeared to be unusually spirits, but he sensed an unwonted tenderness in her quiet voice and in the laughter Victor was conscious of it while he talked and listened, but he made no attempt to ascertain reason for her mood. It was enough that he was allowed to share it.

For an hour or more after dinner he played at Wellington with his hostess. It was a new game to Victor but it proved to be one of Martha's favorite pastimes and the guest was quietly amused at the earnestness she displayed and the apparent satisfaction she took in relieving the servitude that were due her at the end of the session. "Now are you quite to get home tonight, Mr Quinn," she demanded, after announcing her attention to return

"I'll take him home, seeing I already have a bridesmaid. I want to be whispered to ——— not about."

"Indeed you will not." was his retort. "You forget that Turville boasts two taxicabs I'll phone for one presently."

"You may as well occupy the guest room. It's all made up. Then Audrey can take you in after breakfast."

"That's very kind, Mrs. Swan, but I won't impose on your hospitality to that extent, this time."

"You're perfectly welcome to stay if you want to. Good night." And with that she disappeared

"Dad nearly ever tell you that you have a mighty fine mother, Quinn?" Audrey asked as he helped herself to a seat beside her on the

"She's a dear"

Something in Audrey's voice caused the man to glance curiously at her. He was aware of an impression that her happy mood had been like a cloak that she had all-used it to conceal her true self for an instant "What's the matter?" he asked quietly

"Nothing ——— much."

"Meaning something? am I help?" Instead of answering his question, she said hesitatingly: "I'—, my husband is in Turville. And he was sincerely rapping you this evening was a sort of plot. I didn't want to be alone with myself. I'm not sure I don't feel happy about it, but I'm afraid you'll have to be a little more specific," he suggested bravely "That is if you care to."

"I want to. And I know that you can understand, if I put it this way. It's the same thing that brought you to me once of your own accord, Jeff."

"I'm?" Victor said the word mechanically There was the sensation of something tightening about his heart His legs hung over Audrey's face, but she was looking down at her two hands clasped tensely on her lap.

As if words were drawn from her reluctantly she said: "He's coming here next week. Did you know?"

"No I didn't know."

"He knows his wife has gone to Reno I think you did know, but you didn't tell me."

"I may be admitted in a flash voice " I couldn't very well speak of it to anybody." One thought was hammering in his brain. Jeff had written to Audrey of his trouble. He had confided in her. He wanted to see her.

"I wouldn't let myself believe that such a thing could happen and yet I've somehow been afraid all along. Jeff hoped so that I hoped so that everything would turn out all right. He wrote me a letter in his office afternoon when Judge Castle told me."

"Audrey said.

"You have told you!" Victor's eyes were wide with amazement. He seemed slightly angry.

"Why, yes." Audrey had raised her eyes to his. She was surprised in her turn at his anger. "I was in the car driving past the station this afternoon when Jeff came out of the telegraph office. I thought I saw Mr Quinn standing in the door looking for a cab, so I offered to take him to the hotel."

"I see." Victor drew a deep breath. He was relieved to find that he was coming home to see his mother and was going abroad. I think it is a very good idea for him to do, but it made fairly sick. It did! You know that I have always been the same as a brother. I adored him that way when I was a youngster. I couldn't top right off, just because he went and got married. He's too fine and good a boy for me to hate him that I wanted to love whom ever he married. could have loved Olive to death if ——— if she'd only been different ——— guess that's why I just had to cry when I got home. You're the only one I've told except Jeff, because you always seem to help Jeff when he needed it the gave a little laugh that was suspiciously like a sob. "Please excuse your shoulder to weep on, will you?"

"Audrey! Audrey Swan! Do you know what you're said?"

"Why, I should think I did!" She looked at him wonderingly. "I was ——— oh, I get it." The wonder in her eyes gave way to realization and after hopelessness "You thought I was trying to confess that I was in love with Jeff ——"

"No. But I ——"

"Victor, Vic Don't you think you've done your Damon and Pythias act pretty nearly to death? You're forcing me to be utterly shameless. But I'm like the girl in the ads who was always a bridesmaid. I want to be whispered to ——— not about."

"Audrey ——" he could not find the words.

"I'm afraid I do, Vic. Don't you know you are the funniest and dumbest man in the world?"

His answer to that was to gather her in his arms and hold her close until his cheek resting against her sobbing curls. I guess you've right about me," Victor admitted finally, drawing a long breath. "But how could I know?"

"You could have tried asking if knew you did, a long time ago. But I had to be sure. Then, when I was sure, you didn't ask. You just kept telling me."

"And I'm telling you again. I love you."

"And I love you, Vic. I guess I have for a long time."

"Let me make up for it, please. Look at me." He kissed her lips, then took her face in his two hands and looked into her eyes. "I can't believe it, quite," he murmured happily

The Agricultural Department of The North-West Line Elevators Association has just published a well-illustrated bulletin dealing with the subject of weed control of soils. Its purpose is to draw attention to a problem which has been growing more acute—overlooked by the general public It has been away a serious menace to the profession of soil drifting and control practices have met with a large measure of success Water erosion may be quite as dangerous as soil drifting on individual farms, but, since the injury to the soil is often less obvious, it is apt to be neglected.

The bulletin is well illustrated and sets forth its purpose style It deals in a concise, and with the causes of soil drifting, the methods followed, and with control measures. Many striking and excellent illustrations of fields in the Prairie Provinces which are affected, are given Summary In addition there are four pictures generously supplied by the United States Soil Conservation Service

The bulletin is the only publication of its kind in Canada. It should be read by every person farmer, Rural Junior Club members and high school students will find it helpful. Any one who has suffered, and with control measures, or who desires more excellent illustrations of fields in the Prairie Provinces which are affected, should obtain it. HE KNEW HIS SANTA CLAUS

Some years ago, when Firestone, Edison, Ford, and Burroughs were touring, a light bulb on the roof needed replacing, and a rear tyre had become useless. Mr. Ford went to a store and said to the merchant: "What kind of lights do you have?" "Million," replied the merchant. "And tires?"

"Firestone."

"You may be interested to know that Mr Edison and Mr. Firestone are on the car, and that I am Henry Ford."

As the merchant was putting on tire, Mr. Burroughs, who was well versed with white whiskers, leaned out of the car, and the merchant, looking at him with a grin, said: "Now, don't tell me that you are Santa Claus."

Salutations boys opened their hockey season by beating Brantdead 6-4. The game was very well played and I believe both teams were very pleased by the good sportsmanship shown by both sides. Chester Grew severely sprained his shoulder in the game while encountering an attack from a bodding comer in the opposite team. A return game will be played soon.

The boys returned home from Camrose after the thirty days training. They all seem fit and in good health stating that they enjoyed every minute of it!

THE HARD WAY—

IF YOU TAKE a hoop that has been removed from a barrel that is not so very large, and in the month of June place the hoop anywhere in your cow pasture you will find that the blades of grass can almost be counted. Certainly if you took the same hoop in a corresponding month and placed it in a pasture in New Zealand, Wisconsin, Great Britain or parts of British Columbia, you would find the grass much thicker. Furthermore when it is remembered dairy cows can only feed off green pastures during five months of the year in Alberta, and for a considerably longer period in all of the countries previously mentioned, one is forced to the conclusion that producing cream in Alberta for the manufacture of butter, is producing cream "the hard way."

There is supposed to be some virtue in doing things the hard way, but we have no hesitation in saying, that a dairyman, this morning, when the official temperature was 30 degrees below zero would have difficulty in finding it. The simple bald truth is that a pound of butter from grass to the finished article requires greater human effort here than many other places. The farmer who consistently follows dairying in Western Canada fully earns his money.

Butterfat, like many other perishable products vary considerably in price. We believe we are right in saying that we can remember butterfat being quoted as low as 12c per lb. and also as high as 46c per lb., the higher figure being nearly four times as much as the low figure. These are extremes, but always, seasonal changes and marketing conditions have resulted in price fluctuations.

The recent action of the federal government in pegging the price of butterfat at 32c per lb. Nobody believed a government could act that quickly. Certainly if it had been June instead of December and it was a question 15c instead of into the thirties, it would have taken a thousand resolutions "wired in to your member," to even obtain governmental recognition. Then by the time governmental recognition had been obtained, December would have arrived again and a seasonal increase in price would most likely have made government action unnecessary.

We are not at all out of sympathy with some form of governmental control on commodity prices. If the control is properly exercised, it could be of considerable aid to the producers themselves. We have long been of the opinion that $2.50 wheat during the Great War and immediately after, did as much harm to Western Canada as it did good. But government control of commodity prices should not extend beyond control of prices when they reach extremes—either too high or too low. Whether the price of butterfat had reached a point which was too high is a question we will leave to some one who milked and fed cows this thirty below zero morning, to answer. We do not believe so. Until such time as butter fat had reached forty cents and manufactured butter fifty cents over the counter, there was no need for government intervention. But what ever reason the government had for pegging the price of butter it can safely be said primarily it was not thinking of the producer.

We have never heard of the opinion that the producer of any particular commodity should receive all the governmental consideration and the consumer none. The consumer of butter in Canada is as much a part of Canada as the producer, but certainly because consumers are more numerous than producers, consumers should not be unduly protected at the expense of the producers. Moreover, inasmuch as the government has seen fit to peg the price of butter fat in order to prevent it going too high, they should also willingly be prepared to peg it at a reasonable price to prevent it going too low. It is a poor rule that does not work both ways.

A PRAYER

By Lord Tweedsmuir

O Thou to whom man's heart is known,
Grant me my morning orison.
Grant me the rover's path—to see
The dawn arise, the daylight flee.
In the far wastes of sand and sun
Grant me with venturous heart to run
On the old highway, where in pain
And sorrow man striven amain,
Outstrips his fellows, or, too weak,
Finds the great rest that wanderers seek;
Grant me the joy of wind and brine,
The sea of food, the taste of wine,
The fighter's strength, the echoing strife
The high tumultuous lists of life—
May I never tag nor hapless fall,
Nor weary at the battle-call.
But when the even brings surcease,
Grant me the happy moorland peace;
That in my heart's depth ever lie
That ancient land of sea and sky,
Where the old rhymes and stories fall
In kindly, soothing pastoral.
There in the hills grave silence lies
And death himself wears friendly guise;
There be my lot, my twilight stage,
Dear city of my pilgrimage.

LINDBROOK

The First Xmas Concert to be held in the new Hall was staged Friday evening December 21st and when we say "staged" we mean exactly staged too; for there was a real stage, with painted on sets, stage curtains, lights and everything up to date. The stage was erected and scenery painted by E. W. Hooper assisted by Mr. Richardson, and the sewing of the curtains by Mrs. Bumgardie. There were about 200 people present, and outside the hall it looked like a car park, all available space being occupied and in the hall could be seen crowd scenes of horses. The concert itself really is beyond description, and could take too long, and one could not pick out any part in particular for it was all good, and reflects great credit on the young performers and their teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, and it showed most how much hard to attain such a pitch of excellence. The costumes too were another great and shrewd evidences of a lot of work, wherever they were required, as some, the programme was quite a lengthy one, and was interspersed with selections played by the Lindbrook School Orchestra which kindly came up for the occasion and also by Mrs. Ward of Holden who acted as pianist throughout the concert. Our thanks are extended to them, our guests for the help they gave to make the concert such a success. Also to Santa Claus, chairman, and after the concert Santa Claus (Mr. Jas Bracegirdle) arrived and distributed sweets and gifts, candies, etc. It was one of, if not the best Xmas concerts ever staged at Lindbrook, and we would like to take this opportunity to extend our thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Richardson and their pupils for the splendid entertainment and for the help lent to fix the Hall up so as to be able to hold the concert, especially the boys who got on their knees to it (laying the new hardwood floor.

The Woolen school held their concert minus their teacher Mr. K. Bielek who was rushed up to hospital to undergo an emergency operation for appendicitis, we hope he is out of it speedy recovery. The two oldest high school girls however Miles Herbert and Gertrude Forsyth ran the whole concert in her absence but to date we have no details of same.

Mrs. W. Glenn returned home from her visit to her niece Mrs. Harrison of McLaughlin, Alta.

A Bright, Happy and Prosperous New Year to all from all at Lindbrook, and may the — war be won before its over.

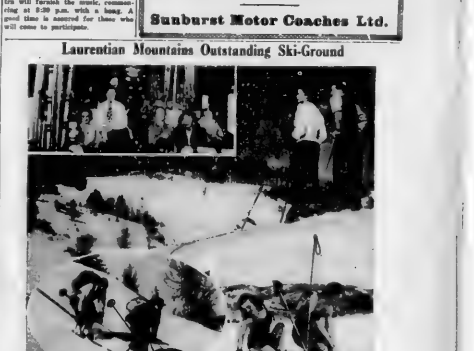
Laurentian Mountains Outstanding Ski-Ground



Eastern Canada's greatest winter playground is a thinly populated stretch of mountainous country north of Montreal which has facilities for all-star sporting anything found east of the Canadian Rockies This section of the Laurentian Mountains, stretching out for miles on both sides of the Canadian Pacific Railway line between Shawbridge and Labelle, has hills and mountains of all shapes and sizes, well developed facilities for competitive and pleasure ski-ing and no recommendation ranging from luxury hotels to modest French-Canadian

The development of ski-ing as a major winter sport in Canada is synonymous with the Laurentian Mountains' popularity as a winter playground. The growth of winter sports in the mountainous area ground is best shown by rail traffic figures, since the highway travel is negligible because of the deep snow. A dozen years ago it was a big week-end if 1,000 people went to the mountains, and on a few of these week-ends Last winter the Canadian Pacific Railway took 167,00 skiers to the Laurentian week-end ski trains. This winter approximately 20 regular and special Canadian Pacific ski trains will take nearly 18,000 skiers to the mountains every week-end —the real reason for the development of the district into Canada's favorite ski-ground, in addition to its nearness to Montreal and its facilities and terrain, is the happy route of the Canadian Pacific Railway through the heart of the mountains. The railway stations are within a few miles of each other all along the line making cross-country skiing a delightful adventure possible in hard or easy stages for skiers of all ages. There there is sport for skiers of every degree of aptitude because of the varied offerings of wooded and open country, known at every mountainside resort, hundreds of miles of marked ski trails up hill and down dale cleared Hills with ski towns to eliminate the climb back, ski jumps and breath taking downhill runs for competitions. Cold, dry air and generous helpings of snow complete a perfect ski picture.

HAY LAKES

The Hay Lakes Mercantile has sold its stock to D. F. Hughes of Hay Lakes.

There have been numerous accidents during the holidays due to the icy roads. Eddy Lindberg smashed his car when he skidded into a stalled car on the highway, and Arnold Hebner smashed his when he skidded into a sleigh north of Hay Lakes.

Mrs. Swen Eliason and family visited at P. Hansons during the holidays.

Copbertails lost out to the foxtails in a hockey game. Score was 4-1. Tailspines tied Brantford 3-3.

HASTINGS LAKE

I suppose that by this time all of us have had a somewhat reluctant farewell to the Christmas season. Once more it has come and gone but its memories, happy to all of us I am sure, still remain. Visits to close friends and relatives who in preliminary course of our lives we seldom see, and remembrances from those more distant are events not quickly forgotten. The cessation of our daily work, brief as it undoubtedly was for many of us, had its compensations. Our wish is that this spirit of Christmas, its memories, and feeling of goodwill still keep remain with all of our readers, extending far into the New Year.

From exceedingly reliable sources of information we discover that—

Mr Lewis Yee is now entered in the Government training centre in Calgary. Mr. Yee's parents and also his sister, Mrs. Stanway spent a few days with the folks on the farm before leaving for Brockville, Ont. where she will reside.

Mr. Glen Aasen, formerly of Hastings Lake and now with the C.A.S.F. and stationed at the camp, paid a brief visit to the district. His sister Doris, also spent a few days renewing old acquaintances a guest of Mr and Mrs Hoover The district will long remember Lawrence Aasen, family whose stay with us was all too brief.

Their sympathetic attitude, hospitality, kindness and unstinted co-operation in any social undertaking was felt for them the respect of the entire district To them, in their new home we extend our best wishes.

Miss Mary Hoover was at home during the holiday season She is at present taking a business course in the city.

Miss Coughlin returned to again take up her duties and after a short west home for the holidays and that meant a trip of over four hundred miles to the north-west, Sunday night nearly close to the Arctic circle. We think she should be quite an authority on snow-huts Esquimos and dog-

LINDROOK

Looks as if winter is really here now, but we can't grumble, and anyway there's nothing we can do about it, it shouldn't cause any hardship here, there being lots of wood handy and lots of food.

J. Bright, Happy and Prosperous New Year to all from all at Lindrook.

There have been two dances at the Hall since we were last in print. One on the 27th December and the other on New Years Eve when those present ushered in the New Year. Both dances were well attended and very enjoyable affairs.

Whist drive was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Scott's on Friday evening the 27th December, at which ladies of third were played and after the play a dainty lunch was enjoyed by all.

Among those who ventured from home fireside during the holidays were Mr. and Mrs. Wallis who spent Christmas with the folks, Mr. and Mrs. Wesencraft at Lindbrook, and Mr. and Mrs. Wankie who journeyed to Leduc to spend New Year's with Mr. and Mrs. Herb Spencer.

CHEVROLET

GENERAL MOTORS' No. 1 CAR

Again Takes First Place In Motor Car Sales

IN EVERY PROVINCE OF THE DOMINION

YOU' have awarded Chevrolet—General Motors' No. 1 Car—the coveted honor of being No. 1 car in popular demand in 1940.

For years you Canadian motorists have purchased more Chevrolets than any other make of automobile, regardless of type, size or price. You did it again in the year just closed—most emphatically, in every province in Canada.

We want to thank you for your mark of high favor and for your confidence. You place on us a definite responsibility to continue to give motor car leadership—and we accept that responsibility. Since you rate Chevrolet first in value, we are under the obligation to keep it first in value.

We consider that there is an entirely new call this year upon Chevrolet quality and dependability because Chevrolet is an essential part of Canada's war effort. To fill its place in the transportation program of a nation at work to win the war, Chevrolet must be built to an effective and enduring standard.

These are the reasons why we have redoubled our efforts to widen and increase Chevrolet value leadership

In our new cars for '41. If you will examine the new Chevrolet carefully, you will agree we have succeeded. You will find, for example, that Chevrolet alone among the low-priced cars includes as standard equipment certain quality features which a buyer would be wise, under present circumstances, to insist upon. You will find that Chevrolet with its thrilling new hi-gears is styled ahead for your protection.

It is worth money to you to know that Chevrolet is the only low-priced car providing, at no extra cost, original Vacuum-Power Shift which makes gear-shifting 50% automatic and requires only 20% driver effort; genuine Unitized Knee-Action which absorbs road shocks and prevents pitching and tossing; a body by Fisher of the same design and quality features as higher-priced cars; and Centralized Safety Chassis Lubrication that vent the accumulation of ice and snow and are the mark of truly advanced styling.

We invite you to take full advantage of the value you have helped, by your buying preference, to create.

Won't you please visit your nearest Chevrolet dealer and inspect General Motors' No. 1 car—and Canada's No. 1 car—today!

Cornhill Council Met In Session

The January meeting of the Council of Municipal District of Cornhill was rusher light compared to some previous meetings, the three important items came up. One, the notification and acceptance of a government road grant; two, the approval of payment to the M.H.O. of $500 for professional services to indigents; and, three, a preliminary perusal of the annual financial statement which was found to be very good.

The meeting was held at the District's office on Friday, January 10th, there being present, Reeve Walker in the chair, Councillors Anderson, Bruce, Coombes, Kortzman and Fowler.

Minutes of previous meeting, together with a list of payments passed at the last meeting were read and formally adopted.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson, road about for Div. 5 for $14.40 was not accepted.

Letter from A.M.A.D. enclosing cheque for $37.50, being dividends on purchase of gopher poison and stationery.

Letter of seasonal greetings from Union Telephone Co. Ltd. They also sent along a box of cigars to be passed around at the January meeting.

Letter of seasonal greetings from the J. C. Burger Lbr. Co.

Letter from Department of Public Works enclosing cheque for $150 to apply as a road grant on road west of sections 6 and 7-51-21. This was due to the effect of the cull- Sunday.

Mr Harry Arthur Stephenson, requested soldier exemption of land on North half 36-51-21. This was think she should be quite an asset to information.

Moved by Councillor Coombes, seconded by Councillor Anderson, that Mr. A. C. Hoover, of Tofield, be the one and only Elmer Olsen interviewed their particular district Council regarding road affairs in her Kortzmans said he had visited this place last year and fixed things up amicably, now they were as bad as ever. A general discussion ensued in which it was stated a neighbor had closed a road through his farm, which made it inconvenient for other residents desiring a way out to the highway. No action was taken at this time.

Of the same delegation, Messrs. Olaf and J. H. Anderson desired credit for four hours breaking work done last summer, which was granted; and Mr. Elmer Olsen desired four hours credit for labor in putting in a culvert, which was also granted.

Mr. Hoover's offer came up for consideration. In discussion it was stated that Mr. Jeremy Chalms was living on this place and that in 1936 and again in 1937 he had been granted hay leases. The land is quite rough. On the motion of Councillor Fowler, secretary was requested to write Mr. Gladue advising him to attend the next council meeting and outline his plans regarding the land. Also that Mr. Hoover's offer be tabled until next meeting.

On the motion of Reeve Walker, secretary was requested to write to those who did not take action regarding their land being liable for the tax sale, requesting that those concerned make some arrangements regarding renting, leasing or paying taxes. The following lands are effected.

Tofield Curling Club To Hold Bonspiel

Again entering the limelight of the curling world, the Tofield Curling Club will hold an open bonspiel on January 21-22-23. In years gone by this was quite an event but for a few years or so bonspiels have mostly been of a local nature This year with Dynamo Burke as president the inter-town bonspiel will flourish again.

There will be four competitions, the Grand Challenge, The North Western Utilities Shield, the Hamilton trophy and the Purcell trophy. Handsome prizes will be awarded the winners of all these events as there will be plenty of incentive to enter and three rinks true

The exact number of visiting rinks are at present unknown but eight or ten are likely to be present. Those combined with the local rinks will most likely bring the total entry to between 16 and 20 rinks.

All that is needed to make the event a success is good curling weather—enough frost to keep the ice level but not so cold as to make it miserable.

W. J. CHAPMAN TAKEN ILL AT HOLDEN

Friends of W. J (Bill) Chapman were distressed to learn that Tuesday he was suddenly stricken ill. Mr. Chapman had gone down to Holden with two rinks to curl and after getting collapsed on the ice.

Companions brought him home in his car. Dr. Lee was immediately called He is at present acting and is under medical and nursing care Watch for Review next week

Special Information To Those Desiring Grass Seed

Under the forage crop plan, rate payers may get a limited quantity of one kind of seed at a reduced price This is a continuation of last years plan with the exception that no one year or no boneplate have mostly been of a local nature This year with Dynamo Burke as president the inter-town bonspiel will flourish again.

In Addition and Separate to the Above—

The Town of Tofield M D No 487 has contracted with responsible parties to make a quantity of grass seed on a contract basis for tenders for the production of grass seed to be sold to ratepayers at not more than cost. Applications for this seed must be made to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Municipal District of Cornhill, not later than March 1st, 1941.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plots."

The Dominion Government will soon be considering the Seeds Report. It will be remembered that one recommendation made was that the famous Canadian-wide system of Dominion Experimental Farms, which has been functioning so successfully and well for many years, should either be discontinued or turned over to the Provinces.

In this column recently I mentioned the instance of Marquis, Reward and Regent wheats, how they could never have been produced had it not been for the work of the Dominion Experimental Farms

The same thing can be said of that new and most valuable variety of rust-resistant oats — Vaughan — which is adding so much to the pockets of our farmers and seed growers.

The Experimental Farms, I firmly believe, are absolutely essential to the production and testing of new superior varieties and other kinds of crops. The Farms are well spaced over Canada, and they have talented, long experienced and well-trained staffs operating under one direction and who are competent to handle the exacting tests which have to be used to differentiate the merits of the new varieties produced from the older standard sorts. If these Dominion Farms are done away with, or even turned over to the Provinces, it would in my humble opinion, be a serious "set-back" to the advancement of agriculture in Canada.

YOUR INCOME TAX

THIS YEAR, almost every man and woman in Canada will share the burden of paying for the war. A uniform new income tax will be levied. Payment of the budget payment when it is suitable to you. Taxpayers who are faced with sudden illness or unusual income taxes

Canadians are asked to shoulder their share of the war effort cheerfully and willingly. By paying your income tax regularly you help to expand the production of war material, and bring the day of victory nearer. Those who have made tax you will have to pay, and arrange to pay promptly when due.

Pay by instalments—the easy way—and save interest.

WHO PAYS INCOME TAX?

If you are a single person without dependents, and your income has been made less than $750.00 you pay personal income-tax.

If you are a married person without dependents, and your income in 1940 was more than $1500.00 you pay personal income-tax

If you are a married person with children, you are allowed $400.00 exemption for each dependent child or grandchild, in addition to the $1500.00 exemption.

NOTE. In addition to the general income-tax you pay National Defence Tax on your total income without any exemption if you are single and your income goes over $600 or if you are married and your income goes over $1,200.

HOW DO YOU PAY!

Your income tax may be paid in the following ways:—

1. The Present Method: At least one-third of the tax is to be paid by April 30th, the balance, with interest at 5%, from April 30th, to be paid by August 31st. On any balance unpaid after August 31st, the interest rate will be 7%.

2. The Proposed Method: In 8 monthly instalments without interest. To take advantage of this new way of paying, the first instalment must be paid on or before January 31st. You must pay at least one-third of the estimated tax in four equal monthly instalments, on January, February March and April, i.e. 1-12 of the estimated tax on each of the said 4 months. The remaining two-thirds of the tax is to be paid in four monthly instalments in May, June, July and August, i.e. 1-6th of the estimated tax on each of the said 4 months. (This will be in the amended law.)

3. The Accelerated Method. This method will not be found in the law but it is a simple method, namely, in eight equal monthly instalments, without interest, commencing in January.

To take advantage of the monthly payment plan, the first instalment, or budget payment plan must be made on or before the due dates. Otherwise interest will be charged on the total balance remaining unpaid after April 30th.

EXAMPLE OF INSTALMENT PAYING WITHOUT INTEREST

If your estimated tax is $60.00 you pay one-third of the tax $20.00 in four instalments ($5.00 each) and the remaining two-thirds $40.00 in four instalments ($10.00 each). Your payments are therefore as follows:

On or before Jan 31	On or before Feb 28	On or before March 31	On or before April 30
$5	$5	$5	$5
On or before May 31	On or before June 30	On or before July 31	On or before Aug 31
$10	$10	$10	$10 — $40

However it is recommended that you pay your tax in 8—3 equal monthly instalments of $7.50 each - $60.00.

Instalment Income Tax Remittance Forms are available at any post office, at any branch of any bank, or the office of the Inspector for your District, and their work will ensure accurate and proper allocation of your payment. However, you can send in your instalments by ordinary letter with your name and address plainly stated thereon, clearly indicating the division between Provincial and Dominion Tax payments.

HOW MUCH DO YOU PAY?

The exemption for a single, your exemption is $750.00. Thus if your total income is $1,000.00 you must pay tax on $250.00

The exemption for a married person is $1,500.00 plus $400.00 for each dependent child or grandchild. Thus if you are a married man with two children and a total income of $2,000.00 your total exemptions are $1,500.00 plus $400.00 for each child, or $2,300.00 in all. So you pay tax on $300.00

Payment: You may send a cheque, Post Office or Money Order in payment of income tax by mail, to the Inspector of Income Tax for the District in which you reside, made payable to the Receiver General of Canada, Write plainly, and give your name in full, as the Post Master is crediting may be avoided. Do not send money or postage stamps in envelopes.

Mart's Elde has returned home after a months visit with relatives and friends in the Grande Prairie country.

Mrs. Thora Kidder who has been a visitor with her sister Mrs. Ivan Fewhaug has left to join Mr. Kidder who has a job at Corvallis, Oregon.

Mrs. Gertrude Haugen an old timer of his district passed away at Kingman, Alta. January 9th at the age of 84 years. Mrs. Haugen was born at Krokra, Bardo, Norway, Nov. 11th 1856, where she grew up. She was married to Halvor Haugen also Bardo, Norway. They came with their family to Minnesota, U.S. in 1893. In the summer of 1904 they with several settlers came to Westcanada, Alberta looking for a place to make a home. They decided to homestead along with several others in the district what is now known as the Bardo district, 50 miles east of Wetaskiwin.

On this homestead 4 miles south of Tofield they made a home that was known far and wide for its hospitality. Mrs. Haugen was a woman with her own hand and heart for any one needing help in any way, a friend of young and old. In the pioneer days when horses and buggies were outdoors Mrs. Haugen walked 10 miles there and back to see anyone she that was in need of help.

Her husband predeceased her 10 years ago and her son Peter Haugen 4 years ago. She leaves to mourn Mrs. John Ness, Bardo; Mrs. Marie Horte, Kingman and Mrs. Marie Qualley, Machesden, Alta. 6 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Interment took place Sunday January 12th at the family plot in the Bardo Cemetery. Rev. Yhye officiating Pall bearers were A Johnson, H. Ness, P. Lo-bachuse, S. Anderson. J. Benson and I Moen. A host of relatives and friends were at the church to pay their last respects. A. Hovland of Camrose was in charge.

LAKESHORE

Though the Christmas and New Year holiday season is past, house parties have purged things up in our district the last week or so. On January 3rd neighbors gathered at T. A. Johns to give a surprise party in honor of Mrs. Jones' birthday. Because of the extreme cold and also because of the flu several who hoped to be there could not attend but those who went spent a pleasant evening dancing and visiting. An added pleasure for many was renewing an acquaintance with Mrs. Dough, who is spending a few weeks with Mrs. Johns. Everyone in the neighborhood wishes Mrs. Jones many more happy birthdays.

On January 10, another party was held at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tiedemann. The youth- ful guests really did his best for this occasion, and a large number of people met there to help with the housewarming. They danced till very late in the morning and closed a very successful evening singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

Our sympathies to Miss Craig teacher at Lakeshore. We had Miss Hardy's name in our paragraph in the last issue, it should have been Miss Craig.

Plan and decide on the new officers for the year

This plan has caught the interest of everyone in the community old and young alike and certainly very effective work has been done by the five groups. We are sure that this next year will see even greater progress in the Bardo Luther League. The new membership committee is now planning the installation service for new officers. This will be conducted by Rev. Vinge the same evening as his regular service, January 19. A business meeting followed by a social evening is planned for Friday evening January 17.

On New Years' Eve a beautiful and inspiring Watch Service was held at Art Moen's instead of the church as first announced. The Prayer group met at eleven o'clock and spent the hour before midnight in hymn sing- new year.

REV. CLARK WELCOMED

A group of friends gathered at the McCurdy home Wednesday of last week to welcome the new Anglican minister Rev. Clark. A pleasant social evening was spent

NORTH COOKING LAKE

The Deville Dynamiters hockey team again visited the Cooking Lake Flyers last Sunday with Deville edging out the locals 7-6 in a good exhibition game. The play was skewed to a considerable extent due to soft ice, but nevertheless the brand of hockey was enjoyed by those who attended. A total of six penalties were handed out; Morrow of Deville getting the major penalty The official referees were "Red" Bridges and Stewart.

In the second period of the play, L. Shanks of the Cooking Lake Flyers accidently slapped the disc into his own net, putting Deville in the lead. H. Bridges led the Flyers point getters with four goals; Wdowick 2 goals, and C. Gosling the other scorer, while Morrow tallied four goals Vic. Clark and Ellis the others for the dynamiters.

On Sunday afternoon the Cooking Lake Ladies broom ball team clashed with the Deville Ladies broom ball team to a deadlock 1-1 on the local ice, at the end of three exciting periods. In the first period of the play, Peggy Morrow of Deville started through the Cooking Lake line with the football and beat Lilian Bridges for the first encounter. A few minutes before the end of that period Mrs. P. Weary managed to maneuver with he ball through the Deville line to tie the score.

The broom ball game was neatly played and therefore no penalties were handed out by referee Paul Weary.

Vol. XX, No 44 Thursday, January 23, 1941 $2.00 Per Year. To U.S.A. $2.50

Explanation Column

The column appearing in the Mercury last year about this time dealing with the Municipal Covehill Financial Statement and hastily hoaxed "Explanation Column", met with considerable favor. So we will again for a week or so try to be of assistance to those desiring to give more than casual attention to the 1940 financial statement, which we published last week.

In general the financial report is an excellent one. The cash position as at December 31st has been improved there being $177.656 more cash in the bank and on hand at December 31, 1940 than at December 31, 1939 and $2500.66 more than at the same date in 1938.

Your printed financial statement starts off with the heading "Receipts (Municipal Only)." Under this heading all municipal receipts are listed and are grouped under a number of sub-heads so that it may be more easily understood.

The first receipt is any statement in what money there was in the bank and on hand when the previous statement was issued and we find this to be $5,626.27.

The next sub heading is "Receipts on Account of Ratepayers Arrears" and here we find that $24,863 66 was the total amount of taxes paid. Of this $14627 95 was paid on current taxes and $7235.41 on arrears. This is less than the amount collected in 1939 the amount collected for both current and arrears that year being $26,413 34.

The next heading "Unemployment Relief Paid," shows that $821 35 was paid to the municipality by the government. This however had first been paid out by the municipality to the relief recipients and is the government's portion of unemployment relief payments. There is an additional small item of $9.50 which is self explanatory.

The receipts under the next sub-heading "Advances and Charges Repaid" total $229.10. The first item $150.56 is from the sale of wartche powder the second item $81.20 is receipts in connection with the forage crop plan; and the third is from the sale of culture to go with grass seed.

The next sub-heading "Municipal Revenue Other Than Taxes" accounts for $292.18. Those items are mostly self-explanatory and are mostly in detail.

The next heading "Assets Sold" requires some explanation. The first item $182.70 is made up of amounts received by the Municipality for work done for other municipalities and private parties by the large road unit. The next item is the amount paid to all the divisions for maintenance and repair of large road unit. A division is charged at the rate of 75 cents per hour while the unit is working in that particular division. This is done so that all divisions should bear equal cost of maintenance and repairs of unit according to the length of time it is used by them. The amount charged to and consequently received by the municipality from the divisions in connection with the large outfit is $1892.00 and the patrol grader $287.45. It is really one form of interdepartmental

HASTINGS LAKE

Aber, Lindbrook and Entchament Thanks for the commencery in the home of December 19th. To say the least it is gratifying to know that our career is so widely read. Perhaps a little explanation re the shoes, the Scotch, and the pipes is in order. We might explain that it is only at lambing time that we have all three at one time. You see, should the weather be unfavorable, snow, sleet, rain or what have you, and with lambs everywhere, some doing remarkably well, but too many just the opposite and the odd one entertaining the idea of turning his toes up, there is nothing like a wee drop out to the bottle to revive their drooping spirits. At least that is the way theory has it. Actually however by the time the lambs have been attended to, required that run-down feeling probably the result of carrying and shivering lambs into the house, and passing around the milk-bottle and saying "open please, just a little wider." We feel that at this time a wee drop conducive to not much a and idea. But our troubles don't begin until we've taken a half-dozen and then the cows and they get back all over the lot, the mothers accuse us of saying "that's not mine," and you are positive it is, or are you? Upon returning to the house you find the equal half complaining about lambs all over the kitchen and she has to eat cold refrain. "Oh to be with mother now that lambing's here." By that time we find that two of the lambs are almost a goner.

So in a nutshell, in the event of severe weather we feel we are more in need of it than the lambs, and of course should the weather be fine, well, it calls for a little celebration. Of course we invariably make it one of our New Year's resolutions to stand our ways and henceforth play the game.....well it's a long time till lambing and you know the weakness of human nature, resolutions all too soon take on that frayed and worn air the edge appearance.

It is rumored that before new someone hasn't written a book entitled "Sheep and their pasturization" with the appendage "To get rich quick and stay single."

As to the pipes, well—music hath its charms.

COMMENTS ON THE WHEAT SITUATION FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1940

The cash price for wheat in store Fort William-Port Arthur during the year whereas the price at Chicago dropped 17½ cents. The Buenos Aires (Argentine) price fell only 5½ cents, a bushel as compared with 54¢ cents for the Argentine Peso. The "Futures" price at this moment is only 53½ cents a bushel as compared with 70¢ cents in the Winnipeg May future price of 71¼.

War operations which have cut off valuable foreign markets, combined with the present large crop, have been the causes of this low price and have built up the Canadian surplus from 344 million bushels on December 31st, 1939, to 494 million bushels on December 31st, 1940. On the other hand, according to Mr. R. L. Horsnell, Mr. Churchill, this great surplus is a powerful weapon in the hands of the Allies. It is in fact an important asset on of war, and Mr. Churchill is happy that the farmers of this large supply of wheat and of other foods may bring about an entire change. If the surplus of wheat will help toward this end it is, of course extremely valuable.

One other point is true. No wars were ever lost because of an abundance of wheat, whereas wars have been lost in the past because of a scarcity of wheat. Far better to have too much than not enough, for no one can foresee the future

While the Canadian cash price today of 74 cents is considerably higher than the Argentine price, 74 cents is still lower than the price needed to pay costs of production, and to give the our Prairie farmers with an adequate standard of living in spite of existing surpluses and present lower prices. It is our studies' belief that the future of the great Prairie wheat industry is bright

PRISONERS OF WAR PARCELS

The packing of parcels of food for British and Canadian prisoners of war in Germany was begun this week at Toronto by the Canadian Red Cross society. Five thousand food parcels, each weighing about eleven pounds and containing a well-balanced diet, are being packed in Toronto each week, and in the near future another five thousand parcels per week will be packed in Montreal.

To undertaking of ten thousand food parcels a week will cost the Canadian Red Cross about a million and a half dollars a year and was one of the main items stressed in the recently recent National wide appeal of the Red Cross. The International Red Cross through its representatives stationed in Germany, grants free delivery of parcels. Thousands of prisoners-of-war in Germany, British prisoners in enemy territory by the British Red Cross have reached the men safely. The food parcels from Canada will be sent to New York, and then on to Lisbon by American export liners. At Lisbon they are taken over by the International Red Cross, and shipped to Geneva where its representatives here handle the distribution.

To request for the supplying of these food parcels from Canada came from the British Red Cross, the Australian Red Cross, the Australian Society of the British Government committed to the feeding of prisoners in enemy territory.

The British Red Cross has been sending thousands of food parcels for many months and has proof that of ninety-five per cent reach the British prisoners in Germany. Each parcel contains a return post card which is signed by the recipient and returned. The work in England has slowed up owing to Nazi bombing, and that is why the Canadian Red Cross has been asked to help Britain in this undertaking. Dr. Fred W. Routley, the National Commissioner, explained, "There can be no doubt in any

C. M. E. EXECUTIVE TAKES WAR TIME POST

Oshawa, January 9—Drafted by the Dominion Government for a key post in the war-time mobilization of Canadian industry, Harry J. Carmichael today resigned as Vice-President and General Manager of General Motors of Canada. He will leave at once for Ottawa.

From command of four large automotive factory plants in Oshawa, Windsor, St. Catharines and Regina, scene in recent months of the most conspicuous of Canada's industrial war achievements, Mr. Carmichael, as the Rundown of Canada," steps into a There as wide as the whole industry the Dominion. His duties and responsibilities are expected to be modelled after those in Ottawa.

Announcing Mr Carmichael's resignation, E. S. McLaughlin, the President of General Motors of Canada expressed pride in that the Company is thus able to place itself directly at the disposal of the Government in the war effort to which so many substantial contributions have already been made.

"We are making a great sacrifice," he said. "But this appointment may well be of supreme consequence in our country's all-out effort. I have always considered Harry Carmichael one of the most efficient executives in Canada and one of the most modest Oshawa, January 11. William S Roberts, has been appointed Vice-President and Managing Director of General Motors of Canada Limited to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of H. J. Carmichael, who resigned this week to accept the position at Ottawa in Canada war production program.

Mr Roberts' impressive all-round record with General Motors is especially notable in the field of mechanical engineering, manufacturing and in the development and extension of production facilities.

"We are fortunate in Canada", said Mr. McLaughlin in making announcement of the appointment, "that there was available so outstanding a executive to fill the vital position in our organization. We were vitally the broad which has a larger position of less, or fat, industry, and the sows are excellent mothers and very prolific, while their piglets are hardy and rugged. They are usually ready for slaughter at an early age when small joints of pork are required, or to be taken on to a very large size and weight.

LOYALTY

You can't buy loyalty, sir-y say:
It's right it though, the other day
You can't buy friendship tried and true;

Well, just the same, I bought that too.

It holds my bid and on the spot
I might love and faith, and a whole lot
Of happiness, so all in all
The purchase price was pretty small.

I bought a simple trusting heart
That gave devotion from the start.

LEGION SENDING VOICE OF CANADA TO OLD COUNTRY

Ottawa, Jan. 13:—(Special) The Canadian Legion is helping to make radio history by instituting the first regular Canadian broadcast service to the British Isles.

Up to now this Dominion has been heard but seldom on the shale of British radios because of the lack of short-wave broadcasting facilities. Only through the use of the expensive trans-Atlantic beam system, cable or United States short-wave stations has it been possible—on special occasions of historic importance—for Canada to broadcast to the Mother Country or other parts of the Empire and the world.

Under a new scheme that went into operation, January 4 at 3 p.m. Eastern time, the voice of Canada now goes to the Old Country every Saturday. It is in the form of half-hour programme entitled, "News from Home," designed especially for the Canadian forces overseas.

Operated by the Canadian Legion War Services as a means of helping to maintain the morale and fighting spirit of the regular week-end broadcasts feature the voices of mothers, wives and sweethearts who send messages of love and greetings. Included in the broadcast are budgets of news of particular interest to the men. The idea is to present a composition view of the Dominion through homely, "neighborhood" news stories from all parts of the country, and to show that the country, is unified and solidly behind the Empire in its struggle for freedom.

Recorded in Canada through cooperation of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the programs are sent in disc form by air mail to short-wave station WRUL, Boston, owned and operated by the Wide World Broadcasting Foundation, New York. From there are short-waved to the B.B.C. which re-broadcasts them on the long-wave band so that all persons with ordinary receiving sets may hear them in Great Britain. The scheme is unusual since WRUL is a non-commercial station operated for the public weal and not as a profit-making enterprise.

Families of the men overseas, those taking part in the broadcast, or interested listeners may hear the "News from Home" broadcasts by tuning in to the 25 metre band. Reception in Canada is reported to be quite satisfactory.

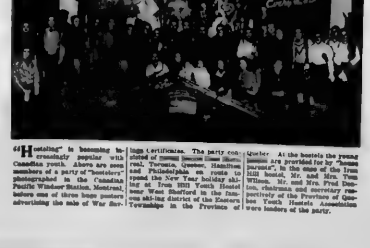
HOSTEL SKI-ING POPULAR IN QUEBEC



Ski-ing is becoming increasingly popular with Canadian youth. At the hostels the young visitors are provided for by "house parents", in the case of the Iron Hill hostel, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dodson, chairman and secretary respectively of the Province of Quebec Youth Hostels Association were leaders of the party.

LIVESTOCK FROM THE WAR ZONE

Britain continues in the midst of war to send pedigree livestock across the seas to remote corners of the world.

Sheep from Romney marsh have recently been landed on the lonely island of Ascension. Bred for generations on these exposed marshes of the English Channel, they thrive where other sheep would perish. One ram of this breed was sold at auction in last September for 210 guineas.

Red Poll cattle have been safely delivered as far from East Anglia as Nepal. They are the only hornless breed from England, a strong characteristic of skilful mating of the Norfolk strain, hardiness, vigour and beef production and the Suffolk, with its excellent milking qualities.

A consignment of pigs has also just crossed the Atlantic and Canada to Vancouver. They are Large White, the breed which has a larger proportion of lean to fat than any other. The sows are excellent mothers and very prolific, while their piglets are hardy and rugged. They are usually ready for slaughter at an early age when small joints of pork are required, or to be taken on to a very large size and weight.

A BEAUTIFUL WINTER—

ONE FEELS as if he or she should "touch wood" when bestowing praise upon Alberta's winter climate; it can on occasion become very disagreeable or conversely may become very nice. This winter up to time of writing is about the most attractive out of a selection of over thirty Alberta winters which we have experienced. We have experienced Alberta winters that were on the whole warmer and those that were considerably colder, but for a nice steady temperature neither too cold or too warm, we believe this winter, so far, to be the peer of them all. Generally the temperature has been between freezing and zero, probably averaging about fifteen degrees above zero, which is an ideal temperature for a Canadian Winter. There have been two features of interest connected with the weather here since early November, namely the comparatively small amount of sunshine and wind. The sun has shone upon occasions but not very often and the wind has been quite light compared to other years. This, combined with a more than usual humidity in the air has had the effect of transforming the whole country into a veritable fairyland. At time of writing the trees are loaded with hoar frost, and have been for some long time. They are very, very beautiful and when a chance ray of sunshine falls upon them they are illuminated by the street lights at night it is as if a jewel fairyland was being unfolded upon a stage. What ever the winter may have in store for us, the 1940-41 winter here will be remembered for its beauty.

NEW INCOME TAX PROVISIONS—

WE WOULD particularly draw to the attention of our readers the advertisement appearing in our last issue, inserted by the income tax division of the department of national revenue, and outlining the new installment plan for payment of income tax. More people in Canada will be required to pay income tax this year than ever before, and many who have not paid it before will this year be paying it for the first time.

Canadians, like their fellow citizens in every part of the empire, are making every possible sacrifice to speed the day when the adversary will finally and permanently defeat the unprincipled aggressors of the dictator ruled countries, and bring freedom and happiness once again to the people of the ravaged small nations of Europe. With neutral U.S.A. bending every effort to help our cause, every citizen of this country must do his part in achieving victory.

The government has made possible the payment of income taxes by installment over a period of eight months. Now it should be realized that there is no choice of eight months in which to pay. If you are to take advantage of this plan, and without payment of interest, you must start payment in January. In the advertisement to which we have referred the income tax division has set forth in simple language the details of the plan. It tells you if you are assessable for income tax. It tells you how, and when, and where to pay it, and how much your tax will be.

The man or woman who is eligible for payment of income is throwing money away if they fail to take advantage of the plan presented, so the wisest thing is to take a little time off and study the advertisement thoroughly, so that a proper understanding of the legislation may be obtained.

During the coming year there are going to be many calls upon your patriotism. You will be asked to support the war savings certificate drive in February. You will be asked to assist several war charities in the month of March. You will be asked to buy war bonds, and there will be other calls upon the average man throughout the year. To be able to pay income tax in monthly installments is a special privilege, and every citizen liable for income tax should study the plan, and make arrangements to take advantage of it before the end of this month. Read the advertisement and find out if you have to pay, how much you have to pay, how to pay it and all other details connected with income tax.

GEOGRAPHICAL ODDITIES—

The wettest spot on the face of the earth is the windward (north-east) slope of Mount Waialeale (Hawaiian for "rippling water") on the Hawaiian island of Kauai. Here the average annual rainfall is 500 inches—but the figures are seldom given out in terms of inches. They're more comprehensible in terms of feet or yards!

Compare Mount Waialeale, where it almost never stops raining, with Death Valley, in California, where it almost never rains at all. In Death Valley the average annual rainfall is three tenths of an inch—and, sometimes, six or seven completely rainless years must be averaged into several "unusually rainy" years to get even this scanty average.

If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.—Emerson.

Secretaries Take Note

At the annual meetings of the Manitoba Agricultural, the Plant Disease Commission reported that there is a tendency for wheat samples submitted for identification to germinate poorly. The moisture may be true in cases of Saskatchewan and Alberta. It was recommended that farmers should increase the rate of seeding until spring. There could be no better evidence of the wisdom of having germination tests made. Any grain buyer of a line elevator company associated with the Agricultural Department will be glad to send your seed samples to us so far loosing Please do not delay, as our laboratory is likely to be taxed to capacity

Bushels in a Bin

Right weeks ago we described a method for calculating the number of bushels in farm granaries or bins. We called that to order to correct any time to measurement bushels in any bin necessary, or minimize as we did, the number of seconds in the cubic contents of the bin. To simplify, partly to simplify calculation and partly because on wooden bins the bulging of the walls due to pressure of the grain will largely counteract the error involved in using the factor 0.8. In round metal bins or wooden bins as well braced and tied that bulging is very slight the factor 0.78 should be used

RISING FOR LIVE STOCK

A general substance about which the live stock raiser should be concerned is iodine. The crops and drinking water in many sections of Canada are lacking in this element and the shortage leads to the birth of young suffering from disturbances such as goiter in lambs and young calves, baldness in young pigs, as well as joint-ill or navel-ill in young foals. The remedy for these troubles is to feed the iodine in the form of potassium iodide in the pregnant female. During a long, cold winter with deep snow, such as seems to prevail, the pregnant animals take little exercise and do not get access to the soil. Exercise is always beneficial, and the soil seems to be a general regulator for the system. It is probably for these two reasons that baldness fall losers are almost unknown, fall calves and foals are almost always strong and there is almost no trouble with this lambs. Another drug due to the deep snow is that many animals are either eating snow or drinking from water and while the water from many deep wells contains sufficient iodine for the requirements of life stock, snow water on the surface, in shallow wells does not contain any iodine.

Feeding potassium iodide requires very little extra work, is not expensive and may be purchased from any druggist. The saving of one foal will many times over pay for the cost of the iodide and also for the labour of feeding to all the breeding animals.

The treatment must not be put off long after the born and the ewes should be treated before the lambs are born for at least the three months of pregnancy to be sure of results. All pregnant mares and cows should be fed potassium iodide during the last three months of pregnancy. Commence feeding potassium iodide at the earliest possible date.

For Sows—Dissolve one ounce of potassium iodide in one gallon of water and mix in the feed or drinking water for thirty days. Give the sows the salt at 1 pound in 100 pounds of grain.

For Ewes—Dissolve 1 ounce of potassium iodide in a small quantity of warm water as possible. Spread this evenly on 100 pounds of as small an amount of grain as possible on a clean floor and sprinkle the solution of potassium iodide evenly over it. When dry, place the salt where the sheep may have access to it at all times.

For Pregnant Cows—feed the potassium iodide in the salt in the same way as for ewes, but it may be found that some cows take very little salt, in this case give the cow one-third of a teaspoon of finely powdered potassium once every two weeks.

For Pregnant Mares—give each mare, every two weeks, a half-teaspoonful of potassium iodid crystals, dissolved in their drinking water or mixed in their feed.

Salt should always be supplied to such in granular form rather than in blocks during winter as it is difficult for an animal to secure its requirements in the latter form.

THOUSAND-POUND BOMB NEARLY HITS ALBERTAN

The following letter appearing in a Calgary daily, will be of special interest to people of this district. The writer, Jack Derry was a resident here, working for the Crown Lumber Co., immediately prior to his enlistment. The "Wet" mentioned is Wesley Taylor who grew up here and is the son of Mr and Mrs. T. W. Taylor

Pte Jack Derry, with an artillery unit in England has been advanced to the rank of Bombardier, according to a letter recently received by his mother, Mrs. A. W. Bond.

In a letter to his sister, he relates a perilous experience some weeks ago. He writes: "Last night we had some more excitement. It was about half past seven and we didn't realize an air raid was on, when suddenly We and I were thrown clear across the room.

"Oh, were you ready to go out, and if we had have gone one minute sooner, I wouldn't be writing this now, as Jerry dropped a 1,000-pound bomb right on our front gate. It made a crater 40 feet across, and lifted the pavement up in hunks ten feet high.

"The house was a lovely mess, the silvery house and we had a front room on the ground floor. All the windows in the window sill, read the paper, while we were waiting for another chap who was almost ready, and we never heard it coming down. I guess that was because we were almost directly below it.

"I blew to and the windows came across the room, and then the china boy and the roof came down. Luckily none of us were hurt, but we were a little off my elbow, but none of us were the worse for the shock and it was drier into the walls all around us.

"There were three chaps in the next room, and after we had picked up the finished falling we got up off the floor and pulled the door to and then they were hurt, but they were O.K., except one chap had a nose-bleed."

NOBODY HATES HITLER

"We get out a fire in one room, and then worked our way around them. There were five boys in the kitchen, and they were all outside when we got down. Only then did we realize how close it had landed, as the trees were all uprooted and the front of the house blown in.

"One of the boys in the kitchen was cut up a little with splinters of glass in his nose. None of us got rattled at all, but it was a minute later we were all shaking badly. I guess you must have been saying your prayers regularly, as it is a miracle that no one of us all alive. It has taken Hitler 14 months to get that close to me."

McKENZIE

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Steen had the misfortune of their car burning to the ground early Saturday morning. Mr. Steen left shortly after they had gone to town. ALBERTA'S CHEESE INDUSTRY

The cheese industry in Alberta made very marked advancement during 1940. Eighteen cheese factories, located at various points from Mountain View in the South to Grande Prairie in the Peace River section manufactured 2,700,000 pounds. This figure represents the highest production in the history of the province, and is an increase of 25 per cent over the 1939 production.

Due to increased demand for export purposes, the average price for cheese were approximately two cents higher in 1940 than the previous year. While no cheese from Alberta was exported to the United Kingdom, increased production here liberated an equal quantity of eastern cheese, which formerly was required to supply this market.

The quality of Alberta cheese showed marked improvements during the year. The Federal Grading Report indicates that a very satisfactory increase in first grade occurred during 1940. There were 441,802 pounds of this first grade which scored 93 points and over, and entitled for a bonus of one per cent per pound. This bonus was established by the Federal Cheese and Cheese Factory Improvement Act of 1939.

Exhibits of Alberta cheese were successful in winning all the prizes in the open classes at Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver Exhibitions. The one arthist sent to the British Empire Cheese Exhibition at Belleville, Ontario, where competition is particularly strong, was awarded a third prize.

Commencing May 15th, 1940, the Dairy Branch Laboratory supplied a coffee cut lactic starter. Formerly this starter was supplied by the factory once a month. The service has proven to be of great assistance to high quality cheese

A TRANS-CANADA TRIP

Details of an interesting transCanada trip, covering a distance of approximately 4,000 miles, including a visit to the Canadian Rockies, Dominion, and over half-ton mountain trucks at an altitude of 6,000 feet, have been announced by Austin F. Grose, noted Canadian author, journalist and radio commentator.

Mr. Grose, who made the trip in 1939 to Oldsmobile car, has completed at one time or another a sight of the nine Canadian provinces, in all but 48 states of the Union, and in Mexico, Cuba and the Bahamas. In his recent journey from Montreal to Vancouver, however, he said he had passed through stretches of dangerous country." In this connection he referred to the climb over dirt tracks to an altitude of 7,322 feet at the Great Divide and the "threading of the Kicking Horse Pass." But, according to Mr. Grose, the scenic grandeur part of the trip was encountered in the Rocky Mountains of British Columbia, where he travelled a distance of 200 miles without seeing a terrace. For that matter, he did not even see the suggestion of a settlement on this long stretch of country. "Nowhere else on this continent," declared Mr. Grose, "can you travel 200 miles on a road without finding a town of some kind and rarely that much. It is this loneliness which is unique in North America. If anything goes wrong it is really and simply 'up to you'."

Referring to his experiences in going through the Hell Gate Canyon on the Cariboo Trail, he said, "You can scramble almost all the adverse factors you can think of, except winter driving, and I had them!" In returning home, Mr. Grose came by way of the United States.

Gasoline prices he recalled, ranged all the way from 37 cents at the Big Bend Highway, to 16 cents in Indiana, while he estimates his gasoline consumption at 30 miles to the gallon which included long stretches at 70 miles an hour.

LAKESHORE

R. C. Phillips spent several days in the city last week-end. Sammy Campbell who had been visiting Owen Eston's returned to Edmonton with Mr. Phillips.

Maggie Wood left on Tuesday morning to spend some time with her sister Mrs. Mayhew in Red Deer, while Mr. Mayhew is in hospital

We'll have to add Mrs. Herman Tiedemann's name and also that of Johnny Wood to the list of workers in the dentist. The tooth must either come to be dentist's paradise if one of the local wood sawings or grain grinning outfits could add a tooth and few forceps to the outfit the owner could do a thriving dental business on the side and save a lot of the home tiresome trips to Edmonton.

The street runs east and west and is one of important business as various lots fronting on it. The markets end at the fair grounds and is an open space and so it seemed from across a thousand miles of Canadian plains a stormy wind was blowing down the street. It seemed a temperature of 40 below zero was there. Down the centre of the street came a dog drawn sleigh, black bosom. Held a tight grip of Tofield Town and Jas. Low is carrying passengers and freight and the sleigh makes a very comfortable method of locomotion. Many of the residents of Little America have automobiles and use them when the weather is not too severe. Others use dog teams and dog sleighs. Some of the latter are using dogs that have been trained to pull sleighs in the arctic regions. Others are using dogs that have been trained to pull sleighs in the arctic regions. We have had a very successful year. An increase of seven members over last years list with four honorary members and three voting members. We also traveled to surrounding towns namely Tofield, Kingman and Round Hill, with a special W.C.T.U. Program which was also given at our home school. We had a splendid audience at all the places mentioned.

LEGION SERVICES WIN APPRECIATION OF MEN AT TRAINING CENTRES

Cornwall, Ont., Jan. 20.—(Special) Ask any one of the 700 odd recruits who are at this military centre for their first impressions training and they'll tell you. The Canadian Legion War Services is really four square behind the young soldiers now, while those who are not in uniform are not yet.

At the new camp one finds exactly what Canada's War Services are extended to families at the request of the Department of National Defence, the Legion operates a non-profit making dry canteen and recreation hut and already a night has gone by that the building has not been crowded to capacity by the recruits.

After evening drilling each day the lads congregate in the hut to enjoy the latest pictures concert parties, amateur shows and singsongs arranged by the Legion's entertainment division and presented free.

Sports equipment for the men have been provided in considerable quantities by the Legion and in addition to two table tennis sets there are rubbers boards cards and volleyball and baseball outfits. A plentiful supply of magazines, books and newspapers are available in the hut's "quiet room" where the troops may also write letters home on notepaper supplied by the C.L.W.S. without cost. More than 15 000 sheets of writing paper and 8,000 envelopes were distributed during the December training period.

The Cornwall camp is one of the 20 established by the government following the National Registration scheme last year. The other eight in which the Legion is actively assisted at New Glasgow, N.S., Fredericton, N.B., Hyacinthe, Que.; Valleyfield, Que.; Long Branch, Ont.; Brandon, Man.; Grande Prairie, Alta. and Gordon Head B.C.

GENERAL MOTORS TO BUILD THOUSANDS OF AERO ENGINES

Mr. C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corporation, today announced completion of arrangements for extensive additional participation of the Corporation in the aviation defense program, calling for progression to produce parts and subassemblies for 200 twin-engine bombers monthly and for increasing airplane engine production by 500 engines monthly to a total of 1,500 a month. This will involve an increase in the Corporation's employment, as the program reaches a peak, to 46,000 men in aviation alone. The Corporation is pushing this program ahead aggressively pending the working out of final contractual arrangements.

With the urgent need for bombers, it was announced that Corporation engineers immediately began preparation for the manufacture of parts and subassemblies for twin-engine B25 medium bombers which will be finally produced by North American Aviation, Inc. In connection with this program, North American Aviation, Inc. has announced that it will begin immediately erection of a plant at Kansas City, Mo. It is expected that parts and assemblies will be in production in General Motors so that the assemblies can start by late summer.

The Buick Motor Division of General Motors will erect an airplane [illegible] with a capacity of 800 engines a month. The engines will be the Pratt and Whitney radial, air-cooled type.

When negotiations now in progress are completed the total Buick contract for engines, spare parts, plant machine tools and other equipment will amount to approximately $125,000,000. This includes $24,313,150 already allotted by the Defence Plant Corporation for a plant and $36,407,250 contract for engines and parts awarded by the War Department. This project alone, when it gets into full production, will employ 15,000 men at the new plant. The time when production will start in this plant will depend upon the date of delivery of special machine tool equipment.

WILD GOOSE FALLS UP WITH SHEEP FLOCK

Vancouver, B.C. Jan. 20:—From Qualicum Beach Island comes a "believe it or not" story from Canadian National Railways fish and game authorities about a wild rushing goose which made friends with a flock of sheep. The rushing geese—about the same size as black beard—was seen to alight near the sheep, following them as they grazed. Alarmed by their strange companion, the sheep moved away, observers say, and after the goose was left a short distance behind, it would take to wing and alight in the shelter of the flock.

"THE TASK WILL BE GREATER IN 1941 THAN IT HAS BEEN IN 1940 . . . it is going to demand more effort, more sacrifice and far more change in our daily lives . . ."

RT. HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING
(NEW YEAR'S EVE, 1940)

ALREADY the pattern and pace of life in Canada have undergone a profound change. Gaps in employment are rapidly filling up. Some 350,000 Canadians who were unemployed before the outbreak of war are now employed. Another 200,000 are with our armed forces. Factories, which until recently were turning out goods for civilian consumption, have been transformed into humming arsenals, pouring out instruments of war. Night and day shifts have become the rule rather than the exception. But the peak of effort is not yet in sight.

In 1941 still more factories will switch to war production . . . new plants will be established, thousands more will be employed. This rising tide of activity must continue until we reach the flood of effort when every Canadian will be employed and working to his utmost, every possible square inch of plant will be utilized, every wheel will be whirring in the race we are waging against time and the enemy.

More men are working . . . working longer hours . . . making more munitions . . . earning more money . . . producing more goods . . . putting more money into circulation. Most Canadians are sharing in this increased national wealth — have extra dollars in their pockets.

The effort the Prime Minister calls for is gaining momentum, but many Canadians, as individuals, have not yet felt the real pinch of sacrifice.

Canadians of all classes are sharing tax burdens, but it must be admitted that up to date the larger part of the money needed for Canada's war effort has come from business firms and individuals with large incomes. They are paying high taxes. They have already invested heavily in War Loan Bonds.

This is not enough. The plain truth is that Canada's rapidly expanding production for war purposes will require increasing sums of money. That is why the Prime Minister warned Canadians in his New Year's broadcast that the year ahead demands more effort and more sacrifice.

Every man, woman and child is asked to lend. Every dollar you lend will help to put another man in a job . . . making more munitions. Every dollar you lend may save a soldier's life . . . help to shorten the war. Small wage earners must carry their share of the burden, too.

No one need go without necessities, but you are urged to forego the purchase of unnecessary articles . . . however we must plan for peace as consciously and as deliberately, and with the same common readiness for sacrifice, as we now plan for war. It must not be said that we are more ready to risk our lives than our vested interests, or that peace — unlike war — holds no purpose worthy of the sacrifice of things we prize for a greater common good. The British people will shrink from no sacrifice for a purpose in which it believes. In war it has gladly accepted — indeed demanded — leadership which calls for sacrifice from all. The planning of peace calls for a leader who will have the courage and the vision to make the same appeal.

PLANNING FOR PEACE—

Extract from editorial in The London Times, London, England, December 11th, 1940

PERHAPS THE fundamental cause of our failure after 1919 was that, in attempting to create a new international order, we ignored the needs of a new social order. The social and economic foundations on which the political structure of 1919 was so light-heartedly erected were crumbling in ruins. Social and economic stresses were the revolutionary force which swept away the work of the peacemakers — the good and the bad together. The connexion between unemployment and war is not fortuitous. Seven million unemployed brought Hitler to power. He rewarded them by finding them employment in preparations for war. Today millions of workers in more than one country are learning the dangerous lesson that nothing creates regular and well-paid employment, and makes labor a scarce and valued commodity, so certainly as war. So long as it remains true that war or preparation for war is the only effective remedy for unemployment, wars will continue however cunning the machinery devised to prevent them. Any new international order will be ill-born so long as this cancer is not eradicated from the social system.

Put in these terms, the problem of unemployment becomes simple for those who have the courage to face its implications. There is no formula, no specific, for the abolition of unemployment any more than there is for the abolition of war. It is a problem not of means but of ends. It can be solved (or transformed, as at the present moment into a technical problem of fitting supply to demand) when we recognize in time of peace a social purpose as compulsive and as worthy of sacrifice as the purposes of war. In 1940 the manufacturer forgoes profits, the worker forgoes trade union restrictions on conditions of employment, the consumer forgoes luxuries and lends to the government to finance expenditure from which no material return is asked or expected. In 1930 a small fraction of these sacrifices would have sufficed to avert the unemployment crisis of the ensuing years, and at the same time, to bring to the countries now involved in war better housing, more ample nutrition, better educational, and more amenities for the leisure of the masses. These sacrifices were not made because they were not called for by any political leader; they were not called for because the lesson had not yet been learned. There is no longer any reason for failure to understand. To create the new social order does not, like war, call for sacrifice of life and limb. But it does call for many of those other sacrifices of profits and luxuries, or rights and privileges, which we make unquestioningly in time of war. To formulate a social end, other than war, which will inspire such sacrifices is the cardinal problem of our time.

The greatest obstacle to the realization of this need is the fact that we still live in the afterglow of nineteenth-century splendor, when prosperity seemed within the reach of almost all and sacrifices were almost all of evil. Gradually we came to understand that this prosperity was the product of conditions which are gone beyond recall—expanding frontiers, expanding populations, freedom of movement for man and capital, and quick profits in undeveloped countries overseas. Then for a time, as profits became precarious, slogans like "Make the foreigner pay" and "Soak the rich" seemed to offer a cheap way out. Now we know that there is no such easy road, that prosperity can be regained only by new policies adapted to new and sterner conditions, and that we must plan for peace as consciously and as deliberately, and with the same common readiness for sacrifice, as we now plan for war. It must not be said that we are more ready to risk our lives than our vested interests, or that peace — unlike war — holds no purpose worthy of the sacrifice of things we prize for a greater common good. The British people will shrink from no sacrifice for a purpose in which it believes. In war it has gladly accepted — indeed demanded — leadership which calls for sacrifice from all. The planning of peace calls for a leader who will have the courage and the vision to make the same appeal.

The Stabilization Of Agricultural Prices

The recorded history of agriculture extends back for some 5,000 years. During this long period agriculture from time to time has been in difficulties. Sometimes the prices of agricultural products have risen to considerable heights and at other times they have fallen to depressed levels, and then for long periods prices have ruled low at what might be termed normal or satisfactory levels. Extreme fluctuations in prices, the records show, however, have only come about during and after great wars.

The records reveal further that whenever prices have been very much away from normal either high or low there never lacked people who have arisen and who have declared they had a plan to save either the producers in the case of low prices, or the consumers in the case of high prices. The solution they offer has always been the same in essence. It is simply that the Government should take some charge of the production and distribution of foodstuffs. In times of high prices those people recommended that the Government should stabilize prices at a lower level than the market would afford, but in times of scarcity lent the Government should oblige farmers to produce more. In times of low prices and of surpluses that the Government should stabilize prices at a higher level, and should by law oblige farmers to reduce their acreage and or their production.

All Efforts Have Failed

The records show unhappily that these efforts at price stabilization and of control of production have always failed. There is not one instance in 5,000 years of recorded success. In real for the most part the interference of the Governments usually resulted in making the situation worse than what it was at the start, and as a result Kings, Princes, Dictators and Governors at times have lost their heads, and frequently Governments were thrown out of power by an indignant populace. There are many records of such controls having been attempted with many records able product under the sun.

Agriculture Is Life Itself

It is most interesting, it would seem, to try to seek the reason why, with all the best motives in the world Government and other organizations have never been able to stabilize or to set a price that would be satisfactory to the farmers and to the people, and why Governments have never been able to control in a satisfactory manner surpluses or production. The answer most probably is simply Because Agriculture Is Life Itself, and life, on all know, is uncertain, impermanent transitory, hence unpredictable, and it is obvious of course that price of as product can be stabilized unless the factors which govern the price are predictable and so themselves can be controlled.

Let us examine the statement that "agriculture is life" a little more in detail. Let us begin with any one part of agriculture, the wheat industry, and with the seed wheat. (We speak of course as we know much further than seed, to the conception in the plant breeder's mind of a new variety, to the resultant production of that new variety, to its multiplication by the seed grower and to the "seed" which is available to farmers.)

In one bushel of wheat there are approximately ¾ of a million kernels, each one of which is an individual unit of life; each seed probably is different from other seeds as human beings are different from one another. In 2,000 bushels of wheat, therefore there are more units of plant life than there are human beings in the world. But there is sown in Western Canada alone, to make our wheat crop, not 2,000 bushels but something around 25 million bushels. These untold billions of individual living wheat seed are sown by hundreds of millions of individual farmers living in different countries, under different conditions, and each farmer with different ideas and ways different from those of his fellows. The bacteria and fungi in the soil, whose function it is to manufacture food for plants as they develop. But the bacteria and the fungi can only do this with the aid of rainfall and of the sun's rays, and most certainly their courses too are unpredictable. The behaviour of the seeds, while it broadly can be forecasted, is not controllable altogether by man, and certainly the actions of hundreds of millions of farmers living in many different countries, are uncontrollable by any one authority.

The Important Consumer.

Now all this complicated mass of different forms of life refers to production alone, but there is something else too. There is an old Chinese saying which tells us that wood cannot be sold in the forest; that fish cannot be sold on the sea shore; and that rice cannot be sold in the rice fields, as it is equally true that wheat cannot be sold on the wheat fields. For any agricultural product to have value, it must be transported to the place where people live who will consume it, and can afford to buy it. That is, to the hundreds of millions of people who live in cities. And so consumption is apparently as important as production as far as making a price is concerned. For if there were no consumption there would be no demand for a product, and so of course there would be no price offered.

Who are the consumers of wheat? Hundreds of millions of women in the main, who purchase the products of wheat, flour and bread. Women, with all their whims and fancies and changing ideas, fashions and idiosyncrasies, and ever changing wants. Housewives obliged to stretch their meagre incomes to the limit, far-seasoned bargain hunters all, so far as food is concerned, and obliged by the sheer force of economic circumstance to purchase the cheapest food for the least money; and so hundreds of millions of women in every country of the world with every other thing that the housewife's family can eat, and which foods are available, vegetables, meat, oatmeal, barley meal, rye bread, meat, fish and so forth. It appears, therefore, that the quantity of consumption itself is quite unpredictable and most decidedly it will appear, that the actions of hundreds of millions of women too are quite uncontrollable by man.

Prices Therefore Cannot Be Predicted

Persuading now the living unpredictable and so uncontrollable buyers who govern and influence production, it will be observed immediately how unstable it is for any Government or any Board or Organization or group of human beings ever to be able to govern or control, price, because price itself is governed and influenced by the constant changes occurring in the innumerable and complex factors mentioned—and many others too—that go to make up production and consumption. In short, because agriculture is actually life itself, and most complex life at that, and because life can be neither predicted or controlled would seem to explain why all attempts ever made to exercise control over prices or production or consumption have failed, and probably ever will fail, to achieve anything like the results desired.

LINE ELEVATOR ASSOCIATION ISSUE PINE BOOKLET

In the course of many years experience in the country newspaper business hundreds, possibly thousands of pieces of literature have come to us through the mail. We doubt however, whether anything any better has ever come than a booklet recently received from the Inland Grain Elevator Assn. This is a book illustrating in natural colors 30 important weeds, with of course their names attached There is a minimum of reading matter, one actual page in fact, but if as the Chinese say, "one picture is worth a thousand words," the booklet says a great deal. We can't imagine a handier way in which information of this kind could be put up.

The booklet is being distributed free and a copy can be obtained at your local elevator. To those who have the responsibility of keeping land clear of weeds it is a very handy and valuable piece of literature to have.

CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY ALBERTA DIVISION

The Alberta Division made shipment yesterday of nearly 1,000 pairs of mitts and gloves for overseas, and we would request that Branches ask their workers to speed up their knitting and send in supplies to Calgary, 17 Canada Building, so that further shipments may be made as soon as possible. The following news article from our Vegreville Branch explains itself, showing the pressing need for more knitting:

"The urgent cry comes from England for as many woolen mitts as the women of Canada can send, Mrs. Walls - Campbell, National Chairman of the Women's War Work Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, reported yesterday.

"Two big mitts, khaki mitts and rifle mitts, directions for which are found in the Red Cross knitting book, are needed in large quantities, the Chairman said. Rifle mitts are made in khaki wool only but many of the other mitts are force blue may be used for whole mitts and two-way mitts.

"It is what the women of Canada do that will help determine the amount of the work it is our duty to do, Mrs. Campbell commented, "but surely there must be a great satisfaction for them in the consciousness that they are doing a wonderful quality of their work. I do not believe any woman is merely working at top speed. The mitts are needed for use in cold winter weather, and they must be made so that they will not wet work or the work after, but today."

Shortage of mitts in Britain is due to the fact that huge quantities of these articles are being handed out at eastern Canadian ports by the Canadian Red Cross to men of the British Navy who arrive in desperate need of clothing. In this connection, Mrs. Campbell urged even greater effort on the part of women with their knitting for the men of the navy.

Mrs. Campbell referred to the praise given by Earl Beatty to the articles made by Canadian women for the men of the navy. "He said he had seen none better anywhere," she said, "and his tribute is only one of many which we have received. The Canadian Red Cross has always taken the attitude that only the best is good enough for the men who are fighting for the freedom of the world.

"It is the duty of Canadian women to stand right behind these men. In Britain, the women are doing more than that. As members of the Auxiliary Territorial Services they are standing beside the men and doing a man's job. Isn't that a challenge to the women of Canada? I urge every woman to consult her local Red Cross Branch on the need of various articles and to work with all the strength and might at her command."

SEEDTIME AND HARVEST

Soil Mixing

At the Annual Conference of the Manitoba Agronomists an interesting and challenging paper was presented by M. J. Thicke and M. J. Stevenson. Its title is "Manure and Rendzinate" in Manitoba. Cropping Practice," but it has equal significance for residents of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The following is an abstract of the authors' introductory statement:

In view of the present wheat problem, this is an opportune time to encourage sending down grasses and legumes.

Manitoba farmers have been grain minded their soil too long. Older countries have had to maintain a high percentage of their land in grasses and legumes in order to prevent their soils. Saskatchewan farmers must follow this same policy or they will find their soils deteriorating very much as the province should erosion and guttying of the cultivated lands are only forerunners of more severe evasion yet to come Here endeth the quotation.

It is an interesting fact that, until quite recently lectures and articles on crop rotations were considered to be of academic interest only. We believed that our prairie province soils were so abundantly fertile that they would never wear out. Now, we know better.

The next item "purchase of road materials and supplies" $6222.77 needs no explanation, except perhaps to say that during 1940 there seemed to be an epidemic of broken culverts and bridges, and the item $1457.71 consists of contract payments to the Workman's Compensation Board. The next item $501.00 is amount paid to councillors for road supervision. This item appears in a special table in detail and supervision cost $119.00 less in 1940 than in 1939. Machinery rental and interest amounted to $2243.28. This is $540.66 less than the same item in the 1939 statement. The cost of operating trucks was $1548.76 and the cost of hauling $473.93. Both these figures are up from the previous statement, indicating more hauling as a result of the latter being an increase of $1741.84 more in work done for the Town of Tofield and which was repaid. LAKESHORE

Mr. Graham made the trip to Cold Lake with Truman Jacobson last week and visited Ethel Graham there.

Mrs. Goeglein, Mrs. McConnell and Mrs. W. E. Seale were at Mrs. T. E. Seale's last Friday.

A number of people took advantage of last Friday's rare combination of good roads, fine weather and a free show, and thoroughly enjoyed the day no doubt of the John Deere Company.

That same evening quite a crowd went from this district to attend the dance at Fred Tedeman's.

Russel Pregenzer is up and around again after being quite ill a week or so since. Mrs. Pregenzer is also helping to do chores and get out wood while Russel was sick.

Many local people have made good use of our fine weather to get up bags piles of wood, and save the sawers are having their innings (or outings.)

Angelique Phillips entertained her young friends at a birthday party on Sunday. Angelique has not been well this winter, and we are glad to know she has not had to give up school or her good humor as it was first thought she might.

Mrs. Francs spent a couple of days in Edmonton with Mrs. Pryde's sister.

Miss Vivian spent the week end No. 68 Grain Growers.

Miss Nora Swanson stayed with Miss Ida May Evans for a visit last Saturday.

Mr and Mrs Arnold Stone and Mrs. Ed Stone motored to Vegreville on Tuesday we noticed Eddie Jr. wearing khaki. He is now a member of an artillery unit of the C.A.S.F. With Eddie, too, go the good wishes of the whole community.

On Wednesday, January 29th, Mrs. Gerda Hale entertained approximately fifty guests at a miscellaneous shower for the bride of a few weeks, Mrs. Charles Nienetz (nee Marjorie Ferguson.) After a few hilarious contests, in which some of the ladies distinguished themselves as sleepers in the art of the notesakes of stage and screen, a delicious lunch was served. A lovely full of lovely gifts, was then "rolled" in to the bride while her former school pals sang appropriate words to the tune of "Roll Out the Barrel." A recipe for the bride's cook book as well as best wishes for her future happiness were also given by each guest.

JOHN DEERE DAY BRING MANY TO TOWN

Favored with ideal weather, a large number from the surrounding district attended the picture show on Friday last put on by M. Hansen and Company. There was quite a diversified program including feature pictures as well as pictures dealing directly with farms, farm machinery, the operation and manufacture thereof. Tractors and combines and for that matter the manufacture of all farm machinery is big scale business to-day, and views of the different models working were very interesting. "The Three Bears" and "Mickey Comes to Town" were first class feature reels.

For anybody else to fill. We will mention a few however. Every one comes back, and we will all be very glad to see him come back, for to Lakeshore he is saying "let George do it" has a very real meaning. On behalf of the district Mr. Warner presented George with a wrist watch as a token of esteem from well wishes of the neighborhood, and Gilbert Phillips for the boys' group gave George a travel case and Gilbert expressed his thanks and appreciation of the kind words and gifts and the friendly thoughts prompting them.

The evening closed with the crowd singing "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow" and "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

Among the many who met at Abercrushy's on Tuesday we noticed Eddie Jr. wearing khaki. He is now a member of an artillery unit of the C.A.S.F. With Eddie, too, go the good wishes of the whole community.

KINGMAN

A Benedictum club is to be formed in Kingman district and the provisional committee is arranging a program to be held on Tuesday, February 18th in Kingman hall at 8 o'clock. The program will consist of several items of talking pictures including "Norway Sketches" unusual choirs and Benedictum music. Also in the program will be the Kingman choir and other vocals. There is no admission charge, but a silver collection will be taken, lunch will be ten cents.

The Luther League was held at Kingman last Sunday evening. A large crowd was present and the delegates for Luther League convention to be held shortly in Edmonton. On February 27, 28 and March 1st, are Merlin Ferguson, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. J. Hollis, Miss Ida Swanson and Vivian Christensen.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Sems had a daughter born to them on January 20th. Congratulations.

Kingman basketball team played at Kingman recently. The score was 36 to 20 in favor of Kingman.

Mr. Vinge will hold services in Kingman on Sunday, February 9th at 2.30 in the afternoon.

Miss Vivian spent the week end No. 68 Grain Growers.

Miss Nora Swanson stayed with Miss Ida May Evans for a visit last Saturday.

HASTINGS LAKE

Hastings Lake was surprised and saddened by the death of Spencer a neighbor, Mr. Hooper 1". was well known in the district and well liked. Though Mr. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Weshaka and Mr. Fontaine were among those who paid their last respects, it was the wish of many more that we could have been present. We extend to Mrs. Hooper and family the sympathy and well wishes of our district.

Sunday afternoon Steve Tough while riding a horse along the highway, had the misfortune of being struck by a car. The horse became unmanageable, dashing into the path of a car becoming entangled. He was struck a glancing blow, the door being demolished as being somewhat astonishing veterinary attention. It is reported Steve was thrown over the car and received what we sincerely hope will be nothing more serious than severe shaking-up.

Late Monday afternoon two of Mrs. Petersen's children, while sliding down the hill near their home were injured. Ivy Petersen 12 years old received cuts as soon as possible after the accident and was taken to the hospital. Just how seriously they were injured we have not been able to learn at this time. We hope to give a good report next time.

Having a go at the measles seems here now. Ivy Petersen is the latest to parts the past two or three weeks. Mrs. Ed Petersen reports that the epidemic now appears to be on the wane and things will soon be back to normal. A meeting of the school, which has been closed, will be held shortly.

Among the things for which Hastings Lake is noted is—entertainment At least that is the only explanation we can give for it. Recently I saw a model T under the skillful guidance of the master, Mr. S. Fontaine, demonstrating its ability to overcome the snow drifts. Ah! the good old model T, what memories it brings.

It boiled in summer, it froze in winter,

It coldent hit on feet,

It was a blessing to humanity,

Oh! we ashed for nothing more.

We are sorry we did not get around to the school meeting last week as we were unable to give a detailed account. We hear that Mr. Cleaver, the new school inspector is filled well on the school property was present and when carried out it will be a success.

Among those on the ailing list vicinity was our friend, Pat Weshaka. Pat has been under the weather though was the fact that he received a tonsure of flowers, a gift from his fellow club. What we are interested in is—how does he account for such a gift? The second thought being—he hasn't flowers after all, but some fresh instead. Would that make a difference?

It seems that Mr. Hoover contemplates a little building activity to the north of Tofield. A large pile of lumber has recently made its appearance on his farm. "If I wonder if it could be for a closed-in rink. Just have to wait and see I guess.

NEW MARKET FOR 40 MILLION BUSHELS OF WHEAT FORESEEN

Manufacture of power alcohol from wheat would create an entirely new market for 10,000,000 bushels of wheat annually, Cecil Lamont, of Winnipeg, representing the North-West Elevators Association, informed the National Emergency Committee at the meeting held in Toronto last week. Agriculturists, scientists and industrialists of Canada were represented at the gathering. A report covering the whole field of research into finding a profitable and insoluble use for farm products will be laid before the Dominion Government within a short time by the committee.

The Line Elevators' representative also stressed the possibilities of using substantial quantities of wheat for the manufacture of alcohol.

In discussing the possibilities of using new uses for wheat, Mr. Lamont said: "Reputable statisticians estimate that there will be a surplus of wheat in Canada at the end of the current crop year—July 31st—of approximately 317,000,000 bushels. The entire capacity of Canada's existing grain elevator storage facilities will be required to store the surplus stocks. Farmers will at that time be seeking a market for another wheat crop which will amount to approximately 400,000,000 bushels, depending on weather conditions throughout the growing season.

"With the exception of the British Isles, Canada's main wheat export markets have been lost, probably for the duration of the War. Under conditions of prevailing conditions Canada cannot hope to export more than 200,000,000 bushels annually. Exports of wheat and flour during the present crop year — ending July 31, 1940, to January 31, 1940, only 142,000,000 bushels — compared with 76,833,327 bushels a year ago.

"Between January 1st, 1937 and February 28th, 1940 Canada exported approximately 350,000,000 bushels of wheat per year, or 822,000,000 bushels in all. During this period was used for the manufacture of starch and also be made into power alcohol. Between 1926-1935 inclusive 1,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline were imported.

"The addition of a ten percent mixture of power alcohol, manufactured from wheat, to Canada's gasoline consumption would require 36,700,000 bushels of wheat annually. This would also result in increasing the octane rating of the ordinary gasoline by ten points.

"Under ordinary circumstances processing in Canada the manufactured of farm and fuel oil from wheat is economically feasible. However in the present conditions which World wars Canada faces today with her storehouses filled to overflowing with wheat, markets lost, and no demand for conservation of foreign exchange for War purposes and the 1941 crop due to be seeded.

"The North-West Line Elevators Association proposes that this body urge the Government of Canada to take steps to establish a Western Division of the National Research Council dedicated to finding new uses for farm products. It is further suggested that an Economics Division of the National Research Council to be formed. The function of this division would be to advise the Dominion Government on matters such as subsidizing the industrial utilization of surplus farm products, with particular reference to wheat and formulating means of

STORAGE PESTS ATTACK GRAIN

Grain stored in elevators and other large storage bins is being attacked still ravaged by a very destructive storage pest commonly called the Grain and Flour Moth. The presence of this moth is called to the attention of all farmers, since the same pests might befall grain stored on farms. They would do well to inspect their grain, particularly old or damp grain stored in large, poorly floored or improperly cleaned granaries, to see if moths are present.

To detect the presence of moths in a bin full of grain before considerable damage is done is difficult, but in some cases they can be identified by the greenish, musty odor that is produced by their operations.

Two very tiny, pale-colored, soft bodied, insect-like organisms do little damage in new grain stored with low moisture content or in cold weather. They require a temperature of at least 60 degrees Fahrenheit, and those which prevent in large numbers they may spontaneously arise any time temperature is below freezing. Some other operations tend to prevent their development, but they rarely are wanting. Little damage need be expected in small bins well ventilated or early summer, particularly in the northern part of the province. Due to their extremely small size and their rapidity of reproduction under favorable conditions, moths are difficult to control. Fumigation and sieving are the most common methods of practised. The most satisfactory control measures in moving or turning the grain. Fumigating or elevating infested grain from one bin to another is weather permitting, as it destroys practically all mature moths present. This does entail considerable labor, but it is the most important factor in keeping the moths from developing.

WAR AFFECTS CANADIAN FLAXSEED

There is considerable speculation as to the trend of Canadian flaxseed acreage in 1941, says a review of the flaxseed situation released today by the Pioneer Grain Company, Limited. Present prices in comparison with wheat are favorable, being close to the 2-to-1 ratio that is considered by many to be the most profitable relationship between the two crops. Other factors, however, if the government decides to place a limit on wheat marketings, may be looking for alternative cash crops. On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that the net fee flaxseed within Canada, through growing, has definite limits. When these limits are exceeded, Canadian flaxseed becomes an export commodity competing with the Argentine supplies of flaxseed. As recently as 1934-35, exports amounted to nearly 20,000,000 bushels. Production then was 19,000,000 and this country gradually assumed the position of an export importer. Imports during the last five years have included both flaxseed and linseed oil. The flaxseed position principally from the Argentine, while the linseed oil originated in Holland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Largest imports of flaxseed occurred in 1929-30, when 1,693,618 bushels were brought in and largest imports of linseed oil were recorded in 1934, amounting to 1,113,611 gallons, chiefly from Holland.

The growing in Canada reached its low ebb in 1935, when only 210,200 acres were sown. In 1939 there was a substantial increase to 597,100 acres and again in 1940 another increase to 967,100 acres was sown, the highest in a measure of self sufficiency. This increased self-sufficiency can be traced in the reduction of imports. Whereas Canada imported over 800,000 bushels of flaxseed from the Argentine between August 1 1939 and January 26, 1940, this year in the same period only 240,000 to which have been brought in, and the effect of the war against the Axis flax supplies is expected that the 1940 crop will amount to approximately 17,000,000 bushels. Canada's requirements of flaxseed for crushing purposes are estimated at 12,000,000 bushels annually. Exports of linseed oil for the same period were 1,000,000 gallons, chiefly to the United States.

Particularly sensitive to changes in underlying trade conditions, prices for Canadian flaxseed have moved over a wide range since the outbreak of war. At the end of August, 1939, just before the opening of hostilities, the price of 1C W flax, in store Port William, was around $1.20 per bushel. A month later, the upward surge of commodity prices had carried flax up to 50 cents per bushel. Following a short reaction, the upward trend was resumed and on April 11, 1940 cash flax touched $2.37½, having risen over a dollar a bushel in eight months. Then came the collapse and flax prices declined even more rapidly than they had risen. By the end of June, prices were back at pre war levels, and on September 27, the low point of $1.16½ was recorded.

At the beginning of November 1940, the trend was again reversed, flax prices beginning to show evidences of recovery from these low levels. Slow at first, the rate of advance gained momentum towards the end of December, and to new trading and much improved levels.

Moving surplus farm products from surplus areas of Canada to deficit areas of the country where they might be used as human foodstuffs or for industrial purposes, a Western delegation to impress upon this gathering that it is not sensible to place such burdens on the shoulders of the Government in War-time. The Government for the past ten years has assumed responsibility for the wheat problems which have faced the country. Our Association desire is to do all within its power to assist agriculture and the Government in finding markets for Canada's wheat". Mr. Lamont concluded.

A WANT AD BRINGS RESULTS

Will It Be Our House To-night?

By G.W.B.

Let me paint a picture for you. You are standing on your front sidewalk. Daylight has just come and the early sun is streaming its light through the roofs and chimneys of the city houses to the East.

Inside your home, your good wife is getting breakfast ready and your children are dressing for school.

You are very weary, and you know that your wife and your children are tired too, because all of you were awakened at one o'clock in the morning by the wailing sirens, which warned that enemy bombers were approaching. And all of you rushed to the bomb shelter you had fixed up in the back yard, there to huddle uncomfortably for three hours.

The peace of the morning seems unreal. You still hear the deafening roar of the exploding bomb which fell close while you were in the shelter, and the terrified cries of the young people of your family and your friends at stake, with such a constant threat against your property, the sum total of your life's work, you would count nothing to great a sacrifice.

Does somebody say, "Thank God that cannot happen in Canada?"

Can't it? Maybe not—if our Canadian boys and the armed forces of Great Britain hold out against Hitler in England. But let England fall, and it can and will happen in Canada.

No Canadian who pauses to think for a minute or two can fail to realize that the battle to the skies over England is being waged just as much for security of our Canadian home as it is for the British home.

With that realization, Canadians are not going to be callous enough to spend money on unnecessary luxuries and excessive pleasures—money which can be diverted to War Savings Certificates and smaller investments so badly needed to strengthen our defences.

Then survey your own home. There it stands, sheltering your own immediate loved ones as it has in past years. Your wife's new curtains hang prettily, even though the glass in front of them is gone. You wonder idly how much it will cost you to replace the glass, and your calculations are abruptly interrupted by another thought which makes your heart stand still for a moment:

"Will it be our house to-night?"

If such a picture were a reality, where would your inclination lie? Wouldn't you be thinking about steps which you must take as a Canadian citizen to thwart the effort of the enemy? Wouldn't you be hoping that our Air Force and Anti-Aircraft units would be stronger tomorrow than they were today? Wouldn't you be not only willing, but determined to give up every dollar you could lay your hands on to help make those units stronger? With the lives of your family and your friends at stake, with such a constant threat against your property, the sum total of your life's work, you would count nothing to great a sacrifice.

Does somebody say, "Thank God that cannot happen in Canada?"

Can't it? Maybe not—if our Canadian boys and the armed forces of Great Britain hold out against Hitler in England. But let England fall, and it can and will happen in Canada.

I Pledge

"I realize that Canada now calls on me . . . to join in a great National Savings Plan . . . necessary to win the war and vital to my own safety.

—that the gallant men of the Army, Navy and Air Force . . . now on the fighting front . . . need me on the financial front. They need munitions, material and equipment . . . and only by my money which represents the production of war materials can this support be secured. They are my possessors. They call on me to be their provider.

—that this will require hard work and many dollars.

—that only by hard work and frugal living . . . by LENDING all I can to Canada . . . can I do my part to help to win the war and establish our future security.

I Pledge— that I will forego the purchase of unnecessary articles . . . however small the cost . . . no matter how well I am able to pay for them . . . which else labour and materials may draw the great task of providing goods needed to win the war.

—that NOW . . . starting this month . . . I will put a definite part of my income aside in War Savings Certificates. I will have it deducted regularly . . . each week . . . each month . . . either from my pay envelope or from my savings account, by arrangement with my employer or my bank manager."

CORNHILL—

AS THE morning sun, rising, cast its light upon the Canadian West, it lights up a vast expanse of Canadian Prairie. In direct contrast to the crowded cities of the east, where factory chimneys belch smoke toward the sky and the clang of mechanism is continually heard, the gathering light falls upon an expanse of prairie, dotted here and there by signs of human habitation. Homes under the roofs of which people live, not in luxury but in quietness and harmony, brought about by the realisation that the older folk, now travelling the westward side of life's journey changed this country from prairie to fertile plain, and also, that to the younger folk is being handed a heritage, not without some drawback it is true, but a heritage just the same that has been rarely equalled in the world's history, except perhaps by the United States of America, to the south of us. As the people of the Canadian West, rise in the morning to go about their daily work, they are conscious, and rightly so, of government. They know that over all Canada is the Dominion Government, the problems of which are a vital concern of all Canadians. They know that there are provincial governments and they also know that there are municipal governments. As to the working details of each government unit, among the people generally, busily engrossed in their own every day problems, only a few become sufficiently interested to learn much. Even people who are quite well informed on many other subjects, whose mentsi processes can perform wonders to win a point of view, find it difficult to become sufficiently interested to really understand the various functions of government. We know this is so because we realize our own limitations in this regard. It is only when the word government is synonomous with taxes, as a matter of fact it really is, because a government is not likely to exist without some form of taxation. And it is quite likely that the general reluctance of people toward paying taxes is responsible for their shying away from a closer knowledge of government problems.

While it is of course quite all right for country papers to deal with national and provincial government problems, and some of them do so very ably, the country newspapers' real field of endeavour is within its own circulation orbit. Consequently while we are not without interest in those things which are happening in the dominion and provincial capitals, we are chiefly concerned with those things which are happening within the geographical boundaries of the Municipal District of Cornhill. In a municipal district we have "government" as close to the people and people as close to "government" as it is possible to find anywhere. Even though the power of municipal government is not absolute, this closeness of contact does tend, or at least should tend, to create a feeling of good will, a desire to work for the common good and a sense of responsibility among all those concerned.

At this season of the year, partly due to it being an off se'son on the farm and partly due to annual financial crops of the preceding year being published, there is a little more interest in municipal affairs than at other seasons when farmers generally are more busily engaged. Rural municipal ratepayers' meetings are always held in February and generally speaking, interest in municipal affairs reach a high water mark about this time Ans to the affairs of the Municipal District of Cornhill there is very little to be said editorially. The meetings have, we believe, been reasonably well reported, every payment made has been recorded a week or so after it was made, and if being made acquainted with every item of important business the council did is true democracy, the rate-payers have had democracy as far as M.D. of Co.hill is concerned. As a reporter, the editor of this paper has sat through practically all of the council meetings, always listening but rarely ever speaking. We know from this experience that there is a multiplicity of problems to be considered, those affecting individual persons and those affecting the municipality as a whole. We know that the minute a councillor is elected he is caught between two fires. There are the ratepayers who desire so much to be done for them and those who clamor for a reduction of taxation and councillors quickly learns that it is impossible to do both, so settles down to do the best he can for all, approaching each separate piece of business with an open mind. We believe, on the whole that Cornhill Municipal District has been well served as regards councillors. We do not mean that a mistake or an error of judgement has never been made, that would be expecting too much, but we do mean that as councils come, Cornhill would lose nothing in comparison with the best of them.

God give us men! A time like this demands
Great hearts, strong minds, true faith and willing hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill,
Men who the spoils of office cannot buy.
Men who possess opinions and a will,
Men who have honor, men who will not lie:
For while the rabble with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Wrangle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and waiting Justice sleeps.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Savage, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The Dominion Government will soon be considering the wheat policy for this coming crop. What should the Government do? My own personal opinion is that the Government should purchase the entire crop whatever size it might be.

There will be a sale in Canada and abroad for about 340 million bushels, requiring a crop of 395 million, on the cost to the Government will only be for ounces. If any, over 395 million bushels.

Should there be an excess it would, of course, add to the size of the present surplus, but my own belief is that this would be a great blessing, for it is far better to have an abundance, even a super-abundance of wheat in Wartime, than to run the risk of a scarcity, for no one can foresee the future. We once had six years of drought — may have it again. Nobody knows how much wheat will be destroyed by grasshoppers.

And then there is a higher ground. The Allies and humanity are facing a blockade on Europe. Only a few one believes, a moral responsibility to store up enough wheat to feed the blockaded hungry people as soon as peace is made.

RED CROSS BENDS PARCELS TO WAR PRISONERS

Approximately 28,000 Red Cross parcels of food are being sent from Canadian, prisoners of war in Germany have been shipped from the Toronto depot, and 18,000 of these are by their way overseas, Dr. Fred W. Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, reported yesterday.

The parcels are sent from New York on American export liner to Lisbon, where they are taken over by International Red Cross representatives who guarantee their safe delivery to the prisoners. The parcels go to Marseilles on a Red Cross ship which is permitted to pass through the British Blockade. They are then put aboard a Red Cross train bound for Geneva, and their destination to the prisoners is handled from this point. About 2,000 of the food parcels for which left Toronto recently are to contain a sufficiently balanced diet Canada Red Cross supplies to Europe.

The parcels of food, each of which to last a prisoner a full week, are being packed in Toronto at the present time. The original output of the depot, which has been open four weeks, was 4,000 parcels a week, but the machinery has been speeded up to increase that number. The Canadian Red Cross is supplying the food at the direct request of the British War Relief Society, and each of these lines in Britain has been hampered by enemy air-raids.

Edmonton, February 2.—With road reports already spotting the route of the proposed chain of air bases from Edmonton to Alaska, more than a party of federal engineers will shortly go north to work on the fields required for the construction of the Inland Route. Contracts for work on construction of the air bases are at present under consideration, is reported.

TEND TO TRAVEL TO PACIFIC COAST

Montreal, Que. January 27.—Many hundreds of residents of Eastern and Central Canada who assembly bond south when the cold weather sets in, have to seek a winter resort at home because of the restrictions on travel to the United States occasioned by war conditions. In view of these circumstances, reports received by the Canadian National Railways indicate that the trend to travel this winter will be westward to the Pacific slope of British Columbia via the Jasper National Park route.

The Pacific Coast region has been rightfully named the "Evergreen Playground" and visitors to Vancouver and Victoria soon learn of the mellowing influence of warm currents which serve to maintain pleasant temperatures throughout the winter months. For the remainder, golf is available on links playable the year round, while for anglers, steelhead trout and tyee salmon abound in the inland and coastal waters of British Columbia.

PLANS FOR OAT HULL SEPARATOR

Plans giving instructions for the construction of a home-made oat hull separator are available from the Agricultural Engineering Department of Agriculture, Edmonton. These plans were designed by Mr. [illegible] Swine Promoter of the Live Stock Branch, Department of Agriculture, through the courtesy of Mr. W. Wyllie of Warburg, who is using one of the machines now in use.

The cost of the separator is very small and it is easy to construct, almost wholly from materials which can be found on nearly every farm.

The use of sifted chaff, or screenings, up until they are three and one-half inches long, is recommended by all swine authorities. Not only do young pigs make better gains and grow more rapidly on sifted chaff, but they are less liable to be affected by digestive disorders which are caused by feeding a ration too high in fibre. Since ordinary oat chop contains a great deal of fibre, it is highly advisable that farmers raising hogs should obtain these plans and build the little oat chop separator to remove the hulls from their oat chop before feeding it to the young pigs. Full instructions for the construction of the hull separator are included with the plan.

The Week In Edmonton

Meantime, sentiment wide interest in the Inland Route through Alberta has been aroused. Advantages of the Alberta route are cited as economy of construction and maintenance, availability to Fort Norman and Athabasca fuel and rural oil reserves, nearness to other construction material and to agricultural and mineral wealth of the Peace and the North West. Most important advantage cited is that because the barrier of the Rockies, the highway is protected from air attack.

DEVILLE

On Sunday, February 2, 1941, Peter Ward's "Deville Lynxmasters" champions of the Cooking Lake—Deville Hockey League played the Minitoh team at the latters' home rink. The final score was Minitoh 4, Deville 2.

Deville opened the scoring in the first period with climax of a pretty passing play between Morrow and Dunn, Dunn rifling home the goal, which ended the first period scoring.

Deville made it 2-0 early in the second period when Morrow scored a "dipsy-do" shot from practically centre ice, which completely eluded the Minitoh goalie.

Minitoh, lagging badly, suddenly came to life, scoring their first goal late in the second period, then with the cheers of a rooting home crowd still in their ears, tied the score at 2-2 and so ended the second period.

In the third period Minitoh took command of a fast tiring Deville team, scoring two more goals to make the final score 4-2.

F. Wdowicki and Gruelle were outstanding for the Deville team, Wenlake, Tough and R. Rowland performed brilliantly for the Minitoh team. We have no report of the Minitoh scorers.

Lineup of teams:—

Deville. Grulle, Clark, Dunn, F. Wdowicki, J. Wdowicki, Morrow, Subs: R. Ward, H. Ward, V. Todd.

Minitoh: Wenlake, Tough, R. Rowland, S. Rowland, R. Swabey, L. Calis, Grunnell, S. Baumgartner. (Some players unknown.)

The Cooking Lake School has been closed for a week, owing to the prevalence of measles in this district.

Francis Donald, a local boy, well known around Tofield, has just joined the newly formed Henry Armer Brigade, and probably by now will be in Camp Borden, Ontario.

Most of the neighbors are putting up their ice on Hastings Lake, so be careful, fishermen, and watch where you are going, or you may get a free "Finnish Bath".

Annual Ratepayers' Meeting Lively Affair

Nominations for Councillor, Division One, A. J. Anderson, Thos. G. Gibson.

Division six, Guy O. Walker, elected by acclamation.

Election for Division One will take place at Kingman on Saturday, February 22nd.

The annual ratepayers' meeting of Municipal District of Cornhill from a slow start, developed into a lively affair. A. C. Dodds, returning officer was on hand to open the meeting at the usual hour. The meeting was opened by Mr. Dodds and after the election of a chairman and secretary, adjournment was made so that those present could attend the funeral of the late Mr. Piper.

At three o'clock the meeting was reconvened and Mr. Anderson, pro-tempore chairman called for nominations for chairman for the whole meeting. Messrs Harrison, Schultz, Johnson, all in turn were nominated but declined and finally Mr. Ingvald Neso was persuaded to retain the position until the end of the meeting.

The minutes of the previous annual meeting were read and on motion by H. Schultz, adopted.

Mr. Harrison asked what had been done regarding the motion last year that the councillors accept responsibility for the circulation of Bovine Tuberculin for local Area petitions.

The meeting was informed that thirteen one and six were ready well signed up but there was no information regarding the other divisions.

Mr. Harrison moved that the incoming council be requested to continue the work.—Carried.

A question was asked regarding the new M. H. O contract.

Reeve Wilker explained the new arrangement.

A rather lengthy letter from the War Savings Committee was then read. This letter had been mailed to the office with the request that it be read at the annual ratepayers' meeting and committees appointed to sell savings certificates. Nominations were called for, but before any were made the increasing crowd made adjournment to the curling rink necessary

Re-opening the meeting at the curling rink, Messrs. Dodds, Anderson, and Swabey were amid other nominations and withdrawals, formally nominated.

Before these nominations were put to the meeting, Mr. Oulton moved that the whole slate of councillors act as a committee to sell war savings certificates. This resolution carried.

Mr. Oulton asked for information regarding items listed under Health in the financial statement. He was of the opinion that Cornhill paid too much for this purpose. A very lively discussion ensued in which many took part. This subject was discussed off and on throughout the history meeting. The general tenor of the discussion was difficult to put into written notes, the speakers jumped from topic to topic so quickly, but it could probably be best described by using the words of Mr. Simonson who "agreed that the doctor business needs revising."

Mr. Gibson asked what was the standing of the people who are served by the $660.00.

Mr. Dodds thought the district should have a list of indigents.

Mr. Glenn, former reeve offered to throw light on the question. He said that in 1922 the council settled doctor bills at 50 per cent and paid $1700.00 to $1800.00. In 1933 they made a contract for $1300.00.

Mr. Oulton took exception to the 10 per cent discount allowed on taxes for 30 days during mid-summer. He felt this was of little use to the ordinary farmer who did not have money at that time. He moved that council be asked to allow 10 per cent on current taxes until December 14th. The motion carried.

It was explained by J. Letourneau that the object of the 10 per cent discount was to raise money at a time when collections were few and expenses, due to road work, heavy. It was simply a question of allowing the ratepayers 10 per cent discount on the district paying interest on borrowed money.

The meeting then adjourned.

The funeral of the late Mr. C. W. Piper was held on Saturday last, services being held in the United Church, Rev. D. E. Allan officiating. There were a large number of neighbors present to pay their last respects to a valued and respected neighbor.

Mr. Piper had passed away last Tuesday while enroute to hospital at Edmonton The cause of death was a stomach within the head.

Mr. Piper was born in Tennessee and in his young days was in the United States Army serving for some time in the Philippines. He came to Tofield in the early twenties and quickly became known as a jovial pleasant individual whom everybody liked to meet. About 14 years ago he was married to Mrs. Geo. Whyte and of the union there were three children, one boy, Walter 13, Gladys 12, and Ruth 5. There are also some relatives in the United States.

Mr. F. W. Piper from Collierville, Tennessee, came up by plane and arrived in time for the funeral. The three children returned with him to Tennessee.

The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful.

Pallbearers were: W. C. Bilman, C. R. Burchard, Ed. Kallal, Pete McAllister, Stan Shaeffer, J. R. Warner.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMIC CLASS HOLD VALENTINE TEA

On Monday afternoon, February 17th, the Intermediate Household Economic Class under the organization of Miss Isabel Robinson held a Valentine Tea. Each student invited her mother and a friend. Also present were the wives of members of the school board and the lady teachers. It was encouraging to note the response — there were over sixty in attendance. The Misses Joan Isaac and Evelyn Campbell were hostesses; Miss Kathleen Borland and Miss Miriam Seale poured tea, assisted by Miss Jean McClymont and Miss Stella Birdar. They were assisted by the Misses Betty Webb, Dorothy Tiedeman, Elma Stinson, Alberta Janet, Jean Stinson, Francis Hardy, Helen Burke, Dorothy Stevenson and Mary Corbin. On behalf of the visitors Mrs. Brace thanked the class for providing such a pleasant and surprising afternoon stating she had no idea such work like that was being done and that the youngest ones could cook so well. Miss Isabel Robinson, Household Economic teacher, suitably responded thanking the visitors for their attendance and assuring them they were welcome at all times.

"HOME BAKING" PROGRAM IN AID OF RED CROSS

On Wednesday, February 19th the Calgary Power Company showed their "Home Making" program at the Variety Theatre. The program was divided into two parts. First the showing and the explaining of new electrical lamps. The most interesting of these were the fluorescent and the different types of ray lamps.

The second part of the program dealt with the lighting problems in the home. Many useful hints were given as how your lighting problems could be improved upon. After the program many beautiful prizes were distributed among those present. All proceeds were donated to the Red Cross.

CARD OF THANKS

On behalf of the children and myself I desire to express my very sincere thanks to all the friends of my departed brother who so kindly assisted us in our sad bereavement. Coming from a considerable distance the genuine kindliness of the people of Tofield and district will be a treasured memory.

LINDBROOK

The dance held in the hall last Friday night was a very successful affair, both for jollity and also from the financial aspect too. The proceeds being used to add to the hall's funds. The music was of the best and was provided by the 5 piece Kossek Orchestra. The M. C. was Mr. Chas. Morden who ran things very nicely A lunch was served at mid-night, and everything as usual was a big hit The attendance was exceptionally large, so it seems as if our hall is a very popular place to come to, so be sure to attend whatever function is put on there, it will be worth your while.

We have no advance reports on the condition of the two Peterson children as imagine that as the old saying goes "No news is good news".

Maybe on second thought we had it's ought to use that phrase, for you may say, "You're mad it," referring of course to our little column, still we'll chance it.

Miss Lassoie of Rosalind, Alta. accompanied by Miss Mae Lepine of Edmonton visited their relatives Mr. and Mrs. W. Fontaine of Lindbrook, this last week.

The icy condition of the roads made travelling rather awkward these days carts performing figure eights, horses protesting that they aren't hockey players etc.; and then the chorus of cussers (no, the frogs haven't started yet, its humans this time, who keep on breaking the doleful refrain "We'll have to pay for all this fine weather later, etc.". How the dickens do they know? Even the meteorological service and ye bloomers sometimes end they're supposed to be experts.

HASTINGS LAKE

Well, well, here it is time to push the old pen again and it seems as though we had just laid it away. We thought there would be some good news this week — but of another reporter, — but no such luck. So it appears that the attention calls for a little more paliness on the part of our readers.

Dubervius the news is little more cheerful. Vern Patterson is now at home and little Norman is expected back in a week or ten days. We are thankful the accident did not prove to be more serious than it was.

We are also pleased to report that Barve, yard aiding foreman at the "J. T." ranch is around again although not quite his usual self.

The farewell dance in honor of Duncan Tough and Chris Campion was well attended despite short notice as the boys had to answer the big-call early the following morning. Owen Hoover drove them to the city as soon as the dance broke up. Miss Olwyn Hoover and Miss Ruby Anderson pleasantly surprised the gathering by coming down for the evening. Here's hoping that none of them are sound sleepers.

Surprises and surprises. On the evening of the eighth, if we are not greatly mistaken, the home of Mrs. Ellis was the scene of a surprise party and the victim, pardon me, was Mrs. Ellis herself. The occasion was the anniversary of her — birthday. Any omissions in the foregoing are due to censorship and are entirely beyond our control.

A guest of Mrs. Fontaine's for the past few days was her cousin, Miss Lorraine Lincoln. Accompanying her was Mrs. Fontaine's sister, May Guy Donald is another of the boys from this district to don the uniform He has joined the Southern Alberta Regiment.

We hear that Stanley Donald has been returned from overseas due to his health and is at present a patient in the University hospital "Dutch" Donald who also had enlisted is back again in civilian clothes also due to health reasons. Better luck next time boys.

Cyril Hoover has completed his term of training at the Youth Training Centre at Vilna and would like to put some of his knowledge into practice.

Should this issue by out in time the much postponed Social Credit binge and dance is scheduled to come off on Friday the 21st at the school

Last Friday evening the school was the scene of a social evening and get-to-gether in the form of a whist drive, sponsored by the Ladies' Club in aid of the Red Cross. In view of the low admission charged, the sum of $5.75 which was realized was very good. Mr and Mrs. Fountaine took the first prizes in their respective classes and — well can you believe it? Miss Doreen Ellis and little brother Neil walked off with the consolation

TOFIELD CURLING RINKS BRING HOME PRIZES FROM HOLDEN

Rinks skipped by Everitt and Yabluski, old well at Holden. Yabluski was 2nd in the Grand Challenge and 1st in the Victory competition. Everitt was first in the Utilities competition.

This has been an excellent curling season, Tofield curlers both here and away have enjoyed the games to the limit.

Brice's.

It was a big night for the bachelors. The well-to bachelors and the bachelorettes in general. Just imagine an evenings entertainment, a chance to win a prize and a feed — and such a feed — all for ten cents! Of course no one outside of the Ladie's Club would ever think of sponsoring such a program. We are right proud of the ladies of this district, certainly there is none to compare with them anywhere. Why if it wasn't for them the men would have starved to death years ago, (they are mighty thin as it is). Possessed of noble character and high ideals of pleasant disposition, courageous, energetic, considerate—why this is only a beginning. Myself? Well old boy if that doesn't help your standing your case is hopeless.

British Find History Reassuring

From Christian Science Monitor London:—The average Englishman does not usually take much interest in history after he leaves school—and sometimes not even before that but in these stern days the people of this fortress isle are reading their history with relish and enthusiasm. A knowledge of the past quickens their morale and sharpens their confidence.

Many persons have been recently surprised, and somewhat gratified, to learn that their country has been in the past 1,000 years, faced invasion more often than the United States has had to encounter two attempts, and appears to have emerged as pretty good order.

The fact that this island has been possessed by powerful foes on an average once or more every 100 years is apt to make history interesting for those who built behind hastily improvised wire barricades and heard strong points Consequently daily newspapers, periodicals, and publishers are turning history into a best seller.

Memories of Napoleon

"Invaders have tried every 100 that he faced William on the slopes years: Hitler should give a thought to the others" is the headline in a London evening paper. A foremost illustrated journal also takes up the homble the proud island. Everybody story of invasions in somewhat earknows the story of Drake and the lier vein, reminding its readers in a Armada. It is one of the greatest sob-hushing. "None successful since sieges in Britain's history. So badly 1066," and publishing not only interesting pictures of towers built to mankind by the fury of defenders and counter Napoleon's threat and secret tempest that the people of England weapons built by the French to make thought themselves safe from another landing on Britain less difficult, but long measure of time But the Spaa detailed map showing numerous niards, who had come to wish to points at which enemies have at- thought they had only to gain the tempted landings, each point being French machine and they would gain marked with an arrow and a legend Ireland too telling of the fate which befell the Spanish armies took Brittany and invaders.

In Piccadilly a goodly trade has awaited the sellers of history in the form of a reprinted handbill from the time of Napoleon's threat to this country Early last century a been recalled. Another fine number of broadsheets were published by Mr J Ginger at 100 Piccadilly, who believed the public too easy going in their of Napoleon's enamoring in their attitude to Napoleon and opposed to them often to take the matter seriously.

Mr Ginger gave his readers this handbills cost eighpence a dozen) a detailed account of Napoleon's preparations and urged everybody to join either one of the regular services for at least "some volunteer corps, where we may learn the use of arms and yet attend our business"

Although the invasion planned by Napoleon never eventuated, and Mr. Fairgrounth and threatened the whole

Two Invasions in 1066

Those who are peddling history a little more seriously than usual these days of something else they have forgotten, the fact that in 1066 there were two invasions, not just one. The first was successful, and the second brought William the Conqueror to the throne. It is however probable that had King Harold not had to encounter two almost simultaneous invasions from different fronts he would have remained unbeaten, for he was no mean general. When Norway's sole or more every 100 years Norway's sole or more every 100 years he kept in make history interesting for king Harold defeated them decisively on the banks of the River Derwent only to learn, three days after this victory, that another invader had landed in the south of the country. Harold had to hasten southwards, without resting, to enforce his arrangements and it was with a tired army

Invaded "By Invitation"

One hundred years after the defeat of the Armada England was invaded "by invitation" by William of Orange. Only two years after that, it was invaded again, this time without invitation, by the French—who managed to beat the English fleet and gain command of the Channel. The French anchored in Torbay, burned Teignmouth and threatened the whole

Four Presidents of The Canadian Pacific Railway

The four presidents who have guided the destinies of the Canadian Pacific Railway company since its birth sixty years ago have been men whose courage and ideals are reflected in the high type of service given to the people of Canada and in the growth of the company in this country.

Lord Mount Stephen, the organizer; Sir William Van Horne, the builder; Lord Shaughnessy, the developer, and Edward Beatty, the modern executive, succeeded in that order to the presidency of the company, possessing great love for Canada and great hopes for her future, but differed vastly in character and abilities but each seemed born for the particular task he was to be occupied while in that particular problems of his time with the ability and strength of will to discharge his duties faithfully to company and nation.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company was born on February 16, 1881, when the Government of Sir John A. Macdonald authorized the building of the transcontinental line, and was officially organized two days later. Since that day the company and nation both developed from infancy to prosperity and strength. Each has been largely responsible for the growth of the other, sharing the same ills and long years, cooperating for the mutual benefit of Canada had to have a transcontinental railway and gave a private company approximately $77,000,000 to build one to unite the Canadian Pacific Railway provided the line helped populate the prairies, provided sixty years of the highest standard of service and in the same period paid approximately $372,000,000 to the last penny, within the Dominion.

WESTERN BUSINESS PROSPECTS REVIEWED IN LIGHT OF WAR

Viewing Canada as a whole, the war has had a tremendously stimulating effect upon business, says the Pioneer Grain Company, Limited, in a review of business conditions reviewed today. The national income increased to dollars was largest in 1940 than in any year since 1929. The first sixteen months of war witnessed the largest absolute increase in industrial employment and production that has ever been recorded in Canadian statistics within a comparable period.

Predominantly an agricultural area, and greatly dependent upon wheat, the Prairie Provinces have not experienced as marked an improvement in business volume since the outbreak of war as have more industrialized parts of the country. Nevertheless, a good deal of improvement has taken place, attributable in the main to a succession of good wheat crops marketed on a guaranteed price basis; to increase returns from subsidiary agricultural pursuits; to rental by a high level of activity in the important mining, manufacturing and construction industries in the three provinces.

Looking ahead to 1941, business in the Prairie Provinces is likely to be influenced by two major influences, the Pioneer Review points out. First are the special circumstances surrounding agriculture. Income received by farmers from the sale of wheat during the first year of 1941 will be unusually large, because of the heavy stocks remaining on farms at the beginning of the year. The government has guaranteed to accept delivery of these stocks before July 31, 1941. After July 31, unless the underlying trade situation is changed in the meantime, farmers income from wheat will be determined in large part by government policy. Arrangements as to price, delivery quotas, farm structure and acreage will be of particular importance.

It is reasonable to assume that income from farm products other than wheat will continue to increase during 1941. The Canadian Wheat Board will be the sole purchaser of specified quantities of bacon and cheese, and the internal market for foodstuffs should expand still further as the national income continues to grow.

The second major influence will be the trend of developments in the field of secondary manufacturing, and other industries located in the Prairie Provinces. A considerable expansion of output has already taken place, due to war expenditures and increased industrial spending, but there are solid reasons for believing that these industries will play an even more important role in sustaining Prairie purchasing power during 1941.

WAR AND RESEARCH THE CALL TO ARMS

(By B. Leslie Emslie)

The effect of the war on scientific research may be the result of much speculative comment. Even though results of experimental research pertinent to the Rowett Institute which has a considerable staff of research workers engaged in the study of vitamins and mineral supplements in animal and human nutrition, may not be of benefit from the special reduced rate of 12 cents a pound (weight limit 11 pounds) on parcels mailed by Canada, according to a announcement from the Postmaster General today.

The low rate of 12 cents a pound (limit of weight 11 pounds) applies now on parcels for overseas mailed from Canada addressed to the following:—

Members of British, Canadian Dominion or other Canadian troops serving in the United Kingdom or in places outside the United Kingdom.

Members of the official Auxiliary Services in the United Kingdom.

Members of the Forces of General de Gaulle serving with the British Forces in the United Kingdom.

Members of Belgium, Polish and other Allied Forces serving with the British Forces in the United Kingdom.

Personnel of H. M. Ships and H.M.C. Ships abroad.

Note: The rate on parcels to members of the Canadian Army on duty in Newfoundland is 10 cents a pound (Limit 20 pounds)

Nurses attached to Units of the above Forces are classed in the same category as soldiers for postal purposes and are entitled to the respective special parcel post rate.

THE RATEPAYERS' ANNUAL MEETING—

THAT RATEPAYERS are genuinely interested in the doings of their municipal district was fairly well proven on Saturday when a fair crowd turned out to the ratepayers' annual meeting. Of course the number present was only a small per centage of the whole, but there were ratepayers present from widely separated points.

There were several features of interest regarding the meeting, apart from those questions directly connected with Municipal District affairs. There was the opening and almost immediate adjournment until later in the afternoon, due to the funeral of the late Mr. Piper. It will be remembered that Mr. Piper attended ratepayer meetings for some years past and the minutes of the previous meeting showed that he took an active part in the meeting. Another feature of the meeting was the chairmanship of Mr. Ingvald Ness. Mr. Ness is quite a young man and we venture to say that when he left home he had little idea of being chairman of the meeting he was going to attend. He made an exceptionally good job of what at times was not an easy meeting to handle, what with nominations and withdrawals and more nominations.

Coming strictly to Municipal District business there were two main items at which criticism was leveled. The first was the payment in 1941 of $500.00 per annum for services as Medical Health Officer and services to indigents. This arrangement dated from April 19th, 1940 to April 19th, 1941, and is not included in the 1940 financial statement, the reason being that the motion was passed at the January 1941 meeting of council. The circumstances, exactly as we understand them, leading up to the passing of this motion are as follows. It will be remembered that prior to March 13th, 1940 the doctor was under contract as M.H.O. to the municipality at $1600.00 per year. This was considered by a number of ratepayers and some of the councillors as being too high a figure. It should be said that by law, the municipality is bound to pay for the necessary medical attention of those bona fide residents of the municipality who are unable to pay for the services. During the discussions around the $1,600.00 contract, the doctor submitted a list of names to whom he had given professional services for the past twelve months. The amount was over $5000.00. The result of these discussions was that a committee was appointed to deal with the whole M.H.O. question. A formal report by this committee was never made because before it could be made, Dr. Law had announced his health insurance scheme, enlisting the aid of the councillors to make it a success in their respective divisions. At this time it was understood that the health insurance plan would eliminate the necessity for further payments to be made. At the March or April meeting Dr. Law requested an extension of the $1,600.00 contract for one month to allow time for the health insurance contracts together with the fees to start coming in. This was granted. During the summer meetings the doctor announced on one or two occasions that he was rendering services to indigents and without being too specific suggested that some arrangement be made concerning it. No action was taken however and the matter with the exception of an occasional mention just drifted along until at one of the late fall meetings the doctor arrived to state his case just after the meeting had formally adjourned and the councillors were leaving. It was then too late to do anything and only a short general conversation ensued. It was apparent that Reeve Walker (who incidentally has never mentioned the subject to us, or have we mentioned the subject to him) was becoming a little worried. Above all he did not want a flock of doctor bills to descend on the council, neither did he want to be responsible as to whether a call should be answered or not. At the January meeting the matter was called to a head meeting on another matter and the question of payment for services rendered to indigents was reopened. Dr. Law requested that he be paid the 25 per cent of regular rates or a round sum of $500.00 per year. The council desiring to know where they stood accepted the $500.00 offer. Asked when he wanted the contract to date from the doctor replied: "Anytime, April would be all right." Consequently the contract was continued on from the expiry of the previous one.

In spite of the fact that there is a distinct social advantage in having everyone assured of medical treatment whether they can afford to pay for it or not, we think that in the past at least, in this municipality it has been over done. We mean by this that too large a sum has been paid by the municipality for service to indigents and apparently too little paid by individual families for medical services rendered.

At the time and on the face of it, it appeared to be good business. Previously there was a continual jangle between council and doctor over accounts and a $1200.00 contract looked a great deal

Money Is Needed

BY HON. J. C. BOWEN
Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta

An all out Canadian war effort, requires every citizen to do voluntarily what the totalitarian states have compelled their people to do by force organization, that is, to use the common strength of the nation for a common purpose. We too, must learn to serve, and to forge every ounce of energy around a single end, that of winning the war. The time has arrived when we must designate ourselves so that each citizen with all his mental material and physical strength, will willingly contribute one hundred per cent to the national effort. We must serve, every one, according to his or her full capacity to free humanity and to destroy Hitler and his evil works.

We entered this war to a free nation, in so doing we declared our readiness to make every sacrifice necessary to achieve victory. Voluntarily we have given up our rights and liberties as free citizens in order that democracy might live a mighty war pass to destroy a machine and system, which threatens the very fundament of all that we held dear.

We must do more. We must support the organization of the country, by supplying the government with the sinews of war. Money is needed. No Canadian dollar must be sequestered in idleness while our brith ren are fighting in "blood, tears and sweat" to save humanity from slavery and ruin. This is no time to enjoy ease and comfort at contribution to the war. It is imperative. But much needed, and needed now by the people of this country, and to be done quickly and generously. Money, and money now. No Canadian dollar must be withheld from the national treasury.

Much has been and is being made to the people of this Dominion, an appeal to lend their money to Canada for the duration. Every citizen old or young, may make his or her contribution and share equally in the purchasing War Savings Certificates. Savings so invested are a pledge of our loyalty to the Empire. Our own dollars we shall keep faith, and in return receive approximate the maturities spirit of the men, women and children of beleaguered England.

Mr. Churchill has declared that "Without victory there is no survival" . . . . In the present day and ancient life; of personal freedom, as the survival of the right to work out a man's destiny and to help his children to theirs, no survival to do his duty to God and as neighbor; no survival of the wholesome things of life, of love and happiness, nothing to save humanity from servitude and degradation.

The utmost of the financial resources of the Canadian people will be required to meet war demands and failing on the nation. By comparison; what are the sacrifices we are asked to make to those being made by the heroic men and women of England? Think of Dunkirk. Think of the gallant men of the navy, and air force, and of the army on guard ever watching for the invader. "Never was so much owed by so many to so few" is Mr. Churchill's graphic phrase in appreciation of the personnel of the R.A.F. Long night flights, in cold and storm facing ruthless beams of search lights and the pitiless shock of bursting bombs, on they go these tireless men; sometimes in shattered planes over cold inhospitable seas, wounded and maimed, but back to their bases. How shall we match this heroic devotion?

We are asked to back the heroic effort of those who for us, are suffering the fury and blasts of Hitlerdom. We may not have large amounts of money to lend, but we shall put behind our effort, a spirit that shall glow through the gloom that now enshrouds the world, and by united efforts we shall destroy for ever the despotic power which now grips and rebuild the temples of man's freedom, and establish truth and justice upon foundations that shall not soon be moved.

PIG LOSSES HEAVY

Stressing the importance of proper feeding and care of young pigs, Dr. T. L. Jones, animal pathologist of the University of Alberta, told a farmers' meeting at Innisfail that of 1,000,000 pigs born in Alberta in the first six months of last year, 394,000 were lost through improper care. A common cause of death, he stated was the feeding of cut bulbs.

CHANGE IN ADDRESSING MAIL FOR TROOPS OVERSEAS AND CANADA

Postmaster General Honourable W. P. Mulock announces that owing to the recently authorized change in the title of the Military Forces of Canada, the designation "Canadian Army" will now be used instead of "Canadian Active Service Force (C.A.S.F.)". Mail for soldiers on active service should, therefore, now be addressed as follows:—

Mail For Delivery Overseas:

The designation "C.A.S.F., c.o Base Post Office, Canada" is to be omitted and the words "Canadian Army Overseas" substituted therefore, as follows:—

Regimental No., rank and name
Name and details of Unit (i.e., Company or Section, Squadron, Battery, Holding Unit, etc.)
Name of Regiment or Branch of Service
Canadian Army Overseas.
For Example—
R—12927, Pte. John Blank,
"F" Company,
Seaforth Highlanders of Canada.
Canadian Army Overseas

1st Anti-Aircraft Regiment,
Royal Canadian Artillery,
Canadian Army Overseas.

M—54321, Signm. John Smith.
No. 1 Company, 2nd Div. Signals,
Royal Canadian Corps of Signals.
"F" Company,
Canadian Army Overseas.

Note If a soldier is overseas the word "Overseas" must appear in the address but no place name.

Mail For Delivery in Canada

The usual particulars — regimental number, rank and name and details of unit and name of regiment or branch of service, and, in addition, the Post Office name of the place in Canada where the soldier is stationed, must be given.

For Example—

C—12968, Pte. Joseph Wood,
No. 7 Field Bygone Section,

Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, Debert P.O., N. S

C—12345, Gnr. John Jones,
15th Heavy Battery,
Royal Canadian Artillery,
Saint John, N.B

Note; If a soldier is in Canada, the name of the place at which he is for the time stationed must appear in the address

The regimental numbers and names given in the examples are, of course, fictitious and are merely used to illustrate the correct method of addressing mail.

Until such time as the new method of addressing becomes generally known, mail bearing the designation "C.A.S.F." will as heretofore be delivered to destinations but the public should come hastily ask the new method when addressing letters, parcels and other mail to members of the Canadian Army either Overseas or while stationed in Canada.

THE RATEPAYERS' ANNUAL MEETING—

better than a $1700.00 doctors' account jangled over piece by piece. And quite likely the councillors who made this agreement believed they were doing a good stroke of business for the ratepayers. The raise to $1600.00 was made on the claim and assumption that the work had increased to such an extent as to warrant it. We feel that $1200.00 should have been the limit, but again the council was faced with the choice of a $1600.00 contract or a larger amount paid out piecemeal. So while we believe payment for medical aid to indigents was overdone, we hesitate to blame anyone for the simple reason that we firmly believe had the severest critics of the councils of the past few years been on the council themselves, faced with like circumstances, they would have done pretty much the same thing. But this is really past history and is only written so that every ratepayer if he or she desires may have a complete and full understanding of the situation.

Coming then to the $500.00 contract passed at the January 1941 meeting. We believe that both the doctor and council, were just spring, under the impression that the health insurance scheme would eliminate the necessity of any further 1940 payments for medical services rendered to indigents. There was no definite understanding, but the impression was certainly given that in return for the assistance given by the councillors in working up interest in the health insurance plan there would be no indigent charge to the municipality. Putting it another way we believe that the councillors felt that in working up interest in the health insurance scheme they were rendering a service to the ratepayers rather than rendering a service to the doctor.

There is no good reason why any doctor should be expected to indefinitely render services to indigents without receiving some remuneration. While no doubt the law, making municipal districts responsible for medical attention to indigent sick, was designed primarily for the patient, it was also recognized that the doctor had some interests also, that he could not be expected to render service unless he receives payment. The questions confronting the municipality are: what is a reasonable amount when considered in terms of a round sum? or: is it better to pay piecemeal? No one can answer those questions without accurate knowledge as to the amount of medical services to indigents required. However before this is considered it should be clearly understood that there is no official connection between the health insurance plan and the municipality. This plan is purely a business agreement between the doctor and those people who sign the contracts. There are quite a number of people who did not sign, some of them for no other reason than that they did not have the required fee, and it is these people, who, if they are sick and are unable to pay the doctor, the municipality has to take care of. There are at the present time between 40 and 50 old age pensioners within the municipality. Their income is meagre and their advanced age makes makes them prone to sickness. We have no way of judging what would be a reasonable lump sum for the municipality to pay the doctor for necessary services to indigents. The only other M. D. statement we have on hand right now is that of Vale No. 382. Last year they paid $184.55 for doctors, but their estimated population is less than a third of the estimated population of Cornhill and their receipts from municipal taxation was also about a third of Cornhill's. The Town of Tofield pays a salary of $150.00 to the M.H.O. The population is about 500 about a seventh of Cornhill's. Giving the question due consideration we feel that $500.00 is not too large a sum to pay a M. H. O. for Cornhill. We have always felt that $1600.00 was. Moreover we believe that if accounts were paid piecemeal, the amount would be larger than $500.00. One clause of the contract, namely the date at which it commences, could we believe be modified. Many ratepayers really believed that the signing of the health insurance contracts would eliminate the payment of M. H. O. fees. Many of them were told that. So if the contract was dated from January 1st, 1941 instead of April 12th, 1940, there would be little real cause for complaint on the part of anyone.

There was a note sounded by one ratepayer at the meeting that could with profit be mentioned. Mr. Dodds said that too much emphasis should not be placed on the dollar and cent aspect of this matter, there was the humane side of it. He was quite right. It would be better to err on the side of liberality and give assistance to those in distress than be too niggardly and allow suffering to increase. At the same time one should not be led to believe the medical profession is also the considération of financial matters. Little more than the exercise of common sense is required. As to answering the call of the sick there are none better and few doctors as able and willing to back country roads in summer and winter as Dr. Law.

And this is where we are going to leave the question. Many at the meeting were so at sea regarding it that we felt, even at the risk of becoming tiresome this article should be lengthy. We do not expect to return to it.

An epidemic of German measles is sweeping the district, and school attendance is taking a new low. Poles See Hunger As "New Order"

By Ann Cardwell In The Christian Science Monitor

New York—Germany's "new order" for Europe has come to have a very specific meaning for the conquered Poles. For them it means letting no one feed, clothe or empower them the average person cannot buy these is a severe dearth of schools and even the choice of learning is denied to Poles under the new order.

When the Germans entered Poland it was announced by Nazi officials that the newly acquired territory would become a proving ground for the "new order". Today the nature of this order is emerging.

Food prices are five times what they were in normal times. Meats, fats, butter and milk are virtually unobtainable for Poles unless bought illegally in such cases prices are so high few Poles can buy.

Last summer Warsaw's parks, squares, and grassed courts of cities was seized into plots of 400,000 square meters to a family for gardening. Half the allotment had to be pledged to potatoes, the rest to cabbage, carrots, beets, onions, tomatoes, and cereal were required, in which, project organized and directed by this one Polish welfare organization permitted to function.

Causes of Shortage

The shortages of food, according to the best being of persons recently arriving from Warsaw and other parts of the "Government General" portion of former Poland, is due to two causes: Shipment of large quantities to the Reich and reservation in Poland for the Germans there.

In the spring, harvest quotas were set for every peasant and landowner. In due seasons these had to be turned in at the co-operative. The Germans used the Polish co-operatives as their collecting agency. Persons concealing any were considered the best way of getting rid of it. Many of the peasants executed by privately-owned food output. Many farmers burned their produce and grieved their meat rather than allow it to be confiscated.

To be able to purchase even a loaf a Polish farmer must have a permit from his co-operative showing that he has turned in the quota required; otherwise he can get nothing in the way of food and farm supplies.

Clothing is rationed and presents as great a problem as food. The most prized things in Poland are garments still about. No one may buy more than one pair and that pair must be built every year. Poles are wanting woolen shoes and their clothing has become a familiar sight. Shoemakers may not use leather when making repairs.

Problem of Housing

Shelter is another acute problem. The German air attacks destroyed about all over Poland but these have been practically no rebuilding. The Government General normally had approximately 12,000,000 inhabitants. Now increased by refugees from western and eastern Poland it has 18,000,000.

Warsaw's pre-war population was 1,200,000. Now, although 2" per cent of the city's buildings were damaged or destroyed and 25 per cent reduced to debris that had to be removed, it houses 1,800,000. Yet nothing is so easy in Warsaw as finding a place to live. Few can pay any money, they crowd together. Villages are likewise overpowered. Manor houses are full to overflowing, life on the land being the only existence left to Poles.

Of security there is none in Poland. On any pretext a German uniform may arrest a Jew or a Pole; arrest, the occupants, confiscate the property or both. The collective clauses are also arrested simply because they belong to that class: young people, born in the Germans fear their opposition; middle-aged men, having money, they coveted

HEALTH, VARIETY AND PALATABILITY FEATURES OF LAMB

Health, variety and palatability are three features associated with lamb as a meat, Dr. W. C. Hopper, Economics Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, pointed out in an address to the recent annual meeting at Toronto of the Ontario Sheep Breeders' Association.

Dr. Hopper has recently completed a study of the consumption of the various kinds of meat in three representative Canadian cities: Saint John, N.B., for the Maritimes; Montreal for Central Canada, and Vancouver for the West. The completion of the results of the study discloses that the annual average consumption of canned meat per person in cities visited considerably, and that more information on the food value of stewing pieces of lamb and the best methods of cooking them was required. The interesting fact was discovered that high income families bought more stewing lamb than low income families. This is contrary to what might be expected because stewing pieces are usually cheaper cuts, but especially low income families are not aware of this fact. Butchers in Ottawa suggested that they could pay higher prices for lamb carcasses to the producers if the consumers knew the food value of lamb fronts and stewing pieces.

In Montreal where beef, veal, and bacon are used in large quantities, 50 per cent of the housewives admitted that the reason they did not buy more lamb was because they knew little or nothing about lamb cuts and how to cook them. In Saint John, more than 10 per cent of the housewives gave the same reason. As most people dislike admitting their ignorance on any subject, said Dr. Hopper, this actually is a subject on which there should be a research on which that these figures are conservative. Therefore, educating consumers about lamb cuts and how to cook lamb so that it will be an attractive and appetizing meat should result in an increased demand for this kind of meat.

Among the 602 representative families in Saint John, 17 pounds of lamb per person per year were used: Montreal households, 8 pounds per person and Vancouver households 14 pounds per person. There was close relationship between household income and purchases of lamb in all three cities, the families on relief, and with per capita incomes (household income divided by number in family) of less than $500 a year used about 10 pounds of lamb per person per year, while families with per capita incomes of $900 or more used about 20 pounds per year. With increased employment and higher wages, the demand for lamb in 1941 is likely to increase, according to Dr. Hopper. If sheep producers wish to increase the consumption of lamb in Canada, the survey showed, they will have to advocate the medium and low income families to buy more of this kind of meat and to stress the food value of the cheaper stewing pieces.

DONATES ADVERTISING SPACE TO DOMINION GOVERNMENT

For the most all months the Brewing Industry of Alberta has offered its entire advertising space in the newspapers of Alberta to the Dominion Government. This patriotic offer has been accepted by the Hon. J. L. Ilsley on behalf of the Government and the newspaper advertising space will be used in the campaign to recruit in War Savings Certificates. In his acceptance of this offer, the Minister of Finance thanked the Brewing Industry of the Province for the Government of Canada and termed it "a very generous and patriotic offer."

PEAT'S CERTIFIED POTATOES TO GET BEST PRICES

Tofield is fortunate in that disease and poor quality in the table potato crop of Canada is going either the canning house or the processor, states John Tucker, Plant Protection Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

One big mistake the table potato grower sometimes makes is to think that any potatoes of good appearance will make good seed tubers. That is not the case, for apparent soundness of the tubers constitutes no guaranty of freedom from disease. Many potatoes may satisfy virus diseases which cannot be recognized in the field, but which nevertheless seriously affect the yield and quality of the crop. The only way to be sure of seed that is reasonably free of these troubles is to buy certified seed.

Certified seed is potatoes that have been grown by growers of seed for purpose. They are of good type, from vigorous plants and are true to variety. They have been inspected during the growing season for diseases, and must conform to definite seed standards both in the field and after harvest. Official tags are issued by inspectors and are attached to bags or other type of label carries official recognition of seed potatoes. If the official tag is not on every container of potatoes purchased for seed, they are not certified seed. When bags of seed or the tags are missing, if in doubt more than regular table store prices, a demand for a sample should be made. You may get only a table potato with no reliable knowledge of its origin. They are free of virus diseases.

Certified seed is grown in the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and in providing the service of seed potato certification is to make available for the whole potato industry a sufficient quantity of pedigreed, high quality seed annually to meet all prospective demands, and at reasonable prices. This is considered the most practical and economical way of dealing effectively with many of the types of diseases that are responsible for the heavy losses in commercial crops. Other countries are aware of this fact. Butchers in Ottawa suggested that they could pay higher prices for lambs carcasses to the producers if the consumers knew the food value of lamb fronts and stewing pieces.

Obviously there is no use in disease and poor quality in the potato crop of Canada when only one bushel in every ten bushels planted is of the certified seed standard. The first step forward towards producing better table potatoes is to plant certified seed. They are sold locally by most of the potato dealers and shippers in Canada houses, or may be purchased from the seed growers direct. Lists of growers are obtainable, free, from the Plant Protection Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, or from the local District Seed Potato Inspectors located at Charlottetown, P.E.I., Fredericton, N.B., Ormstown, N.B. Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, Que., Guelph, Ont., Indian Head, Sask., Edmonton, Alta., and Vancouver, B.C.

PAGEANTRY IS BANNED WHEN WAR SESSION OF LEGISLATURE LAUNCHED

Edmonton, Feb. 21—In the shadow of the great struggle now engulfing nations and in full realization of the responsibility of a representative on the part of the people of Canada and the province of Alberta, the Legislature of Alberta assembled at this noon, the sixth session of the fifteenth legislature, special Alberta ceremonies were formally opened at 3 p.m. Thursday by His Honor Honorable Grant MacDonald.

With every desire of appreciation of the serious situation now confronting the country and with an earnest desire to economy, opening ceremonies were bereft of customary colorful ceremonial. Only the barest formalities necessary to set the session in motion were carried out. The whole proceeding reflected the gravity of the world situation.

Not even the lights in the buildings were lighted in honor of the home opening ceremonies from the private residence to the legislature, with an escort of city police.

Promptly at 3 p.m. R. A. Andrews, clerk of the legislative assembly, rose and read the official proclamation calling the legislature together. With the proclamation read, Mr. Speaker Acheson rang solemnly, opening ceremonies were brief, of customary colorful ceremonial. Only the barest formalities necessary to set the session in motion were carried out. The whole proceeding reflected the gravity of the world situation.

Then Serg.-at-Arms Neil McInnis ushered several of His Honor's Lieut. Gov. Bowen, who arrived with Honorable Grant MacDonald. Lieutenancy retinue of senior military officers, Dress Parade were Lieut. Cmdr. E. P. Ellery, officer commanding the Edmonton unit of the R.C.N.V.R. Lieut. Fry, air Navi. D.C.M., and Capt. Phillips, secretary to His Honor.

Following the appointment of Hon. Wm. Chalmers Tofield to the Speaker's Bow, as Speaker, the lieutenant governor read the speech from the throne. The name of Mr. Dawson was then submitted for Speaker.

First business of the session was the introduction of legislation dealing with the Speaker's salary, which will be $1,000 a month, and the Speaker's allowance, which will be $500 a month.

Premier Manning moved that His Honor's speech be taken into consideration and that it be printed.

A further motion followed that the session adjourn until Tuesday, March 4th. This was followed by a motion that the session adjourn from Wednesday next for the session and that a committee of five members be appointed to the same the said proposal. Then moved adjournment of the house until 2:30 p.m. Friday.

The speech from the Throne, a document of about 1,800 words, declared that there will be no increase in burden of taxation on the people of Alberta.

Rigid economy will be practiced by the government during the coming fiscal year, states the speech.

It further sets forth that new petroleum and natural gas regulations will be established to encourage further exploratory work and development, which will result in much greater activity and should lead to increased production of these fuels.

Extension and improvement of the province's highway system is also promised.

New measures for easing the situation of those burdened by debt are to be introduced.

There is fewer than 30 new members sitting in the legislature at this session. There are 32 missing from the last legislature in the newly elected house, which will convene on March 31, that was responsible for the drastic clearance of many old faces and disappearance of the new. Of the new members nine are Social Credit, 19 independents and one Labor.

Of the 32 members in the new house who sat in the old, 20 are Social Credit, three Independents and six Liberals.

The radio distribution bill made operative by the last session of the fifteenth legislature was reduced from 15 to 12 seats. Social Credit has 36 Independents 19; Liberals one and Labor one.

All members were present at the opening save Capt. J. H. Trembath, Liberal, Grouard, who is on active service overseas with the Edmonton Regiment and C. L. Bayers, B.C. Canoe who left recently to take his seat on Monday, March 3, following completion of formalities of his by election February 6

WILLKIE HEARS PLAN TO RAISE MORALE

Bristol, Feb. 12—Wendell L. Willkie, before leaving this much-bombed city for the flight back to America, heard a first-hand account from the lord mayor of his progress to strengthen civilian morale to withstand the heavy air attacks of the last months. The popular visitor from America expressed keen interest in the campaign for Moral Rearmament, which the lord mayor had launched to strengthen this vital part of national defence, and took a short record of it with him when he left.

Bristol papers, reporting Mr. Willkie's visit, pointed to the great work being done in this regard by the lord mayor and by the Right Hon. Dr. Temple Archbishop of York. The article in Bristol Evening Post reads: "Through the heavy rain yesterday Mr. Willkie drove to the Council House. The chimes were more brightly, in the evening sunshine of the British version with our American cousins, quickly made the message of war conquering nations bent on world domination. The vital importance of furthering understanding and mutual high endeavor with the great American people is increasingly realized. Great work is being done at this end by the lord mayor of Bristol.

In November last, 50,000 posters, "Britain—How Yes Can Play Your Part," were issued from Bristol, as well as extensive displays of its text appearing in the press and elsewhere. Every home in Bristol received a copy of this poster.

The Week In Edmonton

With the Throne Speech debate occupying most of the legislative picture during the week, there was not much time for major legislation. Nevertheless some minor acts of importance have been introduced.

* * *

The debate itself followed closely along pre-determined lines, some trivial complaints & provides members of both sides an opportunity to defend or to assail, usually at length, prevailing government policies. Prior to its daily resumption the introduction of minor bills goes on, and on the days pass interest in the main event, the Budget, grows keener. It is fervent that this year Alberta will have an economy budget.

Edmonton's new aircraft overhaul plant, now being constructed in connection with the Commonwealth Air Training scheme, will cost the Federal Government $170,747, according to Ottawa reports. Completion is expected within a few weeks, when Mackenzie Air Service will assume its direction of the undertaking. It is expected that 300 men will be employed in this, the greatest repair depot of its kind in the west.

Men with mechanical experience are popular today. The army wants them, and the air force too. So do eastern industrialists and manufacturers in the west. Now the navy has loosed a call. Any motor mechanic with three years experience in internal combustion engines may leave Alberta almost immediately on enlistment at the naval barracks, 9725, 103rd Street, Edmonton.

Declaring that if the farmers' grain is to be kept a centralized storage for two or three years the growers' equity will be eaten up in charges, Hon. D. B. MacMillan urged in the legislature this week the establishment of farmers' subsidies, such as other industries enjoy. Stating that the Alberta government's plan for grain storage tickets had not been adopted, he and the federal authority had discriminated against the western farmer.

The Alberta-Alaska chain of air bases now under construction was planned by the permanent Canada - U.S. joint defence board, it is understood. Prime Minister King gave the Commons this information Tuesday. Bases named are Grande Prairie, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson, Watson Lake, Whitehorse Primes Georges and Smithers. All fields will provide ground and navigation facilities. Several such are to be found at existing airports suitable for major traffic

BRITAIN TO TEST WHEAT GERM PLAN

Lord Woolton, Britain's food minister, has arranged to test the claims made on behalf of a Canadian flour-milling process for retaining the whole germ of the wheat kernel.

Researches conducted by the British government's chemical laboratories showed white flour was deficient in many vitamins, especially those of the "B" type. The government then arranged for a certain percentage of flour from Canada, and elsewhere, the bread from which is called "Enriched" bread.

Now the scientists in Canada, the United States, New Zealand, Australia and other countries have been conducting researches to find a way of introducing the desirable vitamins into white flour. Ordinary baker's bread at present contains a good the international units of vitamin B. In order to give the quantity which nutrition experts say the human body requires this should be increased to 1,000 units. If the plan is a success of the natural wheat into the white flour is successful it will mean much more flour from less wheat.

Recently a trade department spokesman at Ottawa said the British government is assisting that flour from Canada is fortified by the addition of vitamins. He has the same properties as the natural vitamin B1.

SPINACH GOOD FOR YOU

The popeye jokes about spinach aren't funny without foundation, judging by a chart recently issued by the Ontario Department of Health, which shows spinach is still the most generous source of iron for human dietary. A mere half-cupful of the cooked vegetable will supply one fourth of the daily quota needed by a grown-up, and one third of that necessary to an adult.

However, as few children—or adults either for that matter—are so fond of spinach that they can eat it every day, other sources must be found. Prunes are about the next best bet. Five of these, cooked, yield about half as much iron as does the half-cupful of spinach.

A dried pea and baked potato, a slice of cooked meat, an egg or a glass of milk are all of about equal value for each yielding about one tenth of the daily iron supply.

Raisins are good, too, but they're a long way below spinach in the GOOD seed is the first requirement for an excellent crop . . . because only good seed will grow vigorous and productive plants.

Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes are good seed potatoes. By planting them, higher-quality, cleaning shingo more uniform potatoes than those grown from ordinary seed stock will be produced.

So, this season, to harvest finer potatoes — and more of them, plant Canadian Certified Seed.

Be sure to select the variety most suitable for your locality. Ask the District Government Inspector, Plant Protection Division, for full information and list of nearest distributors.

War Saving Campaign

By Hon. J. C. Bowen, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta.

As all our Dominion war effort, every citizen is a problem and largely what it contributes or states depends completely upon the individual organization to do by one to another. "Let me help you to go far," Mr. Churchill says, the picture in appreciation of the [illegible] of the R.A.F. Long night flights, in cold and storm facing ruthless beams of search lights, and the [illegible] of barrage bombs, as they go these heroines meet; sometimes in shattered planes over cold [illegible] seas, wearily returning to their bases. They stand on mutual help. Their heroic devotion?

We are asked to back the heroic effort of those who fly for us, sacrificing the fury and blasts of Nazi tyranny. We may not have large [illegible] at our disposal, but we shall [illegible] behind our effort, a spirit that will go through the gloom that [illegible] the world. By our [illegible] we will destroy Europe's [illegible] and tyrants of Europe [illegible] to their own [illegible] and [illegible] truth and justice upon its relations that shall [illegible] to mend.

TREAT FOR WARBLES

The spring is the only time of the year when treatment for warble flies is effective. When the warble lumps are conspicuous on the backs of cattle apply warble fly powder.

The treatment is simple, effective and cheap. It is done as follows:

1.—Brush the back of the animal with a stiff brush to remove the crab over the warbles.

2.—Prepare the warble fly powder according to directions and apply it to the back, making sure some of it enters the breathing holes and comes in contact with warble grub.

3.—Repeat the application as often as a new lot of larvae appear.

There are a number of reliable warble fly powders on the market which are satisfactory, but to assist herd owners to treat their cattle for warbles, the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture will supply at cost warble fly powder in 24 lb. lots to groups of farmers.

Enquiries should be sent to the nearest District Agriculturist or direct to the Live Stock Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Warbles cause losses in several ways. Among these are:

3.—Carcasses showing grub wounds are discounted.

4.—"Grubby" hides are cut in price by at least one cent per pound.

The use of the warble fly powder will save herd owners many dollars every year. Treatment on a concentrate basis is best, but individual herds may be treated with satisfactory results.

THE GUN HAS BOOMED—

AROUND THE coasts of England during the winter months, quite frequently severe storms occur. In the days of transition of deep sea vessels from sail to steam there would be frequent shipwrecks, sometimes with loss of life, but always with a degree of human hardship and sense of duty mixed up in the episode. To cope with this danger, there is a national lifeboat service which include hundreds of lifeboats the crews of which, picked sea faring men, stand ready at all times to launch their boat and risk their lives so that other lives may be saved. Lifeboat men are volunteers and generally live at home with their families and a favorite means of letting them know that their services are needed is the firing of a fairly large gun. When a lifeboat man knows that the gun has boomed, he had but one purpose in life, to don his equipment and take his place in the lifeboat. Everything else makes way for that. When the signal has been given and the life boat hauled to the water's edge, if there are any bystanders around, all pull on the rope. Laborers and dudes, land lubbers and sea faring women and children, if there is room and there are any there, will help pull the boat down the runway and across the sands.

The gun has boomed for Tofield.

Last Friday night at a meeting to organize for the sale of war savings certificates, only six persons appeared. It is quite true that due to unavoidable reasons the announcement of the meeting was very brief and quite a number of citizens had already made previous arrangements for Friday evening before the announcement appeared. But even so, 25 would have been a conservative number to expect. To make it worse, the reason of the few that were there didn't mesh and the meeting was pretty much like a stalled machine. It wasn't so much that those present were not willing to do their share in advancing the sale of savings certificates, all of them were; it wasn't that they disagreed on anything, there was perfect harmony and a full realization of the urgency of the matter; but some how or other the meeting didn't click and while a half hearted attempt was made at forming a committee, it was found more wanted to stay off than go on. The stumbling block seemed to be, more than anything else, a reluctance to undertake anything that could not be successfully accomplished. Mr. Craig, a worker from Edmonton who was present, outlined the boundaries of the district which it was hoped would be supervised by a main committee here and canvassed by a number of sub committees, and this outlined district is quite large. To properly cover it considerable voluntary labor will have to be enlisted.

To those present the meeting was not a success and another meeting for the same purpose is called for Monday night, March 10th at 8:00 p.m. The meeting will be held in the Tofield Town Hall.

Hundreds of communities across Canada during February staged very successful War Savings Certificate Campaigns. Citizens of Tofield and district are no more deaf to the call of personal saving, one can hardly call it sacrifice, than are the people of other districts. What is required is a rather extensive and intricate organization that will permit of a house to house canvas of the whole district. If you have constructive ideas along this line be sure and come to the meeting and present them.

The government of Canada has asked for the loan of a part of the people's money in order to help carry the war to a successful conclusion. The security is of the best, the interest rates are fair. Nowhere in the world today is there a better country to live in than Canada and only a few as good. Surely it is good business to preserve citizenship in a good country by loaning dollars in that country. The government is asking for the loan of a few dollars from those that have them, a very moderate request, but at the same time an urgent one.

NEW PROFITS GO FOR TAXES—

THE WALL Street Journal printed, the other day, detailed earnings of some large corporations in 1940. The reports of two of the largest companies General Motors Corporation and E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., show some interesting things:

General Motors' total earnings (before taxes) rose by $32,000,000 in 1940, but taxes increased by $80,000,000—with the result that only $12,000,000 more was available for distribution to shareholders than in 1939. The amount which General Motors had to provide for taxes out of 1940 earnings was nearly three times the sum that had been necessary in 1939.

The du Pont company returns show the same trend. Although its earnings from its operations and its security holdings in 1940 were $37,000,000 in excess of 1939, its federal taxes increased by $33,000,000. And after the sum of $10,000,000 had been set aside for certain contingencies, there was actually $6,000,000 less to distribute to stockholders than in the previous year.—Des Moines (Iowa) Register.

LARGE SHIPMENTS OF BACON TO BRITAIN

With the expansion on October 31, 1940, of the first 15-month bacon agreement between Canada and the United Kingdom, two striking facts stand out in Canadian bacon history, states H. H. Loehin, Economics Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in the February issue of the Economic Annalist. The first is that on and after January 29, 1940, the export of Canadian bacon was carried on through a single administrative body, the Bacon Board, set up by the Dominion Government to supervised seaboard delivery of the product to the British Ministry of Food. The second is that, under this arrangement the volume of production cleared from Canadian ports in the twelve months commencing November 1, 1939, totalling 331,266,000 pounds, exceeded the high record for any recent calendar year by almost 140 million pounds, and this under wartime conditions.

RED CROSS FOOD SHIPMENTS TO BE INCREASED

The parcels of food for British prisoners of war in Germany which the Canadian Red Cross is shipping overseas, will soon be increased from 10,000 a week to 20,000. The British Red Cross has requested the Society in Canada to double its shipments. Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner announced today. To accomplish this, the Red Cross in Montreal is preparing to pack 10,000 parcels a week to keep pace with Toronto's figure.

The first allotment of 5,000 parcels, despatched last month, has reached Lisbon safely according to a cable received from Colonel Gault, International Red Cross representative there. These will be forwarded immediately to Germany. Certificates for distribution in German prison camps. The number of parcels packed in Toronto to date totals 48,000 and this figure is being increased at a rate of 2,000 a day.

FLAX SEED PRODUCTION

Farmers may substitute a limited wheat acreage in 1941 by growing flax seed. Those who are planning to put flax into spring have a choice of two recommended varieties for Alberta. The Alberta Zonation Committee recommends Bison for zones 1 and 2, that is the southern prairie west to the foothills and north to the park belt. Redwing flax is recommended elsewhere.

Bison is a good yielding, will resistant variety. Redwing is early, strong strawed, will resistant and a fairly good yielder.

Flax requires an even, moist, clean, firm seed bed. The seed should be in a good state of till and the crop should be sown no deeper than is necessary to cover the seeds. Rates of seeding generally run from 25 to 40 pounds per acre. The seed should be clean and sown early. Early seeding usually gives the highest yields.

Farmers who wish to sow flax seed in 1941 should endeavor to secure their seed early. The 1940 crop is being marketed and seed stocks will have to be preserved from this source for any increased acreage in 1941. There is an increased domestic demand for flax seed.

Due to the high quality of Canadian flax seed there is also a definite export demand to the United States.

A satisfactory price is anticipated, but there is no indication that exceedingly high prices for flax seed should prevail.

URGE EXTENSION ALBERTA ROADS

Extension of the system of road signs in this province is to be given further attention this year.

With the bituminous surfacing of main highways having been largely extended, especially on main tourist routes, it appears that development of a permanent system of road signs is required.

Last year tourists found that numerous signs had been placed on the Jasper-Banff scenic highway, previously of questionable value, but thousands of tourists who come in from the United States.

Now it appears that a strong effort will be made to have the picture of prospect shots on provincial highways extended. Provincial officials have recommended that they work out in a position to go ahead with a general road signing scheme until the routes of highways had been permanently established

The Alberta Motor Association has made strong representations from time to time in advocating adoption of a proper road signing scheme for Alberta. This has been taken up with officials of the public works department.

With the anticipated increase in tourist business this year from the United States, there is a greater need for adequate road marking. These visitors are accustomed to properly marked highways.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY IN 1941

Speaking to the Alberta Dairymen's Association Convention in Edmonton in February, Mr. John Freeman of the Dairy Products Board outlined the possibilities for the dairy industry during 1941.

The cheese contract with Great Britain provides a market for 115,000,000 pounds, or about 10,000,000 pounds more than were shipped in 1940, and it is estimated that butter will be increased in Canada in 1941 by about 10,000,000 over the 1940 figures.

Changing these requirements into the milk equivalent, it is clear that about 500,000,000 pounds increase in milk production in 1941 over 1940 can be used advantageously for increased production of cheese and butter The increase in cheese production will come largely from Ontario and Quebec, while the greater part of the increase in butter production should be in the prairie provinces.

This information suggests that producers should do all in their power to increase the production of their cows. By feeding proper rations and by growing good pastures, the yield of milk can be maintained throughout the summer months. No opportunity should be lost to improve the low per cow yields with better milkers

Under the terms of the Department of Agriculture at Edmonton, maintains a number of services that will assist producers to increase the returns from their dairy cows.

RECRUITS UNDER FOUR MONTHS' PLAN WILL RECEIVE ACTIVE ARMY PAY

Reserve recruits training under the four months' training plan will receive the same rates of pay as privates in the Active Army, namely $1.30 per day. Dependents' Allowance will also be paid on behalf of the recruit during the period of training at the same rates as those for the active army contingent upon the recruit assigning not less than 15 days' pay monthly to the support of his dependents, and other conditions laid down in the regulations.

The Week In Edmonton

Debate on the Throne speech ended and the motion of acceptance carried, legislators turned to the War Savings campaign during the week and spirit was spurred over the wording of a resolution endorsing the national effort. Speeches were made, an amendment was defeated, and eventually the government resolution was upheld, with the opposition group registering disapproval.

Warning farmers to make sure that feed supplies for the ensuing year are adequate, Hon. D. B. MacMillan minister of agriculture, suggested this week that seed requirements for barley growers be filled as early as possible. "With favorable prices for live stock, every farmer should obtain his requirements in his own community before coarse grains are shipped out of the province in any time." This was, he said, in view of the dominion policy of assisting eastern farmers to obtain feed in the west.

Giving a detailed account of his stewardship with finances, known in an effort to refund Alberta's bonded debt, Hon. Solon Low told the legislature during the week that "While one plans have not yet materialized, it should be remembered that no province as yet has refunded which fact gives more justification to suggest effort was made to explore every possibility." He told members that it was hoped to receive negotiations shortly, after their having been delayed owing to the war crisis.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

I suppose it holds at the record-breaking standard varieties of wheat from 1939 and 1940 "Crop Testing Plots" and official governmental trials have recently become available. They show most interesting results. One surprising thing is to find how Reliance, the latest product of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, has won up to the top class.

Throughout the West, on the average, Reliance is superior to Regent yielded slightly more than any other variety closely followed, however, by Thatcher, Renown and Apex, and out of the race even in Saskatchewan by Marquis, for Alberta, Regent was close on the heels of the high yielding varieties Marquis, Red Bobs and Thatcher.

The most all be a source of considerable gratification to the plant breeders and other workers of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory who produced Regent. We are informed further that the varieties, Regent, Renown, Apex and Thatcher, will be still further improved year by year as newer Registered strains become available.

There are, of course, differences in yield in the various varieties in different districts. To find the varieties commended by country elevators," the Line Elevators' President said.

HUGE STORAGE BINS TO BE BUILT AT HEAD OF LAKES

All country elevator companies operating in Western Canada have joined in a plan for providing upwards of 50,000,000 bushels of temporary terminal storage space at the head of the Great Lakes", according to an announcement made by A. C. Reid, President of the North-West Line Elevators Association. "Utilizing Grewers, Pool and Line Elevator Companies have united in the plan to relieve the congestion of boat on the prairies."

Plans for the erection of the huge storage units have already been drafted and material for construction is now being ordered. Preliminary work of building the bins will be under way almost immediately", said Mr. Reid.

Erecting of temporary terminal storage will relieve existing congestion in country elevators and will enable farmers to market the balance of their 1940 crop as well as to make space for the 1941 crop. The providing of this space to enable the balance of the current crop to be delivered will mean the placing of many more millions of dollars in farmers' hands."

"Elevator companies have already erected approximately 20,000,000 bushels of storage space in the form of temporary annexes connected to country elevators," the Line Elevators' President said.

Bees And Honey In Alberta

The 1940 season was a disappointing one for many Alberta beekeepers. The average production per hive was only 101 pounds, as against an average annual production of 138 pounds for the last eight years.

From the standpoint of total amount of honey produced in Alberta, the results were not so bad. In spite of the low average, a little more honey was produced in 1940 than in 1939. The explanation for this is to be found in the large increase in the number of hives in the province. In 1939 there were 18,000 hives of bees; in 1940 there were almost 24,000.

The marketing of Alberta's two and one-quarter million pound honey crop was not a difficult problem in 1940. A number of factors were responsible for this, the chief amongst these being the fact that Canada's 1940 production was about 20 per cent below normal and the United Kingdom took some three million pounds.

In reviewing the question of future honey marketing, emphasis must be taken of two possibilities.

First, that Canada is likely to produce more honey in 1941 than she produced in 1940, and secondly, that there is a necessity for some sort of arrangement for goods going over-seas. Canada might be unable to ship her normal quantity to the United Kingdom. This means that domestic markets will need to be stimulated in order to assure that production does not exceed consumption by some six million pounds which would be equivalent to approximately half a pound per person in Canada.

THEY ARE GENTLEMEN"

The obivalry of the English character never received a higher tribute of honor than in that casting moment when the Italian campaign in Africa were preparing to flee from their desert bases in the trunk of the Italian soldiers who were retreating before the swift advance of the British army. Marshall Graziani raised his hand and brought their agitated flight to a stand still. "Stop! Stop! where you are, without fear" he commanded. "The English will do you no harm! They are gentlemen."

BOOTS FOR THE WAR

New British Tannery Supplied Leather for 400,000 Pairs a week

Britain's sole leather tanners in pre-war days, are now busier by almost one-half in order to maintain the supply of 400,000 pairs of boots a week for the services. There was at no time any shortage either of these; of boots and shoes for the home market and for overseas; or of leather for export.

Sixty per cent of British sole leather is now tanned from imported hides.

Last year they were safely shipped to Britain from more than sixty overseas ports.

Large consignments were received from the Empire which is a witness of possessors forty per cent of the world's Hemlock and from the Argentine where there are usually 60, 000,000 cattil in the hoof.

The war time achievement of increasing by fifty per cent the only leather produced from the raw hides was brought about partly by intensifying the methods of production and partly by a scheme for regulating about the probable demand.

There are now some idea of the amount Bessons are now being granted for British sole leather made to specifications to suit the varying climates of its different markets.

Will Soil Wear Out?

The answer to this question, was answered methods of crop production are followed.

Four years ago, the Department of Soils of the University of Alberta made a study of the nitrogen and humus content contained in cultivated soils and neighbouring virgin soil at 25 widely separated points in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In this study, the four major soil zones chiefly dark brown, brown and gray) were represented. In each of these soils, a virgin and a cultivated, the black soils had lost 19% of the total nitrogen and 21% of the humus matter. The dark brown soils lost 22% of the nitrogen and 26% of organic matter The loss in seven soils determined to 38% of the nitrogen and 37% of the organic matter The gray soils, naturally less fertile than the others, were found to have lost 25% of the original nitrogen and 42% of the organic matter

The above figures were obtained from samples of the surface six inches of soil. In general, smaller losses of nitrogen were subject, but organic matter losses considerable.

The authors state (Scientific Agriculture, Vol 19: Dec) "It would appear that the organic matter in the soil is the most important factor in the soil fertility ... or organic matter on the soil of western Canada ..."

BULGARIA—AXIS "VICTORY"—

(Christian Science Monitor)

IF BRITISH power were broken in the British Isles, Reichsfuhrer Hitler's acquisitions of vassal States—of which Bulgaria is the latest example—would be counted in Berlin as "velvet". But if, after all his diplomatic and military conquests on the Continent, Herr Hitler's plans to smash the Britons in their island fortress fail, each little State he has added to the Axis will be in his hands just one more stick of dynamite.

This is what the commentators in the Berlin and Rome press do NOT say. But it is a more important fact than any of the victories their words celebrate.

"If France falls," said one of this newspaper's observers in Southeastern Europe last Spring, "Hitler can take the Balkans by telephone." It might have been as easy as that, had not Il Duce crossed up the Axis wires.

Since the outbreak of the Italian-Greek war, the Nazis have had to watch that ears carefully. If the Greeks were to be smashed, the Italians evidently needed German aid. If the Greeks were not smashed, there was a possibility of a decline of Axis prestige throughout the Balkans and of a British drive at some future date from continental bases established in the Eastern Mediterranean. The Nazis' problem has been to end the Greek war without bringing war to the Balkans, an important supply area.

Hence addition of Bulgaria to the Axis is one more step toward this accomplishment. But it is not the last necessary step. Yugoslav adherence to the Nazi design for living-room would seem to allow Berlin no great difficulties now that that country is surrounded by the Axis except where a short southern border touches Greece. But Turkey is both a harder and a more slippery nut to crack.

Back of Turkish resistance and elusiveness is a diplomatic position of huge magnitude for the Nazis. It consists of the fact that not only British influence, but Russian, is helping to formulate Turkish policy; that not only British, but Russian, interests are suffering from the steady advance of the Nazis into the Balkans; that not only Britain, but Russia, has traditionally aimed to keep the Dardinnelles out of German hands

Turkey is "talking up" to the Axis when Turkish newspapers criticize Bulgaria for joining the Axis and charge that in so doing the Bulgars have violated the two-weeks-old Turkish-Bulgarian non-aggression pact. The Turks do not want war, they say, but "we are ready." They have some idea of the amount of effort Britain can expend in their "security zone" but will wan' to see that effort materialize before getting too deeply involved with the Nazis. They will be looking toward Moscow also for a cue.

So all is not yet said over the Balkan telephone wires. Many will hope to see spectacular British action to check the Nazi advance. But for Britain to spend the resources heavily in warfare in Southeastern Europe may not be the surest way of winning of the Balkans. Behind Turkish resistance, behind the delays with which Bulgaria managed to postpone its capitulation to the Nazi, behind the hope of every small nation that is placed in the pathetic position now forced upon Bulgaria, is the rocklike fact of British ability to hold out against the Nazi when such a feat seemed to the whole world to be impossible.

British strategy still has to be built around that fact. The bold offensive, the adventure at great distances from the island fortress, must still be dovetailed into a plan that keeps Britain secure in its stronghold. And that plan must include assurances of United States aid. All Herr Hitler's victories since the fall of France, it should be remembered, are substitutes for what he hoped to do in Britain itself. They would have fallen to him automatically with a British fall.

But lacking such a victory, the Nazis have been taking smaller ones at an ever increasing risk. To underrate their accomplishments would be a mistake; but so it would also be to permit those accomplishments to wipe out the memory of why they are necessary.

A TEMPORARY SOLUTION—

POSSIBLY a temporary solution of the western unemployment problem may be found in some provision for transferring employable out-of-works from the prairie provinces where they are not needed, to the east, where their services could be utilized to a useful purpose and an essential effort.

"This possibility was well expressed recently by the Regina Leader Post, in the following words, referring specifically to the problem as it exists in Saskatchewan:

"Until employment service is put on a truly national basis, there will continue to be unemployment in some sections while others are crying for workers. There remains insufficient fluidity of labor in Canada at the very time when maximum movement is required. Something should be done about this.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DR. TOFIELD CHAPTER OF THE I.O.D.E.

Eleven new members were added to the roll, making a membership of 30. Twelve regular meetings were held and a few Executive meetings.

During the year the Chatter was framed and the grounds around the memorial were planted with trees and plants. The I.O.D.E. Cook books were sold and many members assisted with the National Registration. The Annual Poppy Campaign was conducted and a picnic bridge and white drive held. Coupons from Proctor and Gamble products were collected and the proceeds turned over to the War fund. An Armistice Day service was conducted at the Memorial Park Rev. Allke acting as Chapian. Generous donations were received from members and friends interested in the work. This included the $50.00 from the Local Sports Day Committee, and was especially welcome.

Wool was bought and knitted into warm comforts for our local boys overseas. Twenty-five parcels containing knitted articles, candy, cookies, fruit and handkerchiefs, etc. were packed and sent to the soldiers. Each parcel was numbered and a duplicate card were sent to boys serving in Canada. Two Christmas hampers were packed for needy families. The large boxes of clothing and old gold and silver sent before were collected. The clothing was made up by members, and sent to needy children's homes, suits, hats, canvas, mitts and underclothing were knitted and sent to the Children's Hospital and distributed in the right places.

Contributions were also made to various funds including the Bible Society, the Bomber Fund, the War Guard, the New Navy Fund, the Finnish Relief, the Lady Tweedsmuir Farewell Gift Fund, the Flag Fund, the Work in India, the Leadership Fund, the Blanket Fund, the laundry bags for navy recruits and various times money was voted to the War Fund. Assistance was given to the local school, the Empire Day Program being something new for Tofield.

Many letters of appreciation have been received from the boys at home and overseas, as well as from Commanders of Committees to which we have given assistance During the year we have had the honor of having our Provincial Regent, Mrs. Bickell, elected as Provincial Councellor, when she represented us at the Provincial Annual Meeting. Later, due to ill health, we accepted her resignation with much regret.

Credit is also due Mrs. Patterson, retiring secretary, for her unlimited patience and attention to secretarial duties throughout the year.

Also to Mrs. A. E. Allen, 2nd Vice-Regent for taking the chair so capably during the illness of our Regent, and to the officers and members who individually accepted responsibilities and took their share of the work with brave hearts and helpful hands in order to help our soldiers and sailors and school children everywhere.

The Executive and members for 1941 are anxious for the good work to continue and hope for an increase in membership and returns.

Respectfully submitted,

ENGBEL HORIBSON (Mrs. J.W.)

TORONTO PUT PRAISES RED CROSS NOW

Not so long ago a young Toronto boy did a lot of complaining when his mother send him as a model for her Red Cross sewing. Yesterday mother received a letter written in No. 13 General Hospital Overseas where her son, now a soldier, positively luxuriating in the very same Red Cross comforts for which he was once an unwilling guinea pig. Said he in his letter:

"It was a very queer feeling when the nurse brought me my pyjamas and so forth, to actually see those articles being put to use after I had been a spectator at what might be called their birth place. Per well I remember the nights when I cursed you for asking me to try to help such things on. I'm not cursing now. At home I used to tease you about the mach. Well, Mumsie, I won't tease you any more, because I realize what wonderful work you and your workers are doing. If you could join me here for an hour, I am sure you would be more than repaid for your labors."

LARGE SHIPMENTS BACON TO BRITAIN

With the expiration on October 31 1940, of the first 12-month bacon agreement between Canada and the United Kingdom, the shipping record stand out in Canadian bacon history, states H. E. Lochie, Economics Division, Twenty-five provinces comprise the agriculture, in the February issue of the Economics Annalist. First is that on and after January 20, 1940, the export of Canadian bacon was carried on through a single administrative body, the Bacon Board, set up by the Dominion Government to supervise the seaboard delivery of the product to the British Ministry of Food. The Board, during the 12 months ending month the volume of product cleared from Canadian ports in the twelve months commencing November 1, 1939, totaling 231,000,000 pounds, exceeded the high total for any record calendar year by about 140 million pounds, and this under wartime conditions

LINDBROOK

The sympathy of the Lindbrook people is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Dunn and family of DeVille in the sad loss of son and brother, Allan, who died after a brief illness last week. Deceased was known to many here and was well liked and respected by all and his death will be a great loss to his many friends.

Many from here attended the funeral in the Tofield cemetery on Monday, March 10th.

The recent thaw here has set every one looking over their outfits prior to the "spring offensive" and things that have been lost all winter are beginning to show up, also summer on the ease, dishes, wood chips, paper and of course the old "dead soldier" in some places.

Messrs. Brengerdie and Richardson motored down to Holden one night last week to attend a Masonic meeting.

Mr and Mrs Harry Cross of Edmonton spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Kastman

We hear that Mr Fred Dunn is on the sick list but we hope that it is nothing serious

Mrs. F. Evans, our convalescent, is still "convalescing" and doing nicely thank you

The elevator had a rush of business last week, due partly to the increase in quotas and the desirability of getting the stuff away before the snow all goes.

Don't forget the dance on Friday night March 14th at the Hall. It will be well worth while attending.

On Tuesday, March 4th, neighbors and friends of Mrs P Shupe surprised her on her birthday, when they moved in on her, bringing tables, chairs, cards, etc. Six tables of Court Whist was played,there being some very handsome prizes. The winners were: Ladies' 1st, Mrs. A. Scott; 2nd Miss Alice Herbert; Men's 1st, F. Schmaltzhorr, 2nd, Albert Lindgren. Many beautiful gifts were presented to Mrs. Shupe. At the end a delicious lunch was served by the ladies. The gathering dispersed all wishing Mrs. Shupe many more happy birthdays.

CAVEATS TO GO ON APRIL 1st.

As announced in a recent issue all municipal secretaries are compelled to submit a list of lands upon which there are arrears of taxes of more than a years standing, to authorities in Edmonton before April 1st. Therefore any ratepayer who has such arrears, if he can possibly do so, should pay his 1939 taxes at once. This saves him additional expense, and also saves the office labor.

W. J. Chapman Dies Suddenly

MANY PAY HOMAGE TO DEPARTED CITIZEN

Mr. J. W. (Bill) Chapman passed away at his home on the morning of Friday, March 14th. He had been making a splendid recovery after the severe heart attack which kept him on the bed of his illness.

On the day of his death, he was cheerful and in seemingly good spirits. His visiting friends that day were delighted with the progress he had made. But toward evening a brother attack prostrated him and in spite of all the doctor, nurse, and loving hearts could do, he slipped away.

Funeral service was held on Monday, March 17th in Howard and Mc-Bride's Chapel, Edmonton, at 8 p.m. A Masonic ceremony was held in Tofield at 10.30 a.m. There was a large attendance of the brethren, Masonic lodges from Edmonton and Strathcona.

The funeral proceeded to Edmonton and took part in a largely attended service of friends and sympathizers in the funeral home. This service was conducted by the Rev. R. K. Allen who spoke from the texts "And there shall be no more sorrow." The Rev. Prof. Jackson, Edmonton, read Scripture and took in prayer, while the Rev. A. Wallis, Camrose, gave "It is well with the Soul." The funeral service was reverent and impressive.

When the last rites were held to rest and the last rites of the Church performed, Canadian Legion's service was read by Paddy Griffin and the "Last Post" sounded.

Then the R.W. Bro. A. E. Ottewell, Edmonton, conducted the Masonic service.

Mr. J. W. Chapman leaves to mourn his loss, a loving wife, and his mother and brother George, also Mrs. Emery his mother-in-law. The deceased was born in Blackwell, Derbyshire, England, 48 years ago. With his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman, he and his brother George came to Canada in 1912 and have resided in Tofield most of the time. While residing in the district he joined the call of King and Country and enlisted. He spent four years overseas. After returning to civilian life he accepted the position of Town Clerk for Tofield. For 21 years he has been its faithful and efficient servant. He served as school trustee and also as secretary for the school board. He was head of the Masonic Lodge and also President of the Red Cross.

The Curling Club found in him a most energetic secretary. Indeed he was the life and inspiration of many organizations. Mr. Chapman was an elder of the United Church and took particular interest in the work among young people.

He was a Past Master of Palestine Masonic Lodge and was honored by being District Deputy Grand Master during 1937-8. What a crowded life he lived but he lived it nobly and worthily and earned well to be known in our midst. The sincere sympathy of all goes out to his loving wife and mother and all his dear ones. Interment took place in the Edmonton cemetery. Honorary pall-bearers, W. C. Swift, Dr. Law, W. A. Hall, H. Lovell, D. W. Jacobs, A. B. Chitterboro, Acting pall bearers, G. E. Brass, F. Imber, H. Green, W. Bellamy, R. C. Hammond, S. Burke.

Beautiful floral tributes were received from:

A TRIBUTE TO "BILL" CHAPMAN

Bill, you are gone
Quite a shock the sudden call;
Your spirit shall live on
And remembered by all
The hand for years, none and dear,
Life well seem and sad dense;
But trust in God and have no fear
For His help is ever near
We miss you on the street,
With Spirt always at your feet;
Your friendly chat and cheery smile,
Giving advice, always worth while
We missed you at the meeting,
Your genial smile and kindly greeting
Any
It was dull and slow,
Things didn't seem to go.
You led a busy and useful life,
Helped by a loving wife;
You had lots of trouble, worry and care
That most people were not aware.
You were always willing to take your car,
Be the trip near or far;
To take a friend in any way,
Be the time night or day
Your place will be hard to fill,
It was always, well but Bill;
You were always capable at the wheel,
Your absence we are going to feel.
Our friendship I shall never forget,
I can't realize you are gone yet,
But some day I shall see you ever;
Forget you, never!
I know that you are at rest,
Your work well done;
You are free from strife, toil and care,
In heaven the angels joy to share.

Bombs and Chorus On Scottish Farm

(By B. Leslie Emslie)

"It's a wonderful experience to be awakened by the crash of a bomb and hear pieg! plop! plop! all around; then look out of the window and see flares springing up here and there until the whole place seems ablaze". So writes a farmer on the east coast of Scotland, who goes on to say that they have been "fairly lucky" so far. The closest call was one night when eight high explosive bombs were dropped nearby. All but one fell in the river; the home of a farm laborer was hit and, of course, one person killed and three injured.

Another time about 100 incendiary bombs were dropped around the farm buildings, burning themselves out in the fields. The Jerry then machine gunned a hospital and attempted to douse a search light, when a Lewis gunner put flais in his enemy, and the flaming plane came down in a field of standing grain. But this man doesn't allow these incidents to disrupt his daily routine, even though his nights may sometimes be disturbed.

In the next sentence he tells of having gone out of sheep and increased his dairy herd to 50 cows. He is very pleased with a milking machine he has installed, remarking that it now takes less time to milk 40 than it used to take four milkers to do 28 cows. Feeding stuffs, he said, will be rationed in 1941, dairy herds getting preference. Potash in fertilizers, too, will be rationed, but he had already taken the precaution to order his fertilizer requirements for delivery before spring.

There is no more private selling of fat cattle; all have to be taken to a recognized mart and put on the scales, being paid for at a fixed price per pound, according as the grade is A, B or C. Fourteen days in advance notice must be given of intention to offer livestock for sale. The price of grain has doubled since the war started, but potatoes have not gone up so much. There is a standard price for each kind and grade of product, and our friend seems to deplore lack of opportunity to drive a bargain!

Of the five brothers raised in this Scottish home two are farmers, two lawyers and one a graduate in agricultural science. Now only our correspondent remains on the farm, and he is special constable. Two are air raid wardens and two are in the regular army. All are full of confidence, proud and determined to serve their country and defend their home.

Shipyards are Busy Making Lifeboats

Shelburne, N.S. March 17.—Shipbuilding began with the arrival of the Loyalists who came from New York in 1783 and the industry has been maintained ever since. In the days when wooden hulls ruled the world's commerce local yards were busy but the use of iron and steel made great changes. Now there is a big demand for lifeboats as part of the equipment of merchant and mancheantmen launched elsewhere. Consequently, yards along the line of the Canadian National Railways are working at top speed. Schooners, yachts and fast motor boats are also being built in Shelburne yards.

Hulless Oats

There is a growing interest in hulless oats as feed for young pigs. The rapid expansion of the swine industry and the adoption of improved methods of feeding and management have been responsible for focussed attention upon the use of this grain as feed. Hulless Oats being devoid of hulls make excellent feed for young pigs, and reduces the digestive disorders which result from feeding oats which contain hulls.

There are two varieties of hulless oats commonly grown, Laurel and Liberty. Laurel enjoys the greatest popularity as it is generally considered to be the best of the hulless varieties. It is unfortunate that the supplies of Certified seed are very scarce, but commercial seed is available in limited quantities. Many farmers have refrained from growing hulless oats due to its low yield. It should be remembered, however, that the hulled varieties contain about 23 per cent hull and when this fact is taken into consideration there is not the marked difference in yield that is usually believed. Yields of from 60 to 80 bushels per acre may be expected under reasonably favorable growing conditions. Considering their feed value for particular classes of livestock it would, therefore, appear advisable for hog producers to consider growing at least a small acreage for their own requirements.

Hulless oats are usually sown at the rate of about one to one and a half bushels per acre. Good seed should be obtained and well cleaned before seeding. The most common administrative found is that of hulled oats, which are difficult to remove. If only a small quantity of seed is being used hand picking would be practical and necessary in carrying a sample fairly free from admixtures.

It is important to remember that hulless oats should not be treated with formaldehyde as the germination may be seriously affected. Seed should be treated by using one of the mercurial dusts

Hulless oats should be cut before they are dead ripe, otherwise losses may occur from shattering.

Scrap Iron to be Gathered By Line Elevators

"Drop your scrap iron on Berlin" will be the slogan of a drive sponsored by local Line Elevator Agents in which farmers will be asked to donate their scrap iron to aid Britain.

Plans are now underway for organizing every community for collection of scrap iron in Western Canada. Local Boards of Trade, Service by Newspapers, Church Societies, farm organizations and all local associations will be asked to co-operate in the drive for collection of waste scrap iron. Its ultimate destination will be Germany via British bombers in the form, farmers will be enabled to give their direct reply to Hitler for his bombing of British cities.

The North-West Line Elevators Association has arranged with all Line Elevator Agents to act as collecting agencies for the scrap iron. The preliminary organization for each community will be set up during the next few weeks and actual collection and shipment will take place between June 15th and July 15th. It is felt that this date will best fit in with of the British Empire farming operations

The only expense to be incurred in the organization of the "Drop your scrap iron on Berlin" campaign will be freight charges. The entire proceeds either than freight costs will be turned over to the Patriotic Salvage Corps.

It is not suggested that this country has its fifth columnists, yet Nor- way has her Quisling and France her Laval. Let us be ready to put into deeds and action the words of the National Anthem of our Dominion "O Canada we stand on guard for thee."

Weed Control Conferences

The Field Crops Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, has arranged conferences to discuss weed control. These will be held at Red Deer (City Hall) on March 25th and 26th; Calgary (Crow's Chamber) on March 27th and 28th; and Edmonton (I.O.O.F.) on April 2nd and 3rd. Representatives of Municipal Councils and Weed Control Officers will meet with officers of the Department of Agriculture at these meetings to discuss the latest material on weed control measures. The importance of weed control among farmers affecting production and efficient land use is recognized to be of concern, and a large attendance at these conferences is expected.

Grain Mice

Farmers having grain stored in bins are advised to examine it carefully every two weeks to determine if grain mice are present. Particular attention should be given to grain which was threshed damp or which was stored in new or tight bins.

The following procedure is recommended to exterminate if mice are present: Toughness or heating of the grain results from the activities of grain mice. A preservative as a cloth may be shoved into the top three feet of the grain to determine if they be present.

The mites, themselves, may be found by taking samples of grain from the top three feet near the centre of the bin. These samples should be examined at once by sifting the dust into a container, warming it slightly, and then looking for the mites. Spread some of the dust on a smooth black surface and examine it with a magnifying glass. The mites are very tiny, nearly white insects, which can be seen moving about on the grain. They are not active when cold, and will die if left long exposed to the air.

The best control is prevention. All bins should be well ventilated, and if grain is to be stored it should be examined at once by sifting the dust into a container, warming it slightly, and then looking for the mites. Spread some of the dust on a smooth black surface and examine it with a magnifying glass. The mites are very tiny, nearly white insects, which can be seen moving about on the grain. They are not active when cold, and will die if left long exposed to the air.

If mites are found act promptly. Treat the infested grain with carbon bisulphide, preferably in cold weather. In sub-zero weather shovel or elevate the grain in such a way that it falls some distance, thus allowing it to be properly aired. Clean-up the infested grain with a fanning mill and burning the dust in which it is contained. After transferring grain fumigated with mites from one bin to another watch it carefully as the mite population will likely build up again. Losses from the activities of grain mites may be large unless prevention or cure is taken. Damage can usually be avoided by f equent, regular examinations of grain bins and by taking the necessary steps to remove the mites. Samples of grain in tight cans may be taken to the nearest District Agricultarist or elevator agent for examination

It should be remembered that grain mites are extremely small, practically invisible to the naked eye. Grain in bins should be examined at regular intervals to make sure the necessary steps to remove the mites.

Further information on grain mites may be obtained from the Field Crops Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, or from the Dominion Entomological Branch, Lethbridge, Alberta.

EARL OF ATHLONE ENDORSES WAR SERVICES FUND APPEAL

Heading those who have given their wholehearted endorsement to the Canadian War Services Fund appeal this month on behalf of our men in uniform is the Earl of Athlone, Canada's Governor-General. Her Royal Highness Princess Alice, and Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King.

"Nothing contributes so much to their physical and spiritual well-being", His Excellency pointed out in his letter to the national campaign chairman. "These services signify to them the affection and thoughtfulness of the "folk back home", he says.

Major-General A. D. McRae, campaign chairman, explained that the I.O.D.E. propose to use the money they derived from the campaign to help the war services needs of I. O. D. E. chapters in the four western provinces only.

It should also be explained, he said, that the $5,500,000 budget includes funds for the homes services of the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. in connection with the war effort.

Organizers are already busy in all parts of the Province to see the money collected in the campaign which opens March 24 and closes April 5th.

The Week In Edmonton

Provincial lands made available to the authorities for airport sites in the new chain being constructed in the Yukon are leased free, it was stated this week. "The dominion government will hold a license of occupation for the duration of the war. The policy is to lend the federal government what ever it may need for war purposes free of charges," it was added.

The budget having been formally introduced, Legislators have settled down to the the traditional debate, and by the time it is over few maiden speeches will await delivery. Meanwhile, bills continue to be introduced, and the expected moratorium measure appeared Thursday, last. It was introduced by Hon. Lucien Maynard, Minister of Municipal Affairs, and will apply to debts incurred prior to 1936.

J. A. McNeil, secretary-manager of the Alberta Motoring Association, believes that this summer Alberta and Canada will witness a record-breaking influx of tourists during the present restrictions on gasoline. He said that a campaign to counteract rumors detrimental to the trade by Z. S. was the result of invitations to visit Canada extended by Premier Mackenzie King. According to Mr. McNeil, U. S. organizations are conducting a drive to stamp out false reports as to Canadian conditions and already the Alberta tourist business is receiving a growing daily list of inquiry letters.

Resolution dealing with wheat which was introduced by Hon. D. B. MacMillan and adopted by the Legislature urges a 70 cents price, both No. 1, 2, 3 C. W. shipping point; that any process tax be earmarked for Wheat Board operations and waived in case of processing for home use as is done in Eastern provinces; that a "satisfactory" quota system be adopted; that the federal government make advances for storage building purposes direct to farmers; that advances be made for wheat storage on farms; that the government survey the wheat surplus as "an essential part of its war policy".

The new grading system will provide for premium gas - with an octane range of 75-78, and regular gas, with a range of 66-70. C. R. NO LONG WORDS

One of the results of having Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill as Britain's prime minister in time of war is the rapid rediscovery that the English language is capable of expressing great thoughts and inspiring we living action. And few of Mr Churchill's words are long words. It might be argued that Mr. Churchill would be a great man even if his speeches were unreadable. But this might not be the fact, for the mind which is capable of stripping thought to simple words is a mind which can grasp great problems by casting away non-essential detail. The power of Mr. Churchill over the free peoples of the earth is the power forthright of purpose which probably would not be as great if he ever succumbed to the temptation, apparent elsewhere to use words for concealment, rather than the expression, of thought.

"IF—"

THE TOWN HALL at Tofield has never in our memory been a particularly cheerful place. From earliest acquaintanceship with it, the stairs always creaked when one ascended them and the fire hall below with its prison cells was the opposite of good cheer. On a windy day—or night—the odd piece of tin would rattle and bang, and if the wind had reached gale proportions the building would slightly sway.

To this building, some twenty-odd years ago, came a young man fresh from the war. Previously partly trained to enter the ministry, he choose, due to the opportunity opening and the break the war had caused in his university training, to become secretary-treasurer of the Town of Tofield. At that time the clerical work was fairly heavy and in addition there was janitor work to do. On many a cold night at midnight he left his home to "fire-up" a non too efficient furnace so that the building, occasionally containing the grey prisoner, would not become too cold. The coming of natural gas changed this and as the years passed and the actual clerical work became somewhat less, but mingled with other civic duties kept J. W. Chapman a very busy man and also, in addition, honors, Civic, Magisterial, and Masonic, more and more upon him. But no matter how high the honor bestowed or how busy he became, he never lost that quality which made men feel free to call him "Bill." One could go even further, and use literally the words of his father, so often spoken: "Our Bill."

On Monday, many friends in person and in spirit were present at the laying to rest of a highly valued citizen. Hearts were heavy indeed with the sadness was a certain degree of pride. Running through our head as we write is the theme of, and the following lines from Kipling's poem "If."

"If you can walk with Kings,
Nor lose the common touch."

HE'S ASKING YOU—

(Contributed)

HE'S JUST A LAD as years go, and he's full of the joy of living—even in this mad, grief-stricken world that has forgotten how to "play the game." We took him from schools, shops, farms, factories and offices. He laid down his fishing rod and tennis racquet and skills, and donned a uniform and shouldered a rifle—without a murmur, without a complaint.

He did these things willingly, proudly, because he knows that he and his pals, and older friends, have a mighty important job on their hands right now.

He knows the meaning of war and sacrifice—heaven knows that's been drilled into our children since the last show—but he also knows the meaning of Nazi bestiality and slavery. And he's determined that it will never overcome England, will never find its way to this side of the Atlantic to destroy the freedom and security of those near and dear to him—and the Canada he loves.

This boy is somebody's son, somebody's brother. He could be yours.

This lad, this youth of high ideals and principles, is our hope of the future. We rely on him—and thousands others like him—to carry on where we leave off, to make this nation fill the high role of leadership in the new and happier world of nations that is to follow. His King, his Empire, is proud of his brave and unselfish response in this hour of need. And we—his folk back home for whom he has waved a "cheerio" and "thumbs up"—are we proud of him? Words, mere words, cannot answer that.

To-day, we who hold the home front are being challenged—challenged by a conscience that will not let us be. For today we have the one and only opportunity that will come within the next 12 months to show our love, our gratitude to this youth who stands for all Canadian youths.

Perhaps he is still among us. Perhaps he is "over there" in that island fortress we call British. But wherever he is, he is counting on you to contribute for his benefit, education, entertainment, recreation, and personal assistance—services that only you can provide.

You won't let him down. He's confident of that. And because he has faith in you, and faith in the cause for which he is fighting, he'll never let you down.

He's asking you—his mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, sweethearts and friends—to give now, give generously, to the Canadian War Services Fund. For he knows that if you fail him in this cause, the thing that have helped to make his life on active service happier, more purposeful, will not be there to help him carry on to victory.

The Campaign opens March 24 and the participating organizations are the Canadian Legion, I. O. D. E., Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A.

WORLD OF WHEAT

SPECIAL RAIL FARES FOR EASTER TRAVEL

A ray reasonably clear logical and rational thinking about the international wheat industry recently illuminated the minds of the people of Winnipeg.

Dr. Joseph S. Davis, Director of the famous Food Research Institute of California, and who is a renowned authority on the marketing of wheat, made a series of addresses. Dr. Davis set forth the following facts, which I for one believe, should be most seriously pondered over by our wheat growers and by all Canadians.

(1) That it is an advantage to have large reserves of wheat during the course of the war.

(2) That the future of the Canadian wheat industry will depend upon the kind of peace that will be made.

(3) That there is no hope for any betterment of conditions, or for increased sales either by governmental "pressure" or by international wheat marketing agreements.

(4) That the true hope for wheat growers is in the lowering of tariffs and in the removal of restrictions, quotas and agreements which have strangled international trade; all to open the way to fewer wheat acres and so to increase world consumption of bread.

(5) That the two last decades of the 19th century were "Unfortunate" and "Planned (Mis)-Management" and of the restrictions of foreign imports, will be regarded as a crazy interlude in the economic progress of mankind.

WAR SAVINGS BOOSTER CLUB NOW ACTIVE

The War Savings Booster Club, recently organized to collect funds to buy stamps to start filling up the local war savings card is making great progress. They are already within a dollar or so of their objective. It is proposed to present each school district with a folder with one stamp attached with the expectation that the saving will be continued by the students. A list of donors will be published, probably next week.

WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE NEWS

On Tuesday evening, following out the suggestion received from Edmonton, Messrs. McCauley, McCarthy, Robinson and Worden journeyed to Holden and met a few of the citizens there.

A committee was formed to "work" Holden the provincial being: R. E. Wood, chairman; Steve P. Kozmanuk, Fred Prugh, Thos. E. White, Mrs. Betty A. White, secretary.

This committee will make its report direct to Edmonton.

Supplies necessary for an active campaign are on their way and as soon as possible these will be forwarded to committees in Cornhill.

The actual work of these committees is not as spectacular but quite as important, as the selling of War Saving Certificates regularly according to their ability. Rolled down in a really an urge to save, which shouldn't be so hard to take.

Four non industrial districts there are for practical purposes, two pledge forms, a bank pledge and an honor pledge. Canvassers are asked to obtain a bank pledge wherever possible, where this is not possible to obtain an honor pledge.

The response the government asks from each individual is relatively small, but the government does want all who can to do their share.

LAKESHORE

A wedding of more than usual interest to Lakeshore took place very quietly at the United Church Manse on Tuesday afternoon March 18, when Margaret M. Wood, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wood, was married to Geo. Abernathy, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Will Abernathy.

They were unattended and Mrs. R. Hannan and Mrs. Allan witnessed the ceremony. Rich bride and groom are well known in and around Tofield and their friends wish them many years of happiness.

After the ceremony they were supper guests of Mrs. M. Hannan and later left for their home at Lakeshore.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Murray spent Sunday evening at Mrs. T. R. Seale's

HASTINGS LAKE

In the afternoon of Thursday last a new Jersey Gladeu walking refrigerator slimsimply passed away. Going over to say "hello," I noticed that she was acrying but a somewhat mood. Even the dog appeared dejected.

"It matter," I says, says I, can't be so bad as all that! Lost your pet friend?

"Can't be," I says, trying to cheer him.

"It right," he sighs. "The winnie-nine' club is meetin' at the house today."

"What's wrong with that?" I wants to go on record as not bein' home enjoying yerself?"

He gave me a pitying look. "I thought you'd have better 'n that." He asks, "when ye gonna grow up?"

"I dunno," I says, trying to guess. Then I had a thought. "Say, you don't mean you had to scrub do ye?"

"Don't tell a soul," he whispers, but early this morning the winnie-folks showed up at the door. They said they had to get set for the meetin' Cos I'm hungry," he adds.

"What!" I explains. "No dinner? Are you a man or a moose?"

"I wonder," he answers.

I had no idea. "Say," I suggests, it's about lunch time isn't it? Let's go up, perhaps there's a little bite left." But he looked doubtful. "Kinda risky," he says.

"You could throw your hat in first," I encourage.

He brightens up. "We could try," he says. "Besides there's two of us." It's funny what the hungry does to a man.

We hit it just right and of course who do we see within easy reach of the eats and looking well satisfied with himself but Alec Tough. Who else wouldn't be a chauffeur, I asks myself, kinda wistfully.

Even the cat, adorned with a big ribbon, was grinning. I stealthily slipped a piece of cake in my pocket for Jeremy's dog. Lucky dog, for it was good cake. I said something to Jeremy but he was too busy; he didn't hear.

There was a few details of the meeting which we learned later.

Present were nine members and three visitors. The meeting opened with a prayer for peace. Roll call was answered by the reading of poems. Minutes of the last meeting were read. Finished knitting was handed in and more wool was distributed. Lucky draw was again won by Mrs. Kyle. Consolation prize was served by Mrs. Gladue assisted by Mrs. Peterson.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Hoover. Mrs. Kyle being assistant hostess. The roll call will be answered by an exchange of Easter eggs.

Broom Tough and Cyril Hoover have enlisted in the air force at present we are unaware as to just what branch they will be in but expect to know shortly. They start training early in April.

Laura and Florence Dennett are spending a few days with Marcella Campion.

Cornhill Council In Busy Two Day Session

The first meeting of the new Council (there were no changes in personnel from last year) was held at the District's Office on Thursday March 13th. The date for this meeting is set by law and all rural municipal council's in the province are in session on this date.

There were present Councillors Anderson, Broom, Coombe, Kortzman, Rumbay and Walker.

The meeting was called to order and report of Returning Officer, A. C. Dodds, was made.

Re-elected Councillors Anderson and Walker made their declaration of office.

Councillor Coombes then nominated Councillor Walker as Reeve and Councillor Walker nominated Councillor Anderson as Reeve. Councillor Anderson withdrew his nomination and Councillor Walker was formally elected Reeve for the current year.

On motion of Coun. Rumbay, Coun. Anderson was elected Deputy-Reeve for the current six months.

Minutes of last meeting together with a list of accounts were read and formally adopted.

The secretary's bond was presented and at this time the question of the secretary's salary came up. It was pointed out that the work was gradually increasing and while only one person was employed there was for the greater part of the time, two working. Reeve Walker moved that we fix the secretary's salary at $1700.00 per year, starting April 1st. Carried.

Mr. Sinclair interviewed Council regarding supplying milk in a factory on relief and desired to know why the order was changed from two quarts daily to one quart daily. Council replied that it was understood that in addition to the quart of whole milk provided, a supply of fresh skim milk was also obtainable.

Adjournment for lunch.

Mr. Wittenburg interviewed council regarding buying quarter section S.W. 18-50-20. As Mr. Wittenburg was not ready to make a down payment until Fall, the matter was left in abeyance until that time.

The salaries of the rate payers' meeting were read. Action regarding the war savings resolutions passed at that meeting was deferred until later in the day. Regarding the Bovine Tubercular Restricted Area resolution, passed at the annual meeting, on the motion of Councillor Anderson it was decided that council organize M.D. 497 as a Bovine Tubercular Restricted area. Regarding the 10 per cent discount resolution passed at the annual meeting, Council felt that the resolution is inconsistent with the Municipal District's Act and also with the intention of the original discount resolution.

On the motion of Reeve Walker Patriquin and Johnstone were appointed auditors for 1941.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson Mr. Chas. Holmberg was appointed assessor for 1941. The by-law for the occasional assessing that may be required. There is no general assessing this year.

LAKESHORE

A wedding of more than usual interest to Lakeshore took place very quietly at the United Church Manse on Tuesday afternoon March 18, when Margaret M. Wood, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wood, was married to Geo. Abernathy, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Will Abernathy.

They were unattended and Mrs. R. Hannan and Mrs. Allan witnessed the ceremony. Rich bride and groom are well known in and around Tofield and their friends wish them many years of happiness.

After the ceremony they were supper guests of Mrs. M. Hannan and later left for their home at Lakeshore.

HASTINGS LAKE

In the afternoon of Thursday last a new Jersey Gladeu walking refrigerator slimsimply passed away. Going over to say "hello," I noticed that she was acrying but a somewhat mood. Even the dog appeared dejected.

"It matter," I says, says I, can't be so bad as all that! Lost your pet friend?

When Jeremy doesn't smile it certainly is serious. "Worse 'n that," he answers.

"Can't be," I says, trying to cheer him.

"It right," he sighs. "The winnie-nine' club is meetin' at the house today."

"What's wrong with that?" I wants to go on record as not bein' home enjoying yerself?"

He gave me a pitying look. "I thought you'd have better 'n that." He asks, "when ye gonna grow up?"

"I dunno," I says, trying to guess. Then I had a thought. "Say, you don't mean you had to scrub do ye?"

"Don't tell a soul," he whispers, but early this morning the winnie-folks showed up at the door. They said they had to get set for the meetin' Cos I'm hungry," he adds.

"What!" I explains. "No dinner? Are you a man or a moose?"

"I wonder," he answers.

I had no idea. "Say," I suggests, it's about lunch time isn't it? Let's go up, perhaps there's a little bite left." But he looked doubtful. "Kinda risky," he says.

"You could throw your hat in first," I encourage.

He brightens up. "We could try," he says. "Besides there's two of us." It's funny what the hungry does to a man.

We hit it just right and of course who do we see within easy reach of the eats and looking well satisfied with himself but Alec Tough. Who else wouldn't be a chauffeur, I asks myself, kinda wistfully.

Even the cat, adorned with a big ribbon, was grinning. I stealthily slipped a piece of cake in my pocket for Jeremy's dog. Lucky dog, for it was good cake. I said something to Jeremy but he was too busy; he didn't hear.

There was a few details of the meeting which we learned later.

Present were nine members and three visitors. The meeting opened with a prayer for peace. Roll call was answered by the reading of poems. Minutes of the last meeting were read. Finished knitting was handed in and more wool was distributed. Lucky draw was again won by Mrs. Kyle. Consolation prize was served by Mrs. Gladue assisted by Mrs. Peterson.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Hoover. Mrs. Kyle being assistant hostess. The roll call will be answered by an exchange of Easter eggs.

Broom Tough and Cyril Hoover have enlisted in the air force at present we are unaware as to just what branch they will be in but expect to know shortly. They start training early in April.

New Four Months Training Plan Will Turn Out Ten Thousand Soldiers Monthly

Ottawa: About 95 per cent of the men who were called for training under the National Resources Mobilization Act participate in the 30 day training plan have expressed a desire to volunteer in the Army, Navy or Air Force, should the necessity arise, Hon. J.L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, stated this week in reply to a query in the House of Commons.

Whether those who have taken training under the Act will be required to take annual training will depend on accommodation and equipment available, the Minister stated. They are encouraged, where possible, to take the two eight weekly training with the Reserve units in their vicinity, and are to be treated strictly as other members of the particular unit to which they attach themselves.

In defence of the short period plan Mr. Ralston said it was in line with the action taken by Mr. Churchill's government last May when the local defence forces were created in Britain registering almost a million additional young men preparatory to calling them up for service, an emergency step taken following the invasion of Holland, Belgium, and France when speed was the paramount issue, and invasion of Britain became a possibility.

The new four-months' plan providing two months basic training and two months' advanced training would mean that the future additions to the Reserve would be completely trained in all weapons with which to British duals the men might be called upon to fight, the Minister explained. By taking the 21 year old grocers as they reached that age, he felt that for the present at least a complicated system of reserve occupations could be avoided. Furthermore the system, he said, had the double feature that young men at time of their coming of age were rendered liable and could prepare themselves for the defence of Canada.

When the plan was fully going, there would be 40,000 men continuously in the schools at any one time, and 10,000 coming in at one end and going out the other each month. Most of the militia training centres used under the former thirty-day plan would be used for the basic training of both the Active and Natural Reserve Mobilization Act personnel, while the trainin centres heretofore used for the active army personnel would be used as advanced training centres for both. Speaking generally 8,000 trainees and 2,000 of the active service force would be training at the same time. On the other hand the Minister pointed out, it was possible later that the numbers for active service would increase, or the reverse, in which case the numbers called under the National Resources Mobilization Act would be adjusted proportionately.

LINDBROOK

The sympathy of the district is extended to members of the Wiley family in the sad loss of their father who passed away recently. Interment was at the Tofield Cemetery.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Appleby had the misfortune to break a limb lately,we hope it is on the mend now. Its just one of those chances all kids take, most of us can recall similar happenings in our "young" lives.

Mendames Shupe and Hooper paid a visit last week to Mrs. C. LaPlace of Ryley. Mrs. LaPlace was formerly Miss E. Murphy, the Wesleite School teacher.

Albert Lindgren, youngest son of Mr. Otto Lindgren, Lindbrook, left in camp at Camrose recruiting and about the R.R. and O. and Sergt-Majors etc., have called up for service with the last draft.

Steele Murdock of Minnith, well known to many here in Lindbrook district by is join the R. C. A. P. having received his call to the colors.

Minnith school is closed down with an epidemic of measles, practically all families with children at school are now afflicted with the disease.

Mrs. A. Smith is away on a visit to her son Stanley and family at Island, Alberta.

We hear that several flocks of sheep have been badly worried and by dogs lately. It is particularly bad at this season of the year with the close proximity of the lambing season and probably more losts of feed lambs and ewes as well if the owners of the dogs engaged in this game are known it is likely that they may be called on for damages and that's a pretty bill for a good sized flock, and it only takes one night to do the business; so watch your dogs!

Worms in Pigs

The control of the common round white worm of pigs is of first importance in swine production. These worms may usually be found in small numbers in the hind-legs hereds do not appear. Control measures consist of giving pigs new yards once per year if possible or at least of changing the land and seeding to some annual crop. Since the greatest loss are usually before weaning, this is the logical time of attack. The mother may be treated for worms at least a month before farrowing by use of the following mixture:

For each one hundred pounds of the sows weight to be treated, mix one teaspoonful of gasoline, one teaspoonful of turpentine, and four teaspoonfuls of raw linseed oil with one quart of milk. Starve the pigs twenty four hours, place mixture in trough and leave until consumed. Starve a-nother three hours; then feed as usual.

When the sow is put in the farrowing pen, the lower half of the body, particularly the udder, should be washed with warm water and laundry soap to remove worm eggs adhering. The pen should be cleaned thoroughly and scrubbed with lye water - one pound of lye to 40 gallons of water - to kill any worms eggs. These are too small to see readily. Repeat this cleaning and washing sore every ten days until the pigs are weaned, then provide fresh land for the pigs.

After the pigs are four months old, the danger from worms is not great. The adult pig seldom suffers greatly from the presence of worms; but, as the eggs are passed with the faeces, the pens and pastures thus become polluted. The worm egg may remain in the soil under favorable conditions for a year or more and can be picked up by pigs with their food.

Further information concerning parasites of pigs may be obtained upon application to the nearest Agriculture College, or Dominion Experimental Farm.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many kindnesses during our recent sad bereavement. For the beautiful floral tributes we are very grateful. Special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell for their thoughtfulness and help. Also Walter Bellamy.

HAY LAKES

Well the snow is disappearing but the mud is appearing on the roads are not in much better shape anyway.

Lawrence Schlender has a new motor cycle and he was seen trying it out on the Hay Lakes sidewalks, the only dry place in town. Something to the few who dared venture outdoors, Lawrence was really doing the city proud.

H. Person has purchased a horse from G. Wenzlaff.

Martin Hinkleman jr., so we hear, is selling out and moving to Bruxeau where he will go into the dairy business.

The service held in the Hay Lakes school on March 23rd was well attended. Rev. D. Emerson was the speaker. He will hold services at G. Webster's on March 30th at 2:00 p.m.

Ted Shultz spent the week end in Edmonton. Lenart Nordin was also there for a few days.

C.F.R.N. Increases Power

March 29th, 1941, at 1:00 A. M., Mountain Standard Time, most of the broadcasting stations on the North American continent will change frequency, and thenceforth operate on their newly assigned positions on the dial, determined some months ago at the Havana Conference.

In the vicinity of cross, this change affects frequency only.

In some few instances, the frequency changes will coincide with an increase in power.

Broadcast station CFRN, the station owned and operated by the Carlyle Broadcasting Company in Edmonton, "The Gateway To The North," Alberta -- will go back to it's original frequency, 1260 kilocycles, which, under the terms of the Havana Conference, is now a clear Class 1A Channel, and will, at the same time, increase it's power from 100 to 1000 equipment.

The method of obtaining one kilowatt output is similar to that in use in other 1000-Watt stations in the Province at the present time.

With the installation in June of the new 1000-Watt RCA De Luxe Model K-1 High Level transmitter unit in the Sawyards Broadcasting Company's Jasper Highway transmitter houses, and a new RCA Model speaking console in the studios in the CPR Building on Jasper Avenue, together with an extension studio and office remodelling plan which is being executed at the present time, the new CFRN will be the most modern, and the most powerful broadcasting station in Northern Alberta.

CFRN's antenna and ground system is especially designed for this frequency, and in order to establish CFRN as the most modern station in Northern Alberta, a 1941 De Luxe Model K-1 RCA High Level transmitter is on order.

Unfortunately, war orders will delay delivery of this transmitter unit until some time in June.

In order to take care of the power increase from March 29th, until such time as the RCA K-1 transmitter arrives in Edmonton, the engineering department of RCA has supplied CFRN with a 1000 watt power amplifier, to be used as a "booster", in conjunction with the present 100 watt

The Government Wheat Policy

The Government's plan to permit a maximum delivery of 200 million bushels of wheat (about 230 million for the West) for the crop year 1941-42, will mean a reduced wheat income to Western Canada for the coming crop year of probably 133 million dollars.

Recognizing that such a reduction in income is more than the West can bear, the Dominion Government proposes to give compensation to prairie farmers. The exact amount it seems of the compensation cannot, however, be determined until the Government policy is further explained and clarified.

One Government statement is that the West will need a total income from all agriculture products of 325 million dollars. The similar income for this present crop year 1940-41 will amount to 466 million dollars.

Even if compensation of one kind or another is paid to prairie farmers to bridge their total income up to 325 million dollars, this would still mean a revenue for the coming crop year '41-42 of 83 million dollars less than the farmers received for the same product from the present crop year 1940-41. The loss of 83 million dollars in the one year would certainly bring considerable hardships to the West. The farmers themselves would probably manage somehow to get along but after farmers had paid their own personal living and production bills, there would be very little money for creditors, for the payments of Dominion taxes, for the purchase of War Saving Stamps, War Saving Certificates, War Bonds, for subscription to the Red Cross, and for the support of other war activities; for it is to be hoped that the present purchases and the present crop year of about 400 million bushels of wheat would be certainly did not afford our farmers on the average anything approaching a living income.

During the past 60 years our prairie farmers have produced on an average some 10.7 billion dollars to the economy of Canada. In view of this, it surely seems as though our farmers entitled to the most generous consideration by the Dominion Government. It certainly seems, too, that it would be in the national interest, during the war, to maintain our farmers and the whole economic structure of the West in a financially

Cereal Varieties

Ten different varieties of hard red spring wheat have been officially recommended for use in various parts of the province as a result of the 1940 extensive experimental work, it is announced by D. E. W. Smith, director of such variety of wheat, consisting of the three provinces, a Cereal Variety Registration Committee is responsible for making official announcements as to the varieties which should be grown in each district. These recommendations should be used as a general guide in making a choice It is, of course, recognized that there are local districts to which varieties not officially recommended may be well adapted. However, it is wise to follow the official advice unless there is a very good reason for not doing so Seven varieties of oats, eleven of barley and three of flax are to be found on the recommended lists.

In order to assist government industries in making the necessary information readily available to farmers, the Province has a branch of Information Associated with the Agriculture Department which has been provided with printed copies of cereal variety recommendations.

In order to secure maximum returns, it is necessary to use pure seed of the right variety

So long as supplies last, copies of recommendations may be obtained from

This Is The Time Cattle Should Be Dehorned

According to a well known cattle man of this district the months of March and April are the best months for dehorning The best way of dehorning is to prevent the growth by applying caustic stick, purchased at the drug store for this purpose, to the horn buttons of young calves. When this is not done, the sooner dehorning by the clipping method is done, the easier it will be. The older the animal the more difficult the job. Dehorning saves quite a bit of damage in transit when the time comes for the animals to be shipped. It is also money saved in the long run as dehorned cattle will command a better price than cattle with horns.

There are several dehorning clippers in the district and anyone desiring the loan of a pair could apply in first instance to the Tofield Mercury.

GOOD seed is the first requirement for an excellent crop . . . because only good seed will grow vigorous and productive plants.

Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes are good seed potatoes. By planting them, higher-quality, cleaner, standardized, more uniform potatoes than those grown from ordinary seed stock will be produced.

So, this season, to harvest finer potatoes — and more of them, plant Canadian Certified Seed.

WHERE DO WE GO TO-NIGHT?

Camp Borden, March 31.—Canadian soldiers get the best military equipment that science and money can supply. Their gas masks are proof against any known war gas. They are carried in trucks which are the last word in motorized military vehicles. They get everything, from shoe laces to shaving material, required to keep them in physical health and comfort.

Departments dealing with national defence, however, expect necessary war services to fill another most important need of our fighting men. The government supplies rations, but not recreation. It gives the men "tin hats" but not table tennis. It furnishes magazines for rifles, but not for reading. Those spare-time needs are met by organizations included in the Canadian War Services Fund, which is appealing to the "folks back home" for $5,500,000 with which to carry on this all-important work.

In Canada's largest military camp here, 16,000 men from all parts of Canada every day ask the question: "Where do we go to-night?" In a week these men make 110,000 visits to the large war service centres maintained by the Canadian Legion, the Knights of Columbus, the Salvation Army and the Y.M.C.A. They visit the Borden Armoury and the Y.W.C.A. at Borden's gate to meet their wives and children, sisters and friends from nearby and they read books and magazines supplied by the I.O.D.E.

There is no idle while war at Borden but in the off-duty hours between training and sleep, there is danger that the centres operated by the war services. Moving pictures, concerts, small games instruments, table tennis, Sunday evening services, and sing-songs are the attractions which these centres of warmth and cheer. Reading and writing rooms are crowded and day canteens, where the profit basis, supply beverages, sandwiches, refreshments and tobacco. A coalition not available elsewhere in camp. The huts are at least half a mile apart and there is no crowding, pig, as each centre serves the men in nearby barracks and each centre in showing the same movies during the week.

No women are allowed in Camp Borden except during Sunday visiting hours but girl workers of the main gate in the Hostess House of the Y.W.C.A. to provide a meeting place for women and children and their soldier sons, husbands and fathers. Bright with chintz and colourful walls and warm with the hospitality of full time volunteer women workers, this House has a comfortable lounge, writing and reading rooms, games room, first-aid and rest rooms. Hundreds of soldiers, make use of the canteen lounge and games rooms daily as a pleasant respite from camp routine.

Thousands of books and magazines are provided each week by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire. These are distributed by Auxiliary Service officer among the new service centres and their canteens. Socks, sweaters, scarves and other soldier comforts are also supplied by this organization.

The answer to the soldiers' question: "Where do we go to-night?" is answered at Camp Borden by the Canadian War Services, who are asking the Canadian public to support their work, not only in Camp Borden but in every other Canadian army and air force camp in Canada and overseas. Help them to help the men who are fighting for us.

WHAT CANADA HAS DONE

Facts and Figures of a Nation at War

On third reading of the $1,300 million war appropriation Bill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King outlined to the House of Commons what Canada has done in 18 months of war. Here are some points:

In the Army, Navy and Air Force together, Canada has a quarter of a million men on active service. This does not include 170,000 in the militia reserve.

A Canadian army corps, Canadian destroyers and Canadian air squadrons sharing in the defence of Britain.

Canada's navy and air force doing their part in keep open vital sea lanes of the North Atlantic.

Canadian garrisons on guard in Iceland, Newfoundland and the West Indies.

Canadian engineers strengthening the defences of Gibraltar.

Canadian navy which at he had only 11 ships at the outbreak of war now has over 100.

Nearly 60 military training camps distributed across the country.

Under British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, some 90 establishments already in operation.

Canada's outright contribution as a belligerent is paid for in full by the Canadian people. It is not loaned to Britain. This contribution is estimated to cost the Canadian people $1,400 millions in the coming fiscal

C.F.R. CELEBRATES SWITCH-OVER TO NEW FREQUENCY

Radio Station CFRN's new frequency change to 1260 k/c, and power increase to 1,000 Watts was officially inaugurated at 1:00 A.M. Saturday, March 29th, 1941, by the Secretary of the Northern Alberta Dairymen's Association, James McCool. Mr. McCool "threw the switch" before a large and interested crowd of old timers and their friends at the Old Timers' and Pioneers' Dance at "THE BARN" in Edmonton. Among those present in attending this important function were Government and Civic officials, Presidents of the Sawmills Company, the H.B.C. Misses Pageant Director, Sid Lancaster, and many others. The congratulations were, of course, broadcast, and messages of congratulation were received from many points throughout Canada.

Gold received from Great Britain.

Taking national income of United States at $80,000 millions, Canada's estimated war expenditure, direct and indirect in 1941-42 equivalent to an expenditure by the United States in a single year, of almost $38,000 millions.

Canada's financial assistance to Great Britain in fiscal year 1941-42 equivalent, in comparable American terms, to something over $18,000 millions a year.

In terms of United States population, $80,000 Canadians on active service are equivalent to an armed strength in the United States of over 4,750,000 men. This does not include Canada's reserve army for home defence.

THE FARMERS' MEETING—

THE RECENT meeting of farmers at Tofield will probably go down into history as one of the best meetings of its kind ever held here. Therefore to those responsible for the planning and arranging of it, hearty congratulations are due. We can make this extra strong as we really don't know who they were, but whoever they were and how many there were of them, congratulations are in order.

Regarding the newly formed branch of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and its relation to the United Farmers of Canada, we know comparitively little. We have received this week a copy of the Manifesto of the C.A.F. together with a press sheet covering its current doings. Certainly in these days of organizations and the pressure exerted on governments by them, agriculture cannot afford to be unorganized. Whether it is better to have a number of provincial organizations or one federal one is a matter of individual choice. To us the choice would be a Dominion organization with Provincial Branches and properly elected provincial executives who would form a dominion grand council. From that council a dominion executive could be chosen. Agriculture in Canada is so diversified, is spread over such a wide area, presents so many complex problems, peculiar to particular districts, that the system, the most able men in the country will be required to head such an organization if it is to do justice to the hundreds of thousands of producers it represents. The progress of the newly formed organization will be watched with much interest.

BOMBING BERLIN—

LAST FALL when air raids over Great Britain were at their height, and the R.A.F., often assisted by the R.C.A.F. was making such a magnificent showing, it was often asserted that when the time came for Britain to be able to do to Berlin what Germany was doing to London, there would be a different story to tell. That this judgement was sound is borne out by Mr. Harsch, the Christian Science Monitor's Berlin correspondent who has recently returned to the United States and who wrote a series of articles for the Monitor on war time conditions in Germany. Mr. Harsch points out that the average German have by experience and tuition been taught to view war from a distance and that when viewed from a distance it seemed less horrible than it really is. Before this war commenced, Germans were repeatedly told that Berlin would not be bombed, that the distance was too great for British planes to travel. Upon the fall of France, Berliners felt themselves even more secure as British planes were unable to take-off from continental air plane fields. Apparently in the German make-up there is a feeling that it is quite alright to bring war and devastation to the lands of other peoples, but by some divine law the soil of Germany must not be violated! Moreover it has been demonstrated that while there are plenty of courageous Germans, when fighting on foreign soil, when their own country is being smashed up they are more than ready to talk of peace. .

It will be remembered that following some heavy raids on London, Great Britain retaliated with some raids on Berlin and some days ago, headlines in the dailies were saying "1000 Killed in Berlin." Since that time air raids on Great Britain have been quite light and as we write, London has enjoyed comparitive calm for twelve successive nights. Perhaps the Nazis are just thinking up some more devilment, perhaps they are conserving their planes and all resources, or perhaps, having felt the fury of British bombs bursting on Berlin they are less keen to drop bombs on London. But whatever the reason for the lull, we feel now, like we did last fall, that the best way to protect London is to blast the heart out of Berlin. After all, if our cars heard aright, German raiders have been responsible for 20,000 civilian deaths in Great Britain. With the limited number of planes at their disposal the British have had to concentrate on invasion bases, and any place where the German war machine was gaining strength, deeming this to be the wisest use of the equipment at hand. But now American planes are arriving in Great Britain in increasing numbers, it is quite likely that the residents of Berlin will be accorded the same kind of treatment given to the residents of London.

"LOVE DIMINISHES NOT"

MAGNA CHARTA, signed in 1215, is generally taken as the ultimate foundation of British liberty and indirectly of American liberty. Not so familiar, yet hardly less significant, is the wording of a Polish Act of the year 1413:

"Nor can that endure which has not its foundation upon love. For love alone diminishes not, but shines with its own light, makes an end of discord, softens the fires of hate, restores peace to the world, brings together the sundered, redresses wrongs, aids all and injures none. And who so invokes its aid shall find peace and safety and have no fear of future ill."
Bulletins from Britain.

WHEAT ACREAGE LIKELY TO REMAIN WHAT ACREAGE

Wheat acreage in the four chief wheat exporting countries is likely to show a substantial net reduction during the coming year, according to a review released today by the Foreign Grain Company, Limited.

Faced with the prospect of curtailed overseas markets for an indefinite period, the four chief wheat exporting countries are making plans to deal with the 1941 wheat crop. In Australia, the Pioneer review points out, legislation has already been adopted. In Canada, the government has put forward a number of proposals which are now being debated in Parliament. In the United States, the machinery of adjustment is in process of revision. The Argentine is less advanced with its plans than the other three surplus producers, but there are signs that the policy followed last year is due forsome important changes.

Though differing greatly one from another, the wheat policies of these countries have one common objective. They all provide for some sort of a guaranteed return to the farmer; in Canada, Argentina and Australia, by means of a minimum price, and in the United States by means of a government loan. In Australia, Canada and the United States, there is likely to be some control over quantities marketable. The Argentine has not yet arrived at a decision on this point.

Most significant of all, in terms of the world wheat supplies the Pioneer review continues, is the tendency to bring acreage under control. In Australia, farmers will be compelled to plant in accordance with government direction, whereas this may not, in fact, involve any reduction from previous years. In Canada, there will be no compulsory control, but farmers will be encouraged to reduce their wheat acreage by marketing quotas, options and by payments for producing alternative approved crops. In the United States, also, farmers will be free to plant as much as they wish, but if they exceed government allotments they will fail to enjoy income benefits, such as government loans, and may suffer penalties in the marketing of excess production. The Argentine is reported to be contemplating a reduction of ten per cent in wheat acreage during the coming year. By and large, there seems to be no reason to doubt that acreage sown to wheat in the four chief wheat exporting countries as a group will show a substantial net reduction during the coming year.

IODINE FOR LIVE STOCK

Iodine is not a "cure all" but has some preventive and curative properties which make it valuable for certain purposes. There are a number of diseases common to young animals which may be prevented by the proper use of iodine, says R. Van Rice, Experimental Farm Station, Indian Head, Sask. Some of these diseases are lumpiness of jaw, joint ills of foals, goiter of lambs, and "big neck" or goiter of calves. Some areas are free from these troubles due to the fact that sufficient iodine is present in the water or food to supply the needs of the animals, hence, where such diseases are unknown, the addition of iodine to the feed or water is unnecessary. The prevalence of these troubles in the prairie provinces, and so that in most cases the addition of iodine to the ration of pregnant animals is desirable.

Iodized salt as purchased on the market is not always satisfactory because after a period of exposure to air, the iodine gradually disappears from the salt and becomes in time insufficient present for the needs of animals.

An alternate plan is to add the iodine to the salt just before using. This is easily done by adding small ounces of potassium iodide crystals in a cup of warm water, sprinkling one hundred pounds of dry salt, and mixing thoroughly. The salt should be kept in a shaded for all live stock and is generally more satisfactory than block salt. Potassium iodide crystals may be obtained from any druggist.

To administer iodine to pregnant animals, the iodized salt, mixed as required, kept before the animals all through the year, may be adequate for cattle and sheep; but for pregnant mares and sows most breeders like to feed more iodine, particularly if iodized salt of known strength has not been used.

For mares, a common practice is to feed half a teaspoonful in the feed twice per month during the greater part of the gestation period.

In the case of brood sows, one ounce of potassium iodide is dissolved in one gallon of water, and one tablespoonful of the solution is fed to each sow daily in the feed for at least two months before farrowing.

USE A MERCURY WANT AD

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

People all over Canada have been making suggestions as to what should be done about the future of Canadian wheat industry. Some think that a considerable part of our Prairie wheat acreage must be turned to livestock production. Others think that industrial use offers an outlet for quantities of wheat. Still others consider that wheat can be processed economically into alcohol. Another large group believes that we must reduce acreage so that only sufficient wheat is produced to meet the limited demand as it existed just before the War.

I do believe myself that these things will in my last hope. I feel live stock result in reduced income and so in sadness and depression to the farmer, and to all those who depend directly and indirectly upon the rural industry. It seems to me, that there is one thing that can be done, and that is for Governments to remove the high tariffs and other restrictions against international trade and demand the importation of foreign goods; that these restrictions have unquestionably been the main reason for the reduced demands for wheat, so for the loss of our foreign surpluses, hence for the lower prices.

If after this War international trade is freed from restrictions, then foreign demands for Canadian wheat, for one food save, would soon greatly increase.

would be affected.

Mr. Brunsden stated that the farming industry is a tremendous factor in the economic life of Canada and therefore every man and woman should have some say in the marketing of his agricultural products.

The C.F.A. is a non-political farmer's organization and any bonafied organization connected with the Agricultural Industry is eligible to join.

Some of the following things are tangible evidence of its work.

In Alberta they were instrumental in having the Vancouver differential freight rate retained. At Tofield the means 5c per bushel more to the grower for wheat sold through the board.

They have helped in having passed legislation in regard to farm labour, compulsory military training. The compulsory rail grading of hays is under consideration and they have worked for several years on the different marketing boards.

The C.F.A. is a non-political, farmer controlled, farmer financed, farmer directed, farmer dominated, farmer governed, farmer owned, farmer operated, farmer everything whatever necessary.

In conclusion the following resolution was passed:

"That the farmers of Tofield form an organization and affiliate with the C.F.A. The name to be decided at the next meeting."

A much enjoyed lunch was served at noon. Mr Bellamy and the men of the district looking after the refreshments did a splendid job.

Have you seen the Ford . . . the big new 1941 Ford. In actual feet and inches it's the roomiest car in its price class. Greatest inside length! Greatest total seating width! Extra knee-room and head-room! Wider doors! Larger windshield! A spring-base that's inches longer.

It's the big car with the thrifty engine. Only Ford, at this price, is powered with an eight. Eight cylinders for smoothness as in America's highest priced cars. Gasoline economy, that has outstripped all competition in its class, in one official contest after another. Long life and reliability that persuades Ford owners to buy one Ford after another.

What's more, the 1941 Ford has that big car "feel"—that roadhugging stability on the curves or on the straightaway.

This year Ford riding qualities are a revelation—a completely new ride made possible by "Slow-Motion Springs," plus improved shock absorbers, new stabilizer, a more rigid frame.

Ford prices are still lowest. Get in touch with a Ford dealer and see what an attractive deal he is willing to offer.

WAR SERVICES ORGANIZATION FUND RAISING RINK

The War Services Campaign now being waged throughout Canada got under way here this week.

At time of writing active canvassing has not been commenced but no doubt will in the course of a few days.

Father Schmeltzer has undertaken to direct this work here and all citizens should endeavor to make some contribution to the fund. The boys in uniform have undertaken a definite task for us and when the giving of a dollar or two will help to make that task less onerous there are few who will say no. There are quite a number of lads from this district in the forces, any one of whom you would gladly entertain if you could. A gift to the war services fund is the best best.

LAKESIDE

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Murray, Mr. R. C. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Abernethy and Mr. Graham went to Edmonton on Monday and to the guest jay of Miss Craig and the people, purchased a piano for Lakeshore school. This is going to make festival practice much easier and pleasanter this spring than in previous years. Mr. Jones brought the piano from the city on Tuesday, so that no time was lost in putting it to use.

Rita Eaton has gone into the hog raising business. She held the lucky ticket last Friday when the young porker was raffled at Community Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Abernethy returned last Friday evening from a honeymoon trip to Banff, Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton. Reception later on Friday night a merry din in Lloyd's yard proclaimed the fact that the neighbors were arriving. Even the dog joined heartily, if clamorously, in the impromptu orchestra. The newlyweds were "bill-trapped" and taken to the hall to receive their share of the loot concreted in readiness for the occasion.

A dance was in progress at the hall and there either fathers failed or were able to join in the fun, and extended congratulations and good wishes to the bride and groom.

A second charivari was staged on Sunday afternoon when the boys of Cowgey's Train group made a noisy entry into Lloyd's back yard and after thus expressing their good wishes, they made short work of the sexagon apples and chocolate bars that George passed around.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Warner were surprised to see a fleet of cars arriving at their home April 8th was Mr. and Mrs. Warner's fifteenth wedding anniversary and a number of their friends, unable to get together on Sunday, had gathered a couple of days later in honor of the event. Until a few of the later guests arrived, Mr. Burke conducted a quiz, and after that, bridge was played. At midnight, tables were cleared of cards and a delicious lunch was served by several of the ladies. The perfect touch being added when an anniversary cake decorated with 15 candles was set before Mr. and Mrs. Warner, who, with the district's most recently married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Abernethy, were seated at a special table. Bridge prizes were awarded to the winners, Mrs. Coutts and Lloyd Wood, and the losers Mrs. H. Rogers and Mr. Scott. Then Mr. Murray on behalf of the guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Warner with a gift of china as an expression of the good wishes and congratulations of the crowd. Mr. Warner thanked them all, and then in answer to a special request of Mrs. Warner's, Mr. Murray sang. The evening closed with all singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Art Young entertained at a whist party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Phillips whose 22nd wedding anniversary fell on that day. The rest of us join with those who were at Young's in asking that Mr. and Mrs. Phillips accept our best wishes for many more happy years together.

Monday was also Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Jones' wedding anniversary and their 23rd. They were planning to be at Young's but Mr. Jones crushed his finger in the tractor and was not feeling up to a night's gaiety. We hope the injury was not serious and to Mr. and Mrs. Jones on their anniversary, our sincere congratulations.

Tu-day (Wednesday) is Mr. and Mrs. J. Jones 15th wedding anniversary. To them also may we extend hearty congratulations and the wish that they may see many happy anniversaries.

Our new budget this week is well sprinkled with wedding anniversaries, all of which prove in the spring a young man's fancy seriously turns to thoughts of love.

Mrs. Warner senior of Edmonton is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Warner.

Melvin Epley started 1941 threshing in this district when he commenced work on a field of oats the other day.

Maybe eating doughnuts is not much of a novelty, but when it comes to eating doughnuts made in Cornhusa, Lake and made from a five hundred dollar recipe, as Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ingram has been doing, well we think that is something out of the ordinary. The doughnuts were sent to Mrs. Ingram by her sister, Mrs. Roy Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Harrison, son Ralph and Mrs. A. F. Schultz spent Monday in Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears and son Gary, Mrs. G. W. Sears, Mrs. A. F. Schultz and Kathleen Ingram motored to the city on Thursday of last week, returning in the evening.

Rendezvous in Vienna

(A story of Romance and Adventure in Europe Immediately Prior to the Outbreak of the Present War)

CHAPTER ONE—An Invitation to Whitehall.

It was London, England, less than a month prior to the fateful third of September, 1939.

Around the Marble Arch, the late afternoon traffic milled in a struggling medley of snorting hub-caps, never-ending streams of nondescript vehicles — converging upon the point from "impossible" directions at the same time—added still further to the apparently hopeless confusion.

In marked contrast to the impatient scurrying in and fro on every hand, several London "bobbies" — looking de-debbed after the Great War, if aggressive personality, upon the threshold of forty in rare comfort, able forty, as he expressed it) and just under six foot in height, the broad shoulders and well-built frame —ready carrying its hundred and eighty-five pounds — placed Monroe in the big man category at a glance.

With thick, dark brown hair, slightly grey at the temples, clean-shaven countenance and a manner still boyish at times, he appeared to belied his age, however; and thirty-five—or six, was the mental prime of most people and one had to see him first time, especially when his plain but attractive features became lighted into a pleasant smile, and his clear blue-grey eyes twinkled mischievously.

A fitting background to the forceful personality of the subject of this happy soldier-of-fortune mentality developed since 1920, when Monroe struck out on his own to make fame and independence for himself in the topsy-turvy post-war world of that period.

During the years which followed he had tried his hand at many things, sometimes with a degree of success, sometimes the results had been a total failure. Usually the whim of that fickle lady Dame Fortune had decided which, so it is not surprising that a strain of fatalism had slowly crept into his make-up.

Nevertheless he was quiet, intelligent and possessed of a wide general knowledge—augmented by avid reading in spare moments—reversed to an extensive and useful range of miscellaneous subjects. Sympathetic, and in some respects, deeply emotional, the underlying strain of idealism in his character prompted by these two last traits often made him violent with rage and calculating when dealing with those he considered disadvantage.

Imbued with a passion for gardening and interesting a keen sense of color, he also appreciated lovely handscapes or artistic effects in other forms; while an excellent memory (particularly for faces) was undoubtedly a natural gift. Punctuality, a keen sense of humor, patience and method, all contributed developed since childhood were now permanent attributes which had become—through the intervening years of practice—subconsciously automatic.

Wince or spirits be indulged in very sparingly, being practically a abstainer where the drinking habit was concerned; on the other hand, he was a heavy pipe smoker and liked ally six cigars, the latter being his weakness he declared that many of his American friends had facetiously dubbed him a second "General Grant."

A hewwy had-fellow-well-met air and a heart-to-heart manner which enabled him to make friends quickly and easily was an asset which had often stood him in good stead, and, more peculiarly enough, had at times got him into trouble. Monroe could ask "Something out of the way, I'll bet," Sir Colonel Sir Charles Lorne, K.B.E., D.S.O., M.C., to whom Ken had just been speaking was one of the big wigs of the British Intelligence Service, and he busy at that moment to be concerned with anything but matters of national or grave importance, and seeing a stranger, a thoughtful man and thinking of the many years he had known Sir Charles—ever since the last war in fact—when they met for the first time as junior subalterns in the same Tank Battalion. It sounds like it," Ken concluded his mild reverie, "and if that proves to be the case I think I'll take a shot at it. There isn't anything else doing right now, and sure as hell you're bounded straight for war again. So even odds! It's Kismet, anyway!"

NAPOLEON AND HITLER—

(The New York Times, March 23, 1941)

IN HIS "Principles of War" Foch pointed out that since the French Revolution wars have been waged by whole nations and that they have been largely economic in character. It follows that they have had similar characteristics. Historians have not failed to point out that the Napoleonic wars strikingly resemble that in which Hitler is now engaged.

Napoleon had no fleet after Trafalgar; Hitler has none. Both were therefore compelled to harry British shipping—Napoleon with improvised cruisers and privateers; Hitler with submarines, airplanes and mines. Napoleon dominated most of Europe; Hitler has almost equalled him. Napoleon instituted the Continental Blockade to cut off British trade; Hitler has imitated him. The British retaliated with a much more effective blockade of their own in 1806-1812 and in 1940-41. Just as Napoleon coerced Sweden, Denmark, Portugal, Spain and Italy into a position favorable to him, so Hitler forced much of Europe to bow to his will. Napoleon had his fifth columnists even as Hitler has his today. It was Napoleon who invented the Blitzkrieg and not Hitler, but both saw that rapid blows alone could quickly reduce one country after another.

Great Britain's black year in Napoleon's time was 1811 and it was harder than 1941 is likely to be. It was then that the British debt rose to $700,000,000 —fourteen times the 1914 figure. Everywhere there was crushing taxation. But more important than money in war are resources. Napoleon drained those of France and his conscript allies; Hitler is following his example. Britain has the resources of its Empire and the United States; Hitler must extract what he can from conquered peoples. The struggle therefore reduces itself, as it did in 1806-1812, to Britain's ability to hold out and maintain her command of the sea. An economically exhausted Europe was no match for the British Navy in Napoleon's day; it will be no match today if bomber and submarine can be held in check.

GOVERNMENT URGES EARLY DELIVERY OF BALANCE OF 1940 CROP

Farmers of this community will be interested in a statement made in the House of Commons by Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and Commerce, in announcing the Government's 1941 wheat policy. Mr. MacKinnon said:

"I would like to suggest to farmers to keep storage space at their local shipping points filled as far as possible in order to prevent an undue rush of wheat in the closing weeks of the crop year. I wish to stress this.

"There is, I believe, no doubt that the quota system as it was applied this year by the Canadian Wheat Board has given general satisfaction, and to an small degree the orderly working out of a quota system has been due to the splendid co-operation which the wheat board has received from wheat producers throughout Canada, from elevator companies and their country agents and from all those who have business interests generally in the prairie provinces." All farmers should carefully study the government's 1941 wheat policy with a particular view to making their decision concerning delivery of the balance of their 1940 crop before the 1941 delivery quotas become effective. The price which the Wheat Board will pay on the 1940 crop will have reached 70 cents per bushel by the end of July basis Fort William or Vancouver, which price includes farm storage. On August 1st, if the Government's 1941-42 plans are accepted by Parliament the price reverts to 70 cents per bushel coupled with further restrictions on deliveries. Farmers should not leave delivery off until too late in the season in case elevator space is not available at that time.

SNUFF BY THE TON

And No. 1's! Among its English Makers in 100 Years

Hundreds of tons of snuff are still being sent overseas from Great Britain every twelve months. In the last year of peace the quantity was 982 tons, but most of it was used for killing insects.

Of the whole amount six tons every was for human beings, and not all of that for sniffing. Much was in a moist form for applying between the gums and the cheek.

Gone are the days when the gallant, with a courtley bow, proffered snuff from a jewelled box. Today the snuff taker is of polished wood or papier mache, or more often the cheap sausage-skin container. It is a small tin in his waistcoat pocket.

The Canadian lumberjack still smells a lot; so do the Scandinavian population of Wisconsin and Minnesota, and the negroes of the South. The people of U.S.A. are, in fact, the world's greatest snuffers to day. They sniff up 20,000 tons of it in a year.

The claim that snuff is a germ killer is borne out by one of the biggest English manufacturers. They have been manufacturing it for more than a hundred years, and in all that time not one of their workers has ever had the 'flu.

FLAG ETIQUETTE

(It is suggested that you keep this for reference)

(Issued on Military Day—signature, although not in connection with Sec. 1433 R.S. (Can.—1939).

1. The Union Jack is the official flag of Canada and should be flown as such.

2. The flag, when hoisted, should have the head of the strike of St. Andrew's Cross above the red stripe of St. Patrick's Cross in the hoist, and under it in the fly.

3. The flag should not be flown before sunrise, nor allowed to remain up after sunset.

4. The dimensions of the flag according to Heraldry, should be either square or in the proportion of two to one.

5. A flag flying at half mast is a symbol of mourning. The flag should be raised first to the masthead and then dropped slowly one flag width below the mast-head. This is to allow room for the flag of the "Great Reaper." When lowering the flag from half-mast, it will first be hoisted up and then lowered in the usual manner.

6. A Union Jack crossed with another flag or with daggers, should be on the right of that flag (our left), and the staff in front of the other staff.

7. International usage forbids display of the flag of one nation above that of another on the same flag-pole, in peace time. When flags of two or more nations are displayed, it should be from separate staffs of the same height. The flags should be of the same size.

8. The Union Jack is a group of flags should be in the centre and at the highest point of the group.

9. At public meetings, the flag should be displayed above and behind the speaker. It must not be used as a drape for table or platform, and nothing must be placed on it.

10. At unveiling ceremonies, the flag should be carried aloft to cover the memorial for the remainder of the service. It should not be hoisted to the ground at the end of the ceremony.

11. In church, the Union Jack should be on a staff and on the congregation's right when on the main floor, and on the minister's right if on the platform.

12. When carried in procession, with several flags in line, it should be in the centre of that line.

13. When the flag is displayed in a manner other than being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat. When drapings or festoons are required, bunting should be used, but not the flag itself, excepting at the centres of the decorative scheme, and then it should not be placed lower

BRITISH UNITED PRESS SENDS NEWS FLASHES TO CFRN

CFRN's News Bureau keeps with activity these days as the teletype printer in the News Room clatters noisily from early morning to late at night, flashing in the news from B.U.P. reporters all over the globe. British United Press have recently extended their Western Radio News Circuit and CFRN's News Editor, Stan Ross, is kept "hard at it" trying to condense the volume of news into well-balanced fifteen-minute newscasts.

The dark, like a sweeper mowing down,
The wings in the sky above the town,
A rattle of guns and the white smoke rings
Shaking the very roof where he clings
Bombs ...incendiaries ...yet through it all
He'll stick to his roof though the bombers fall,
And guard with his very life and limb
That one small place that was left with him.
For the glory that England proudly wears,
Springs from the hearts of the men she rears.

ROOF WATCHER

By Eden Jeppe

He's cold and tired and scared to death
Just sort of living from breath to breath,
Perched on the roof in the trembling night,
With never the comforting gleam of a light,
Crouched in the lee of a chimney pot,
Trying to find a sheltered spot.

What thoughts are his as he watches there
Alone on the roof - while a crimson flare
Lights up the dark to the north and east
And the white clouds froth in the sky like yeast,
While the moon, like a cradle tipped and amid Rocking there in peace through it all.
Down on the pavement far below
No one is pausing to and fro,
It seems unreal, like a ghastly show.

The huddled houses almost seem
Part of the earth in the smothered gloom,
And the sky and the wind and the
And the lonely night.

As he crushes half asleep and awake
The storm go and the searchlights rake

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

Should the Government's hope for reduction of wheat acreage actually take place, it will mean that the greater part of the land which previous farmers saw this spring will be summerfallow.

The extra stored up moisture in summerfallow promotes additional wheat growth, and on oats and barley grown on summerfallow takes a longer time to ripen than when sown on stubble.

The longer ripening period usually results in patches of the crop being still unripe at cutting time, and so the threshed grain may contain immature or green kernels which lower the quality, hence the grade. Under these circumstances, therefore, it would seem wise for farmers this year to try to sow as large a percentage as possible of their oats and barley which are to be planted on summerfallow, as early as possible. Barley and oats might even this year, be sown before wheat.

Early sowing of oats will certainly give a better assurance that all the grain is thoroughly ripe before cutting, and so will result in plump, well-matured, bright kernels which will bring the highest grade; likewise early sowing of barley will increase the chances of suitable varieties being thoroughly ripe, and so bring eligible for the malting grades.

BOARD OF TRADE CELEBRATES 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Almost as if in answer to his thoughts the silence which his room was rudely interrupted by the sharp ringing of a telephone bell.

Turning the paper aside with a gesture of impatience, he crossed to the instrument—standing upon his desk in a far corner of the room, and lifting the receiver answered the call by giving his number, "Kensington 0467."

He was instantly greeted by hearing a familiar military voice saying: "Hello, Ken, old boy! Just got in."

"Well, I'll be jiggered!" Monroe ejaculated. "Charlie Lorne—of all people."

"The same," the voice replied, "and just about fed up trying to run you to earth, young fellow-me-lad."

"I'm awfully sorry, Charlie, but I've had a pretty busy week of it to-day, trying to save my little Rosso from starving, as it were, but it's 'no hon'—I'm afraid."

"What's up?" Lorne asked. "Anything serious, old boy, wrong?"

"Pesty!" Ken snorted in reply. "The financial backers behind this last deal of mine have quit cold—left me in the lurch completely — in fact, we're all washed up!"

"Good Lord! What rotten luck!" Lorne replied surprised accent. "Any chance of finding someone else to take over your interest and carry on, do you think?"

"Not these days," Monroe confessed gloomily, thought thought of that, but you can't even pry a cently out of anybody right now, much less pounds, shillings and pence, unless it's for a 'dogone' and plenty of thread grub."

"Unfortunately, that's only too true," his friend admitted. "Is it going to hit you very hard—financially I mean?"

"Shall when the last straw!", Monroe said in a lugubrious voice."

"What a sudden change!" Lorne commented sympathetically. "Especially after all your work and effort. Isn't there, at least, any hope—not the only one."

"I quite agree—but that's damn poor consolation for me!" Monroe grunted.

"Under the circumstances, I suppose you're at a loose end; at any rate, not tied up with any big, aren't you?"

"Until the curtain rises on this forthcoming International Inferno—and Act one to the tune of the Second Overture gets under way, then we'll all be very busy. And I don't mean perhaps!"

"Very much so," the other crooned. "In the interim, however, this telephone conversation seems almost providential."

"How come?"

"Because the reason I have been trying to get hold of you so urgently was to ask if you could spare a few days away from London, and it looks as if the fates had already taken a hand..."

"What's on your mind, Charlie?" "I'd rather not say any more over the phone; besides, I'd sooner see you personally," he replied.

"Right-o!" Ken agreed. "I understand; when do you suggest?"

"Can you lunch tonight? Here at the office? Can you manage noon-ish, say?"

"I'll be there with bells on," Monroe promised.

"Cheerio then—see you this evening."

"Cheerio," Ken responded as he hung up.

Now what sort of a bee can old Charlie have in his bonnet?" Monroe muttered, turning to the newspaper he had been reading lately, at the announcement of the Anglo-French pact spread across the front page in sensational headlines of red ink. "Something out of the ordinary, I'd bet," Sir Colonel Sir Charles Lorne, K.B.E., D.S.O., M.C., to whom Ken had just been speaking was one of the big wigs of the British Intelligence Service, and he busy at that moment to be concerned with anything but matters of national or grave importance, and seeing a stranger, a thoughtful man and thinking of the many years he had known Sir Charles—ever since the last war in fact—when they met for the first time as junior subalterns in the same Tank Battalion. It sounds like it," Ken concluded his mild reverie, "and if that proves to be the case I think I'll take a shot at it. There isn't anything else doing right now, and sure as hell you're bounded straight for war again. So even odds! It's Kismet, anyway!"

A MERCURY WANT AD

ADMIT BRITISH GOODS FREE

The Rt. Hon. W.L. McKenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, on Thursday, March 20th, 1941, drew to the attention of the House of Commons the startling fact that Britain was unable to secure anything like sufficient Canadian dollars with which to purchase the war munitions—ships, aeroplanes, shells tanks and guns, which she has ordered from Canada.

Mr. King showed that after Great Britain had returned to Canada all the Canadian dollars secured from the sale of British goods, from British gold and from the sale of British owned securities in Canada, there was still remains a substantial deficit of over of the lieutenant-governor in council As a body they have power to regulate marketing of poultry products and the storage, packaging, distribution and marketing of such products. It will be remiled that a plebiscite held last November decided by a large majority to favor establishment of a producer board.

Today many kinds of British goods enter Canada under great difficulties—difficulties of climbing over high tariff walls and of passing through the entanglements of custom duties and other obstructions and hindrances to trade.

Considering that we in Canada are, comparatively speaking, the only industrial labor, it would seem to be to sort of simple wisdom on the part of the Canadian Government to reduce all duties and tariffs against all British goods, so that more British goods can cross Canadian frontiers. Such action would have the following advantages, which would be of immediately returned to Canada in payment of war munitions being purchased by Great Britain.

TEN TREASURES

"Ten Treasures" is the title of a booklet of poems written and published by Horace McKellar, now in Eastern Canada, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. McHeffey of Tofield. The booklet contains in addition to poems, some copies of original sketches made by the author while in Europe a few years ago.

Following is a copy of one of the poems.

MY TWO SHIPS

I am my vagabond mind I dream of a ship
With an uncharted course that takes me to sea,
That will cross all the deep blue oceans wide,
And touch lands I've long wanted to see.

It will toss in the gales of the blustery north,
Kiss the lustrous sun in the still South Seas,
It will poke its nose into every port;
And take me where ever I please.

Then again, I dream o' another ship;
But the route it sails, 'tis a definite course;
For it car-ies me straight to a certain peace,
Far away from all strange bleak shores.

It is taking me back to my native land,
To the place of my birth, deep in Canada's West;
To the spot in the world that I cherish the most,
And the door once I love the best.

Father Schmetzer has informed the Mercury that active canvassing in Tofield for the War Services Fund will commence next Monday.

For the convenience of country residents desiring to contribute in this fund, Miss Muriel Malcolm at the Royal Alexandra Hotel will accept contributions.

It is hoped and expected that the response will be generous. This money goes to provide those little extras that the men in the services appreciate so much and which have to be provided by this means.

Farmers may instruct their elevator agent to make out a grain ticket to War Services Fund for grain delivered and contributed to the fund. Grain sold in this way does not affect the farmer's quota.

Cornhill Council Ponder Road Maintenance Problem

At a regular meeting of Cornhill Council held on Thursday last (Friday was a statute holiday), the councillors pondered over the road maintenance problem, which with the advent of so much heavy truck traffic, is becoming a serious one.

There were present at the meeting: Reeve Walker; Councillors Anderson, Bruce, Coombes, Kortzman and Swanger.

The mission together with necessary ground for payment at the last meeting were read and formally adopted.

Mr. Weber interviewed Council and said he desired to straighten out a land deal made with the Council several years ago. Considerable discussion ensued and in the end it was decided to make an entirely new agreement this coming fall. Mr. Weber had paid some money and agreed to pay an amount equal to the 1940 taxes for this year's use of the land, but seems to be getting along all right now.

Councillor Swabey said he did not like the interest part of machinery agreements. He pointed out that the interest clause could not be eliminated but that ownership made a concession this year, allowing two per cent on any amount paid over instead of only on full cash deals as formerly. The question was left over for the time being.

The Baptist Church at Kingman has been sold to the Pentecostals. They wanted it for extra parking space and requested it for the nominal sum of one dollar. On motion of Councillor Anderson, the request was tabled to next meeting in order to make sure of a correct description of the lot and that the M.D. had the necessary authority to sell it.

A discussion then ensued regarding the advisability of purchasing a new motor grader. Following are a number of points brought out:

Road maintenance by motor grader was cheaper than the same work done by horses. It was often difficult to procure farmers who could and would take to the road immediately when called. Maintenance must be done quite soon after a rain to be effective. It was no use building roads unless they are properly maintained.

Councillor Anderson thought that if Council seriously considered purchasing such a unit there should be a public demonstration at which ratepayers could attend and council could get their reaction. Such a grader with a 50 h.p. diesel engine using Gasoline as fuel would cost 50c. per hour to operate; this is including operator's wages. It should grade two miles per hour.

A grader which is known as No. 211 has 50 h.p. motor, cab, starter and lights and costs $7311.00. Such could be leased on road service can be had for an additional $240.00 and a power plow for an additional $600.00

The grader, so it was stated is satisfactorily suited for work in hilly country, having a blade which can be turned around and tilted at almost any angle. A preliminary demonstration, without obligation, will be given at Wainwright in the near future.

Town of Tofield wrote saying that they would like the gravel portion of roads Tofield streets and suggested Cornhill Council would do likewise.

Reeve reported as to whether it could be spared off rural roads for this work. It was decided that as the machine made frequent trips to town, it would undertake the work on this and on motion by Reeve Walker the request was favorably acted upon.

Mr. W. T. Moore interviewed Council regarding renting S.W. 10-41-20. Council had heard it was for rent. Council informed him that the owner was in hospital and some one of the land had been made in previous years by arrangement with the owner. Mr. Moore's tenant was requested to investigate this.

Mr. Harry Kozek interviewed Council requesting that a special bond

LINDBROOK

Easter passed with lovely weather here and now everyone is busy getting ready for the "spring offensive."

The bombing season is starting now and we will remember the bombing by Hastings Lake aeroplanes sent re the used for stimulant to both lambs and sheepers, moved on the sheepyard.

The dance at the hall on Monday evening was quite a success and a large crowd assembled to enjoy the fun. The Keanch orchestra supplied the music and it was good. By the way are they anything to do with the "Cossack Singers" and do they play "The Volga" Boatmen?" We've seen a few of that kind of sailor and at times their vocabulary is very lurid, especially on barges; very salty exchange of views passed by passing craft. We hear the refreshment booth sold quite a lot of pop, it being a warm evening, so we hope the funds of the hall swelled up enough to carry on with hall improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Robinson motored down to Saskatchewan on business last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Holgsland from Dodds spent last Sunday with Mrs. Hooper here. Mrs. Hooper returned with them to Dodds where she spent a short holiday.

Mr. Albert Lindgren was home on leave from Camrose where he is stationed, over the week end. He looks very fit and has gained quite a few pounds in weight whilst there and says that he likes the life fine.

Gunner Chris Campion was also home on leave for Easter from Manitoba, he returned Monday morning.

Masters Lorne, Garry and Donald Hooper, sons of L. Hooper are over-seeing their Easter holidays with their grandmother, Mrs. Hooper of Lindbrook. They were accompanied by Miss Gladys Smith of Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Chevrenes and daughter spent the Easter holidays with Mr. Chevrenes's parents at Killam.

Mrs. P. Moon celebrated her 25th birthday on Easter Sunday. Friends and neighbors called to attend their host whether.

Easter services were held at the church, conducted by Rev. Vingo and were well attended.

Mrs. Phaden wishes to thank everyone who so kindly visited her and sent their wishes for her recovery during her sojourn in the hospital

FORMER TOFIELDER KILLED IN ENGLAND

Gnr. Robert S. Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Evans of Athabasca, was fatally injured in a motor car accident during a black out in England recently. Bob Evans was very well known here having worked at the Tofield Creamery for two or three years immediately prior to enlistment. He was one of the first to offer his services for King and Country from this district, enlisting very soon after war was declared.

Bob was well liked locally and was in popular demand as referee at hockey games, knowing the game well and being quite definite in his decisions. Very many people in this district will greatly regret his untimely passing.

Rendezvous in Vienna

Synopsis of preceding instalments.

Ben Monroe, a Canadian of British parentage but also of many years' residence in the United States, finding himself marking time in London, England, three weeks before the end chapter of the Great War started in earnest.

Accepts an invitation from his friend Colonel Sir Charles Lorne, of the British Secret Service, to attend at Colonel's office in Whitehall and discuss a matter of great importance.

Monroe has an inkling of that request—in view of the disturbed international situation, and his own previous service with Sir Charles in the British Army—points to some dangerous mission which he is going to be asked to carry out as an intelligence agent.

Now go on with the story from here.

CHAPTER TWO

It was shortly after seven o'clock that evening when Monroe, leaving his flat to keep his appointment with Sir Charles Lorne, drove leisurely along Brompton Road towards Queen Street.

Turning right at the intersection, he carried straight on, beyond Sloane Street, and thence across Belgrave Square to Hyde Park Corner. Carefully following his way over that maze of traffic junction he bore right, then left under the impressive monumental arch which guards the entrance at this point, into the grounds of St. James

One inside the park the car, with its motor softly purring, rolled pro-officially down Constitution Hill, half circled the beautiful Victoria Memorial, then nosed left into the Birdcage Walk which terminates in Great George Street and Westminster.

Turning left again and driving slowly north up Whitehall, Ben pulled into the curb a few minutes later and parked his car in front of a grim, sombre mediaeval structure, one of several in this famous thoroughfare, now used by the British Government as offices for its many and varied departments.

Although the nerve centre of MI.5, (Military Intelligence Dept. Five), the special activities carried on in the particular building entered by Monroe would never be suspected by the general public, where, once inside its frowning portals open day and night, one is promptly accosted by a smart uniform guard on duty, who politely but firmly enquires the nature of one's business.

Giving his card to the man who came forward to meet him, Ben brief-ly stated his appointment.

"That is quite correct, sir, and right on the dot," the messenger smiled in reply, as the deep voice of Big Ben reverberated through the still evening air. "Colonel Lorne left instructions for you to go straight up to his room, sir," the man continued, "You know your way, sir, I understand?"

"Oh Yes, I've been here quite often before, so I can saddle along by myself, thanks very much."

"Very good, sir!" the messenger concluded, as Monroe turned towards a drab corridor leading to the central rotunda of the building, and from there a wide stone stairway ascended to the upper regions. Climbing these, Ben turned along the first floor hall-way and stopping before a plain, dismal door sans descriptive markings of any sort whatever, tapped firmly upon the panel

"Come in!" a pleasant voice invited. Entering as he was bidden, a beaming "Good evening, Ben; punctual as ever!" greeted him from the figure of Colonel Lorne, seated at a massive old fashioned desk.

"My one redeeming virtue," Monroe laughingly responded, crossing forward into the room and shaking hands with his friend who had risen to welcome him.

"But you always practice it and write."

"I was wondering about that angle," Monroe replied, "and whether my inability to 'do in' Dutch would prove to be a serious obstacle." Ben put in, but all I've to play a dumb tourist on the loose my conversation in that respect won't matter very much."

"That will be the least of your troubles Ben. However, should you decide to go you will be able to leave direct from Brussels for Vienna. It's only one night and a day run from one to the other, by the Orient Express."

"Why Brussels? Why not leave direct from London?"

"Because the Continental party I previously referred to is in Brussels, and that's where you will be approved and given full details, as well as arrangements for your expenses and reward if successful."

"Can't you give me the whole story now?"

"I could but I am not at liberty to do so, as the Brussels party wishes to size up the person I recommend before resolving final arrangements."

"Does that mean that I am over in Belgium before I'll know what it's all about?"

"I'm to prefers to discuss the proposition at first hand with the individual concerned, over there."

"Suppose there is nothing doing; am I out my fare to Brussels and back?" Ben enquired bluntly.

"No not at all," his friend assured him, "I will refund your out-of-pocket expenses if you turn it down; or if, on the other hand, he does not approve of you. But I feel quite sure my selection will suit him all right, and that you likewise agree to attempt it."

"Thanks again," Ben acknowledged, "I'm good just one thing more. Do you feel certain I can handle this stunt; having due regard to all issues involved?"

"Yes I do!" Sir Charles replied without hesitation. "It might prove a bit more dangerous than some of the little adventures you've had in the past, but that's all."

"One more question. Has this party any knowledge of my affiliation? In view of his request being made by you—it looks like it—to me."

"Not unless you wish him explain the circumstances, for certain reasons which have a bearing on the situation at present."

"How soon do you want me to leave for Brussels?" Ben enquired, "and to whom do I report, sir?"

"At once!" the Colonel responded "Upon arrival I want you to get in touch with Count Felix von Arnheim immediately. His address is 28 Rue St. Anne, about ten minutes by cab from Le Gare du Nord. It's near to Porte du Namur and as you know Brussels fairly well, that will give you no idea of the location.

"I think I know just about where it is, but the Avenue Louise section," "That's right."

"Then the Count speak English? was Monroe's next question.

"Oh, yes, just as good as we do on you will be able to converse with him quite fluently."

"Well, I'm sure that's all I need to know at present, and as you wish me to be on my way as soon as possible, I think I'll run along. I can attend to a few personal matters tonight and the night, which will leave me free to pop into Belgrave Square for a German visa in the morning, something I'd better fix up before I leave London"

"By all means," Lorne agreed with him. "You might have some difficulty getting one in Brussels if you leave it till afterwards. If you don't use it, I'll put it down to out-of-pocket expenses," he laughed, with it knowing chuckle under his breath. "But if you have it," he went on, "you will be prepared for any emergency that may arise. Whenever you could be ready to leave for Vienna without delay. And the best of luck, old scout," he added, to which Ben good humouredly replied, "Thanks 'am go more'n probably need it!"

Sir Charles rallied after him as Ben walked towards the door

"You mean," Monroe answered quietly, with a suspicion lift of his eyebrows, "if, as and when I return?" closing the door gently, and depositing the conversation comes for the duration—if they comfort me?"

"I'd probably die, I'm afraid." She replied. Nevertheless, your best plan would be to go gently as a rule on a holiday," he continued, because the greener you appear to be the better; and that's where your up-bringing as a German is really an advantage in this instance, although, at first glance it might appear otherwise.

"Before leaving Paris you should get a few cigars," his friend invited, rising and sending broadly as Monroe stood up to take his leave.

"Muchas gracias! I don't mind if I do!" Ben grinned in reply, flicking a generous handful out chiefly of the table his waistcoat pockets.

"See me immediately you return!" Sir Charles called after him as Ben

AGRICULTURE PLANNING.

Soil and climate are the main limiting factors in the development of the agriculture of any specific area. Before any project or program of farming agriculture production is undertaken, there should be a clear understanding of the soil and climatic factors.

Speaking at the Dairy Convention in Edmonton, Mr. G.S. Longman, Field Crops Commissioner, on dealing with this subject, made the following remarks "We have five distinct provinces mean by this province four of these are natural zones, formed in part of time by the joint influence of geological and climatic principles. These zones (beginning at the south of the province), are commonly known as the brown, the dark brown, the black, and the grey wooded zones. The fifth zone or zone is made up of, more irrigated districts. The designation, the practicability and scope of any agriculture policy or programme must be measured by its limitations and possibilities when applied to any one or more or all of these zones." The presence of these natural and man made soil zones should be recognized by every citizen of the province for within each there is a set of conditions that will determine the procedure we follow and the efficiency of our efforts.

PREPARING FLAX FOR SEED

It is estimated there will be an increased acreage seeded to flax during 1941. Having regard for the unfavorable weather which prevailed during the fall of 1940, and which had a determining effect upon the flax crop which was exposed to the weather, it is important that every consideration ing seeding of flax in 1941 should pay special attention to the viability of the seed. In particular, the weak, losses may be incurred. Vigorous germination is necessary if best results are to be obtained. Farmers are urged to test their flax seed for germination before seeding.

How Should Flax Seed be Cleaned For Seeding?

Since flax will not compete well with weeds it is important to clean it properly before seeding. The ordinary farm fanning mill can be used if it is provided with proper screens. For small seeded varieties a 2 X 16 per inch steel wire sieve is suitable for removing grass or large weed seeds and for large seeded varieties a 4X14 per sch is necessary. To remove the small weed seeds such as stinkweed, corn cockle, mint, wild mustard, etc., a fanning mill is necessary.

Should Flax Be Treated

Usually it is not considered necessary to treat flax seed. Beneficial results from mercurial dust treatment have been secured in certain areas, but in others the increase in yield from the dust treated seed was not significant. If growers wish to treat flax seed with the mercurial dusts should be used as formaldehyde is decidedly injurious to the germination of flax seed.

When Should Flax Be Seeded?

Flax should be seeded as soon as the danger of severe frosts has passed. It is a hardy plant and will stand several degrees of frost, but if frosts come back to the ground will not make a second growth. Seeding is often delayed to destroy the first growth of weeds but late seeding is not recommended. From the 1st to the 20th May is approximately the best time to seed flax.

The rate of seeding depends upon the variety or size of seed. Small seeded varieties are sown at a lower rate than large seeded ones. About 40 to 35 pounds per acre is recommended for such varieties. As for other crops, it is advisable to use a greater rate if seeding be delayed than for those of moderate rainfall.

When Should Flax be Harvested?

Flax is ready for cutting when the bulls are ripe. This is indicated by a change in color from a greenish to brown color. At this time the seed is fully mature. Flax, unlike wheat, does not shatter or weather easily and for this reason may be left standing until fully mature with little danger of swerving losses.

Further information on flax production may be obtained from the Field Crop Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

MARKETING HOGS TOO HEAVY OR TOO LIGHT

Poor hogs in every 10 are either too heavy or too light when marketed in Canada to make sizeable Wiltshire sides required for export to the United Kingdom, states the Agricultural Supplies Board. Every Wiltshire side shaved be of sizeable weight 55 to 65 lbs., but only two-thirds of the sides are within these weights Hog producers are urged to try to have their hogs as near 200 lb. as possible, when marketed. It will pay, urges the Board, to clinch the weight of hogs during the finishing period. The Provincial Departments of Agriculture, Dominion Experimental Farms and Agricultural Colleges are ready to co-operate with producers to help market hogs at the desired weight.

NEW CANTEEN FOR SAILORS AT HALIFAX

The Canadian Red Cross Society is contributing $20,000 to a new and enlarged $50,000 canteen and recreation building for sailors at Halifax, Nova Scotia, Emmerylin, chairman of Central Council, announced last night. The Red Cross donation was made at the request of Colonel E. A. Dennon, director auxiliary services, Department of National Defence, and has the approval of Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles, Chief of Naval Staff at Ottawa, who has stressed the "urgent need" of such a centre.

The building will be erected just outside Halifax on property provided by the Naval Command, Mr. Emmerylin said, pointing out that it would be the only recreation centre accommodating sailors who were unable to go into Halifax itself.

New Courses at Banff School of Fine Arts

Its purpose to establish and promote in Canada that wider outlook and sense of appreciation of the finer things of life which must come with a new society after the war, the Banff School of Fine Arts has arranged a particularly interesting course of studies for the month of August. The school, which is now receiving its ninth year, is sponsored by the Department of Extension of the University of Alberta, at Edmonton, in close co-operation with the Provincial Institute of Technology and Art, Calgary.

The school is by no means confined to Alberta. Last year there were 176 students, from Vancouver in the west to New York in the east, from Peace River in the North to Sunset Alice in the far south. The registration is expected to equal similar territory this year. The student body includes teachers, high school and college students and others interested in the arts purely for aesthetic reasons.

Courses regularly studied include the theatre, art, music, oral French and general classes for children covering the theatre, art and music. This year, owing to the generosity of the Carnegie Corporation special grant, new courses will be provided in applied art, weaving and design, pottery and modelling. Registration fees are extremely low,

The school building is a beautiful new structure, which was completed a year ago at a cost of $60,000. It is of chalet design and has a theatre with a seating capacity for 700, a lending library and all the finest lighting accessories, drawing rooms, music practice rooms and other musical rooms for small groups.

Students at the school also find plans for recreation in Banff National Park, Canada's finest recreation land. The hot sulphur pools, the majesty of the mountains, the thrill of meeting wild animals on the trails, riding, hiking, swimming, fishing—all these pleasures are open to the students when school is out.

Cornhill Council Ponder Road Maintenance Problem

its was wanting to make higher. Mr. Lemoh was affiliated with a big factory. On motion by Councillor Bowbay, Councillor Anderson will attend be this.

Letter from J. W. Swabey accepting position of wood inspector. He also enclosed a report of a road conference he had attended.

Letter from Dept. of M.D. appointing appointment of Mr. Chas. Holmberg as assessor was read and the one from Mr. Holmberg accepting the appointment.

Letter from Mr. E. J. Martin, M.L.A., regarding the possible formation of larger municipal districts. He requested that the A.A.M.D. be informed of the government before anything was done.

Mr. Andrew Kossack interviewed Council requesting that Council furnish him with some capsules as those he might enjoy better results. On motion of a report from the Lamoon Hospital Clinic the request was not granted.

Applications for the position of overseer of the gravel pits were considered. T. H. Jackson, R. H. Marine, Johnny Jones, and S. Dietrich all had applications in.

On motion by Councillor Anderson, J. Jones was appointed overseer of No. 29. The machine is to hit it in the M.D. yard at Tofield when not in use.

Mr. Burke interviewed Council regarding the S.E. corner of Sec. 20. He was informed council had agreed to use the gravel grader at $1.50 per hour. He asked for a price on the large grader and was quoted $4.50 per hour. He also asked for a price on the small grader and was quoted $3.50 per hour. He stated that the latter could have strictly graded at their convenience or when the M.D. was ready. He was informed that a compromise would probably be made. The town streets, tried out a little sooner than country roads and it was the intention of Council to steer such to the M.D.'s yard when not in use.

A lengthy discussion ensued regarding the appropriation of moneys for public works according to divisions. Councillor Anderson suggested that division one receive a little more due to the necessity for increased expenditure and that ratepayers generally in that division contribute extraordinarily much in taxation. Councillor Swabey replied that the power and hilly districts needed roads worse than those on the flatter and more tillable lands; also that roads were necessary for the haul of the hills. During the discussion it was brought out that the roads running south from highway 14 usually through divisions one and five were being used by many non residents and carried much heavy traffic. Traffic from those roads converges at Tofield and go north on the graded road through division six.

Reverting back to money appropriation, some thought that the amount of money allowed for public works is not adjusted.

THE WORLD'S DO OF WHEAT

Some 3100 Crop Correspondents of the Searle Grain Company have made an estimate of the wheat acreage that was sown this last year with the United treated respectively with formalin or with mercurial dust, or that were untreated. The following very comprehensive estimates shows that 54 per cent of the wheat sown last year was treated with formalin, 15 per cent with mercurial dust and 15 per cent was either treated with other compounds or was untreated.

The percentage will no doubt be increased this year for this coming spring. A word of caution, therefore, about the use of these seed treatments seems to be in order.

Formalin is the cheapest treatment but has the defect that if the solution used is too strong, germination may be seriously affected. Furthermore, should make their formalin solution of exactly the strength recommended by the manufacturers.

Mercurial dust has the advantage that it can not harm the seed and also that it prevents to some extent damping off, but it is poisonous to man and animals. There is therefore the disadvantage of mercurial dust that it is a dangerous substance for man, and, because it is a poison, that it requires extreme care to be taken that it is not used in such a manner to poisons treating the seed, that it may be fed to animals, or that other out may of the treated seed.

CLEAN PASTURES FOR PIGS

Improved practices for swine production are constantly being adopted by Alberta farmers. One practice, however, which has not yet been widely employed is that of ploughing up pastures and runways every two, or at most, three years to control worms.

Worms are causing more losses in our swine industry than we realize and many cases of general unthriftiness due to worms.

Cleanliness is one of the most important control measures. Clean farrowing pens and feeding boxes are essential, but it is wasted effort if the little pigs are turned out into worm infested runways and pastures.

If hog pastures have been in continuous use for several years they are probably to be worm infested and should be ploughed up. If these pastures are well worked during the summer and hogs are kept off them, they will be free of worms the next spring and may be seeded down again.

The adoption of a system of rotating pastures will be of much assistance in controlling worms and will also provide the pigs with better feed.

Rendezvous in Vienna

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALMENTS

Rex Monroe, a Canadian of British parentage but also of many years' residence in the United States, finding himself marking time in London, England, three weeks before the "second chapter" of the Great War began is enlisted:

Accepts an invitation from his friend Colonel Sir Charles Lorne, of the British Secret Service, to attend at the Colonel's office . . . Whitehall and discuss a matter of grave importance.

Monroe has an inkling that the request—in view of his knowledge of Germany, Austria and the Low Countries—may have something to do with Sir Charles in the British Army—points to some dangerous mission which he is going to be asked to carry out as an independent agent.

The foregoing surmise, although not entirely correct proves to be instructive in the case and although, for certain reasons, Sir Charles has not detailed to Monroe all the details of the mission, Rex volunteers to run over to Brussels and meet the principal party in the transactions.

Now go on with the story from here.

As Monroe signed the last of several letters the next morning before his departure for Brussels he gave final domestic instructions to Mrs. Johnson, the porter's wife, who acted as housekeeper for him and to her after the flat upon his periodical absences from the city.

All incoming letters were to be held until his return, unless he advised differently later; in all emergencies Mr. Monroe had gone abroad for a few days, Rex instructed the porter, Mrs. Johnson, herself, who played chauffeur on occasion, and now stood on the sidewalk with the luggage ready to depart.

"Righto, sir," Johnson assented, meaning all the same time that it was after nine o'clock.

"Is that once we'd better be moving Is the car ready?"

"Yes sir" the porter answered promptly.

"Okay then, lead on!" Rex requested, and with a brisk "cheerio" to the housekeeper, he followed her husband to the car outside "Straight on to Knightsbridge!" Monroe commanded, stepping into the waiting motor. "I've got to call at Lloyds first, for the necessary.

Leaving the bank after securing sufficient funds to cover his journey, was all. Such certificates was after a quick all-embracing look around which took in his surroundings with unhurried rapidity as he paid the driver, Rex stepped to the arched doorway with the numerals 49 above it and reached for a large bell-push not conspicuously into the wall beside.

The gentleman who thus anticipated Monroe's intention of ringing the bell smiled as he extended his hand in friendly gesture and said: "Mr. Rex Monroe? Will you please come in?"

"You are evidently Count von Arnberg." Rex smiled in response to the hand hands.

"You've got right up stairs!" the Count suggested, acknowledging identity and motioning to a flight of stairs leading from the entrance to the doorway.

Rex, reaching the head of the stairs which terminated in a small reception landing, a lady, emerging from an adjoining inner room, came forward with the obvious intention of the temporary embarrassment by introducing the lady, who proved to be Mrs. Ffils, the Countess Arnberg, and who, after warmly commending her husband's welcome, greeted Rex with a gracious inclination of the head, led the way into the room which she had evidently passed to meet them.

"Please be seated, Mr. Monroe," the Countess invited. "And I trust that you will not be too critical of our humble surroundings. This is only a furnished maisonette, as you can see."

"Being political refugee and practically beggars as well," the Count spoke up, "we cannot very well be choosers, to quote the well known proverb you know."

"Oh, I am sorry!" his hostess exclaimed, noticing her oversight, which had not glanced, Mr. Monroe's piano? Unfortunately there are still things in our exchange we have no long-er with us."

"My wife is not completely adjusted even yet, to the change from rich man's darling to poor man's slave, I am afraid," was Arnberg remarked sadly as his wife, entering herself for a moment, stepped out of the room to dispose of Monroe's straw accessories.

That detail attended to, he dashed next, please?"

Listening intently, Rex heard the girl dial the Exchange, and within a few moments the pleasant tones of a well modulated voice, answering "Hello?"

"Is that 64-38-09?" Monroe enquired.

"It is!" the voice replied, asking to whom if that was Mr. Monroe speaking.

"Correct!" Rex returned. "And I assume you are Count von Arnberg; am I right?"

"Quite right, Mr. Monroe, and I am very pleased to hear you have arrived safely. You evidently made good time?"

"Yes, very good indeed; owing to few travellers and an unusually smooth crossing!"

"In that case you will not be suffering the after-effects of 'mal de mer' then, I take it?"

"Not at all! I'm as fit as a fiddle!" Monroe answered him. "And ready to meet wherever you wish, Count Arnberg?"

"Which will be as soon as you can join me, I hope?"

"You wish me to come at once to address at once?"

"If it is not convenient, or perhaps you prefer that I come over to your hotel?" the Count continued.

"Not at all! Your service, and which ever you think best is quite convenient to me," Rex replied.

"In that case I think it would be much better if you came up here." "Splendid! I'll be along at once. I've removed the stain and dust of travel."

"If you take a cab from the station entrance, it is only about ten minutes drive, although rapidity as to paid the driver, Rex stepped to the arched doorway with the numerals 49 above it and reached for a large bell-push not conspicuously into the wall beside.

The gentlemen who thus anticipated Monroe's intention of ringing the bell smiled as he extended his hand in friendly gesture and said: "Mr. Rex Monroe? Will you please come in?"

"You are evidently Count von Arnberg." Rex smiled in response to the hand hands.

"You've got right up stairs!" the Count suggested, acknowledging identity and motioning to a flight of stairs leading from the entrance to the doorway.

Rex, reaching the head of the stairs which terminated in a small reception landing, a lady, emerging from an adjoining inner room, came forward with the obvious intention of the temporary embarrassment by introducing the lady, who proved to be Mrs. Ffils, the Countess Arnberg, and who, after warmly commending her husband's welcome, greeted Rex with a gracious inclination of the head, led the way into the room which she had evidently passed to meet them.

"Please be seated, Mr. Monroe," the Countess invited. "And I trust that you will not be too critical of our humble surroundings. This is only a furnished maisonette, as you can see."

"Being political refugee and practically beggars as well," the Count spoke up, "we cannot very well be choosers, to quote the well known proverb you know."

"Oh, I am so sorry!" his hostess exclaimed, noticing her oversight, which had not glanced, Mr. Monroe piano? Unfortunately there are still things in our exchange we have no long-er with us."

"My wife is not completely adjusted even yet, to the change from rich man's darling to poor man's slave, I am afraid," was Arnberg remarked sadly as his wife, entering herself for a moment, stepped out of the room to dispose of Monroe's straw accessories.

A Plan to Reduce Wheat Acreage

The 1941 wheat policy is a temporary measure to deal with the problem of surplus wheat caused by two bumper crops, and a shrinkage in the possible world outlets for Canadian wheat. The policy has two parts; one which deals with marketing and comes under the control of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and the other termed "production" which is the responsibility of the Minister of Agriculture.

In the following outline, firstly, a statement of the policy is given, next the reasons for the policy, and thirdly a description of how the production policy will affect farmers.

STATEMENT OF POLICY

Marketing Policy:

(1) The deliveries of 1941 wheat to the Wheat Board for the whole of Canada are to be limited to 230 million bushels. Western Canada's share of this total will amount to 222 million bushels.

(2) Delivery quotas will be based on 66 per cent of the 1940 wheat acreage. This does not mean that the farmer must seed 66 per cent of the 1940 wheat acreage to obtain his full quota. The first quota will be a general one allowing the farmer to deliver a certain amount of wheat per acre from every farmer. Following quotas will be varied to certain proportions of the 1941 yield for the farmer's shipping point but based on 66 per cent of the 1940 acreage.

(3) The pay basket advance for No. 1 wheat will be continued on the 230,000,000 bushels. The farmers' right to participation will also be continued.

(4) The Wheat Board will continue to pay storage at other than country points on the undelivered portion of the 230 million bushels.

(5) No change is to be made in the present initial payment basis which is only to be paid on the Canadian consumed portion of the 230,000,000 bushels.

Production Policy:

The restriction of wheat deliveries to 230 million bushels to the Wheat Board, or on the open market is the foundation on which the farmers keep before them an objective of not more than 66 per cent of the 1940 wheat acreage, with an average yield of about 12 bushels per acre. The reduced income from wheat will seriously affect farm incomes. Therefore, the Government will make payments of certain sums per acre as outlined below to compensate farmers for reduced income from wheat.

Definitions of certain terms are necessary to understand the policy:

"Coarse grains" means barley, oats, rye, corn, peas, flax and millet.

"Farm" means the total land being operated as a unit.

"Farmer" means an owner operator, or tenant operator of a farm or his estate.

"Grass" means all grasses, clovers and alfalfa.

"Landlord" means an owner of a farm operated by another person and includes a mortgagee or any said vender who by contract or by law has a right to or a lien on or ownership in a part of the crops on a farm.

"Minister" means the Minister of Agriculture.

"Summer-fallow" means the cultivation of fallow land prior to and including July 31st, 1941, in such a way as to conserve soil moisture or to prevent the growth of weeds.

Basis of Payment: The number of acres by which a farmer reduces his wheat area is known as his average reduction.

In general, payments will be based on the number of acres by which the farmer reduces his wheat acreage in 1941 as compared to 1940. The year 1940 is the basis year with the following exceptions:

1. If the farmer had an unusually large or unusually small acreage in wheat in 1940 as compared to 1939, the number of acres sown to wheat in 1939 shall be taken as the average of the acres sown to wheat in 1939 and 1940. The paragraph covering these instances reads as follows:

"In respect of any farm

(i) on which the number of acres sown to wheat in 1940 is more than one third more, than the number of acres sown to wheat in 1939, or

(ii) on which the number of acres sown to wheat in 1940 is less, by one-third or more, than the number of acres sown to wheat in 1939, the number of acres sown to wheat in 1940 shall be deemed to be the average number of acres sown to wheat in 1939 and 1940."

2. If there was no wheat sown on the farm in 1940 but were on the farm in 1939 and 1941 acres to wheat in 1939, the number of acres sown to wheat in 1940 shall be 66 per cent of the number of acres under cultivation on such farm in 1940.

3. New Breaking: If new land was broken on any farm in 1940, the number of acres of such new acres broken may be included in the number of acres sown to wheat on such farm in 1940.

4. New Farms in 1940: If any land was broken during 1940 on any farm on which no land had been broken before, 80 per cent of the number of acres broken may be taken as the number of acres sown to wheat on such farm in 1940.

Regulations Governing Payments: After proof has been established that the farmer has performed effective operations or sown coarse grains or grass on the acreage taken out of wheat, the following sums will be paid for wheat acreage reduction on or before July 1, 1941:

1. (a) "The sum of $4.00 in respect of each acre which is summerfallowed in 1941 in excess of the number of acres which were summer-fallowed in 1940."

(b) "The sum of $2.00 in respect of each acre which is sown to coarse grains or grass on or before July 31st, 1941, in excess of the number of acres which were sown to coarse grains or grass respectively in 1940."

2. "The Minister may pay an additional sum of $2.00 in respect of each acre, in respect of which any payment may be made under paragraph 1 of this regulation, which was sown to grass in 1941 which was sown to rye on or after August 1st, 1941, and is in grass or rye on July 1st, 1942."

Where To Apply: To be considered for payment under this policy the farmer must make application before May 31, 1941, to the Secretary of the rural municipality to which he resides, if he resides in western agriculture A greater acreage of coarse grains is needed to support the greater live stock population of Canada. Indications are that more livestock will be needed in our war effort Grasses and clover crops are of prime importance as soil builders and producers of dairy products, principally butter, and summerfallowing will conserve soil moisture and hence provide the cheapest method of storage for possible further requirements The programme, therefore, will fit in with good farm practice and possible future needs for wheat as well as assist in producing much needed meat supplies for Britain

Why Higher Price Not Adopted: A higher price for wheat was not adopted for three main reasons. Firstly, it is not an equitable policy to distribute extra income. Farmers with unfilled portions of their quotas, the worst drought sufferers and renters suffer most while others would reap the whole benefit. Secondly, the restrictions of deliveries necessitates acreage reduction and a higher price for wheat would not encourage farmers to grow other crops which are more necessary to our war effort at the present time. Finally, in most cases it can be demonstrated that if the income earned by adoption of the acreage payment policy is added to the advance, it will give the farmer at least as high a payment for the wheat sold as he would have if subject to the wheat quota without the acreage payment. In addition, the farmer still has his participation certificate which may have a value

ILLUSTRATIONS OF POLICY

The following examples are given to illustrate how the policy may be applied

1. Half Section Farm, 300 Acres Improved

The cultivated land in 1940 was cropped as follows: wheat 100 acres; fallow 20 acres; coarse grains 80 acres; grass and pasture 20 acres

If the farmer reduced his wheat acreage 33 per cent he could obtain acreage payments on 33 per cent of 100 acres, that is 33 acres.

If the 33 acres are summer-fallowed the payment would be $140

If the 33 acres are sown to coarse grains the payment would be 70

If the 33 acres are sown to grass the payment would be 70

If rye or grass is sowing in the fall of 1941 after summer-fallowing or after the coarse grain crop is taken off, an additional $2 per acre will be received on or after July 1, 1942, if the land is still in grass or rye on that date. 33 acres @ $2 70

Grass may be sown with a nurse crop and $2 per acre obtained for the coarse grain in 1941 (but nothing for the grass) and if the land is still in grass on July 1, 1942, an additional $2 will be paid 33 acres @ $4 .. 140

The above farmer would likely be receiving a considerable portion of his income live stock. He would only be able to market 12 bushels to the acre from 66 acres in 1941 or 792 bushels. If he obtained $140 additional income this would be equal to nearly 12c per bushel on the 792 bushels.

The farmer might feel that he could prove his quota of 792 bushels on a smaller acreage than 66 acres and so reduce his acreage more than 33 acres and by so doing increase the additional payment based on his quota even higher than 12c. For example:

His quota would remain	792 bushels
His seed requirements would be 90 bus. for 60 acres
1940 crop	720
At 20 bushels per acre he could grow that wheat on 42 acres.
If he summer-fallows the other 57 acres he receive EXTRA	$228
His quota of 792 bushels of 42 would bring	495
	Total $623

Or $1c a bushel at the farm.

Farmer With 400 Acres Cultivated

1939 crop program—Wheat 100 acres; fallow 100 acres; other

1940 crop program—Wheat 240 acres; fallow 80 acres; other 80.

This farmer would likely only receive payment from the average of 1939 and 1940, that is from 200 acres.

Farmer With 300 Acres Cultivated

1939 crop program—Wheat 190 acres; fallow 50; other 60.

1940 crop program—Wheat; none; fallow 150 acres; other 150

In this case the farmer's 1940 wheat acreage would be established at 66 per cent of the cultivated area of the farm or 198 acres. He could receive payment on the reduction from 190 acres he makes in his 1941 wheat acreage provided he fallows the land or sown coarse grains or grass

There are many other combinations which can be worked out. These facts should always be kept in mind:

(1) It is only on reduced wheat acreage as established for 1940 that payment is made

(2) There must be an increase in the 1940 acreage of other crop or summer-fallow before payment can be made.

(3) No more than your quota for delivery will be accepted

Work out your highest possible return for your possible quota if you wish to receive as much as possible in the 1941-42 crop year

See the Secretary-Treasurer of your Municipality before May 31st 1941. He will help you fill in your application of intention. When you have completed the work see him again and make application for payment by making a sworn statement of what you have done.

Anne Elizabeth (Nancy) Evans, as she is known to a host of friends here, is one of Tyche's most popular young ladies, having resided in Tyche with her parents for over twenty years, and during the past six years has been a valued member of the staff of Enoch Bros. general store.

Mr. Bennie, or (Alex.) as he was familiarly known while a member of the staff of the Tyche branch of the Bank of Montreal several years ago, made many friends in Tyche and district. Friends here of this young couple will wish them many years of happiness in their journey through life.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennie will make their home at Tofield where Mr. Bennie is teller in the Bank of Montreal.

A "SHOWER" OF GIFTS

To the accompaniment of rhyme, music and song, Mrs. Alex Bennie, nee Anne Elizabeth (Nancy) Evans, a bride of last week, was "showered" with an array of lovely gifts on Monday afternoon in Falconn hall. Flowering plants, pussy willows, combined with mauve and yellow crocuses and yellow tulips centering the bride's table, were the Spring effect in the decorations.

Mrs. J. J. Brown, who was chairman, gave several requisites for a happy married life in rhyme. A solo was sung by Mrs. A. Schifeld, a duet by Patty Gail MacLachlan and Gwendolyn Schifeld, and a piano solo by Louise Speelman. Colin Nevalsasky and Shirley Mashing played a duet, with the Happy Gang singing was served.

Rendezvous in Vienna

A story of romance and adventure in Europe prior to the outbreak of the present war.

By LESLIE HAMILTON

SYNOPSIS

Ret Monroe, a Canadian of British parentage but also of many years' residence in the United States, is finding himself marking time in London, England, three weeks before the "second chapter of the Great War began to unfold.

Accepts an invitation from his friend Colonel Sir Chester Lorne, of the British Secret Service to attend at the Colonel's office in Whitehall and discuss a matter of grave importance.

Monroe has an inkling that the request—in view of the deserted international situation, and his own previous service with Sir Charles in the British Army—points to some dangerous mission which he is to be asked to carry out in an intelligence agent.

The foregoing surmise, although not entirely correct, proves to be indirectly the case and although, for certain reasons, Sir Charles has not divulged to Monroe all the details of the mission, Ret volunteers to run over to Brussels and meet the principal party in the transaction.

Arrived in Brussels, Monroe goes to the residence of Count Felix von Arnberg, a political refugee who fled Austria at the time of the Anschluss. After greetings have been exchanged between the von Arnbergs and Monroe—the Count's wife being present—they adjourn to discuss the mission which Sir Charles outlined to Ret in London.

Now go on with the story from here.

"But still the darling I trust!" she smiled,re-entered the room in time to overhear her husband's remarks.

"Yes indeed, my dear!" the Count replied. "And always will be. My wife has been splendid throughout this our misfortune," he continued, addressing Ret, "but the fact is a long one, and it will be some time before we recover, if we ever do so again."

"Although in ignorance of what your misfortunes may have been," Rex murmured sympathetically, "I trust there are better days ahead of you."

"Faith!" the Countess protested. "Pardon my interruption, but I simply cannot let you tire Mr. Monroe with a long conversation until he has had a cup of tea. I know the English prefer tea to coffee ," she turned her charming face to Ret, "so if you will excuse me a moment I will go and make it, the kettle boiled as you arrived."

"As a matter of fact," Monroe hastened to inform her, "I'm quite happy with either. I am really a Canadian you see, and was merely born in England! Futhermore, having lived in the United States for a few years, I'm a deep, dyed-in-the-wool American when coffee is concerned, which I'm sure you would both enjoy better than tea, being Continentals, isn't that correct?"

"How splendid!" she exclaimed. "An I sense you are quite right about our own preference, Mr. Monroe, then coffee it shall be."

"I was wondering about your accent when he first observed, "but that explains it."

"I thought you would be surprised, especially as I have been sent by Col. Lorne to Canada on other short business. You were expecting an Oxford intonation, but your complete with monocle, no doubt!" Rex suggested, with a twinkle in his eye.

"Quite frankly we did visualize something of the sort," the Count smilingly admitted. "I detected the difference in your English, however, and the Canadian brogue across the channel, when you telephoned."

"At another world" the Countess added,"you have a small dining room just off the living quarters as the aforesaid Coffee is served!"

"Come my dear," her husband rejoined, turning to Rex as he drew aside a fold of the drapery curtains and said: "After you, Mr Monroe, please."

"What a pair of thoroughbreds. Ret thought to himself preceding Count Felix into the little dining room. Those people have certainly been through the mill, I'll bet, yet they're as serene and charming as if they hadn't a single care in the wide, wide world!

CHAPTER FOUR

A DANGEROUS MISSION

During the general conversation which ensued as they consumed the light repast prepared and served by his hostess, Monroe noted the opportunities offered whenever he found himself the polite listener, of quietly appraising von Arnberg and his lady.

The Count he judged to be about his own age, perhaps a little older, when one took into consideration the silver-grey hair thinning out in places. The tiny lines beginning to show beneath the eyes, however, were acute witness to tragic experience Monroe guessed, other than of age itself, while the wide forehead, keen piercing brown eyes and brilliant conversation of the man silently denoted an alert and gifted intellectual individual of exceptional perspicacity. On the other hand, he decided, the Countess was obviously the more practical of the two, and as marked contrast to her husband, who was essentially an idealist to the nth degree. Not a beautiful woman, in the accepted meaning of that term, but the definitely good looking and possessed of such gracious and charming personality that Ret realized it would not be difficult for him to resist any appeal from her Ladyship. No wonder, he thought with a sly grin of amusement that Sir Charles, the old fox, had no qualms as to the outcome of his interview with the "party" in Brussels.

Her flashing blue eyes and fair complexion, enhanced by a wealth of beautiful shimmering golden wavy hair, strongly suggested to Monroe who an Irish, Scots, or Welch ancestry. Indeed, so convincing was this impression that he was prompted to voice the remark that surely, she was descended not a hundred per cent Austrian.

"That is a shrewd observation, Mr. Monroe," the Countess laughingly retorted, confessing that her mother was Bridget "a Hinlan" lassie from Bonnie Scotland.

At this point, having finished their coffee, her husband suggested they retire to the other room, where it would be more comfortable while they fully discussed the purpose which had brought their guest dashing over from London.

As they rose from the table Ret, still covertly studying his host, mentally confirmed his first fleeting impression that Count Felix was undoubtedly the true cultured aristocrat as had been implied. Unfortunately, he was a dignified man of high standing, who had proved beating plainly inherited from a long line of noble ancestors, of the man was every inch a gentleman! Courteous, considerate and kindly, to the extreme ends of his fingertips Monroe decided, as they passed into the adjoining room.

"I am sorry I cannot offer you a cigar, Mr. Monroe," von Arnberg apologized, "but if you enjoy a cigarette, please help yourself," he indicated a silver cigarette box on a table. "Ret remarked, "although my knowledge of objects d'art or their value is very limited, I'm afraid."

"In normal times its material worth, which has been appraised by experts is about ten to twelve thousand pounds in English money."

"I am afraid I cannot accept Monsieur exclaimed, quite impressed. "Such a valuable article! Why it is worth a thousand dollars in the United States."

"Probably more," the Countess ventured to interject her opinion. "Monsieur American collector will casually take it off the wall of one of the finest rooms in the Austrian European connoisseur."

"Then I am very glad, indeed," her husband interjected, "that you can save the dainty man for her Ladyship," the latter observation flashed towards the Countess with a friendly smile as he gently reproved: "No excuse, please!" to the Count, who was about to protest that he could not deprive Monroe of what he, the host, should have provided for his guest.

Monsieur came the hearty rejoinder from Rex, who laughingly declared he had filched the cigars from Sir Charles. At his host's invitation, of course," he added, and continued from a government office, and probably brought with the dear old boy's injuries' hard earned money. It is no excuse, please!" to the Count.

Accepting the Lorraines with a pretty bow, but frowning slightly at extending the cigarette case to his guest once again, who had now also finished his own, von Arnberg waved the latter another courtesy.

Before this could be carried out, however, the Anschluss occurred and the scheme was frustrated; at any rate again, who had now also finished his own, von Arnberg waved the latter another courtesy.

"And judging by events," the Count remarked hopefully, "that opportunity may be forthcoming almost."

"I think you are quite right re-joined Monroe, who had by now agreed with him, "but personally, I do not desire to be able to do much re-garding the matter, since my country has been soundly beaten, and the Nazi regime is in power and independent Austria is dealt with as a part and parcel of the Press Terms."

"Why do you say that?" the Count asked, in surprise, for it is quite possible that Austria may be given back her sovereignty some day."

"Because I know why Sir Charles said we were directly interested in this project," Ret murmured. "Although it is really none of my business at present, that is, from the official point of view."

"Precisely!" the Count declared with emphasis. "However, much depends on the events of the next few months and, if war does come, upon how well we are prepared to grasp the opportunity, should one present itself."

"Sounds feasible," Monroe admitted, "but it would be risky business, I'm afraid."

"To that I agree, but there are still many ways we could think of!"

In spite of the obvious restraint they placed upon themselves, their guest was acutely aware of their very real unhappiness and depression. Madam von Arnberg's shoulders drooped for a moment and a worried frown marred the serenity of her troubled gaze. Months her husband's emotions, but the nervous drumming of an impatient tattoo on the arm of his chair only too clearly betrayed his agitated state of mind. After a pause in which the nobleman's thoughts undoubtedly strayed towards his kin in her terrible predicament, he recovered, as though speaking to himself: "Yes! She cannot possibly escape alone, and with another war casting its ugly shadow over Europe, her position has now become desperate!"

Look at the value that's packed into the 1941 Ford! It's the lowest priced car you can buy in Canada. It's the longest inside. It has the greatest total seating width. You get extra knee-room and front head-room. Wider doors! Larger windshield. Longer spring-base!

Ford riding comfort this year is a revelation. On the new "slow-motion springs", with which Ford engineers soothes and new ride stabilizer, you simply glide over the bumps. There's a softness and smoothness now to ease at this price.

Only Ford at its price offers you the power and smoothness of a V-8 engine. Eight cylinders for smoothness! Small cylinders for economy! Extremely low gas and oil consumption as proved in one official contest after another! Long life and reliability.

Ford this year is built with greater strength than ever. Frame is twice as rigid. The whole car has a heavier, "big-car" feel. See a Ford dealer.

HOW YOUR DOLLAR FIGHTS

By Bruce Hutchison

Forty-four cents out of every dollar that you, an average Canadian, earns this year will be used to produce war goods that you can neither eat, wear nor use in any way. That's what Mr. Ilsley told a hushed House of Commons the other day. He told them how your 44 cents would be spent. That answer may be given in many forms, most of them bewildering to a layman, but the simple, understandable layman's answer starts with the ordinary Canadian soldier.

Before he goes on parade the infantry soldier's equipment has cost the taxpayers $114.82, which included such items as $41.50 for his rifle and bayonet, $7.32 for his gas mask, $12.85 for his battle dress, $4.99 for his boots, $2.30 for his underclothing. Multiply that by 170,000 soldiers on active service. As long as he remains in Canada he may be supported at present for $5.60 per day—which many then save up one War Savings Certificate. Overseas, maintenance costs are at present reckoned at $7.11 per day. This compares to $6.50 required to maintain a soldier in France for one day's work in making up ammunition during the last war. When a Canadian soldier gets into action, no one can be sure that upkeep costs will be.

It is the weapons, not the man, that have made this the most expensive of all wars. This war makes any previous war look like a story of economy.

Eight thousand dollars paid for a fighting plane in the last war. It now costs $25,000 to build a fighter, double that for a heavier one, and $60 000 for a Bolingbroke bomber. If you served your maximum of War Service Certificates, at the rate of $480 per year, you would be just over three centuries paying for the loss of one such bomber.

Canada intends to create an armored division. To equip this single division taxpayers must provide at least $100,000,000—possibly closer to $200,000,000. As it travels it will represent an investment equal to the cost of ten Ottawa Parliament buildings. To raise money to equip this division, about 250,000 Canadians must save $40 per month.

The ordinary infantry division has changed out of all knowledge since the last war. It travels on wheels. Thirty-seven different types of vehicles are required, 3,325 vehicles altogether. Can carriers cost $9,000 a piece. Machine guns mounted on these carriers cost $400. The motor lorry carries many tons of stuff. Each brings with the added to Canada's present lorry. Cargo in time of war. This will cost $60,000,000—three-quarters of the amount that we shall use this year to subsidize our prairie wheat industry.

When they get into action mechanized units really begin to burn money. One five-hundred pound bomb costs from $30 to $200, depending on the type used. Anti-aircraft guns cost about $12,000 and will fire shells, each costing about $6 each, at the rate of 120 a minute. In one hour's firing such a gun would spend more than $40,000. For every pop of a 3.7 anti-aircraft gun which can search a low bomber five miles in the sky, $20 or more Ex War Savings Certificates are required. This armament can consume a fortune in one night's operations.

This is also a war of power—mechanical power. Two divisions in the last war were overworked for lack of power of mechanical energy. Our two divisions now in Britain with their ancillary services have about 600,000 horsepower—93,750,000 foot pounds of energy per minute. A destroyer, to be at all effective, must have 50,000 horsepower and this monster must be obtained from the citizens you are about to.

Recently Mr. Ilsley gave Parliament a summary of his problem. He said we have $900,917,000 for the Army this year, $139,540,000 for the Navy, $296,000,000 for the Air Force and $180,000,000 for munitions. These are the other war costs distributed among the government departments which will bring the total to about $1,500,000,000—not counting direct financial aid to Britain. Canada this year will ship about a billion and a half dollars worth of goods to Britain for which Canada will receive $850,000,000. This means that in addition to meeting our own costs, we will have to find something more than another billion and a half dollars.

BEAVER LAKE COUNCIL

HOLDS MEETING

Regular meeting of Council of M. D. of Beaver Lake No. 486, held at Ryley, on April 15, 1941.

All members of council were present at the meeting which commenced at 10:40 a.m. and ended at 12 o'clock midnight. Matters of importance dealt with may be listed as follows:

RELIEF: Harry Kolmatycki was advised his relief will not be continued during the Spring and Summer months. Peter Korpan was informed at this M.D. will contribute 8s share of hospitalization in the event he requires hospital treatment but will not provide medical care. Anton Slonsky was again instructed to return to this M.D. if he considers he should have any relief assistance. Mrs. K. Bednar will not be granted relief owing to her maintenance of Caroline Cordnah. A. J. Bergs relief was approved at the figures suggested by the Bureau of Public Welfare. Phillip Reben will continue to receive a monthly allowance of $7.50. Relief of $18.00 was granted Mrs. P. Barnaich to May 18th. Bureau was asked to authorize rental relief of $5.00 monthly for Peter Kegan for the months of May.

ROAD GRANT: Council heard Dr. J. L. McPherson, M.L.A. explain the provisions of the Government's Road Grant Plan and proceeded to apply for a grant of $2,000.00 for use on one or two main roads.

MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL DISTRICT: Approval was given of the efforts being made to organize a hospital district.

SALVAGE: An estimate of 100 tons of scrap iron, steel and nonferrous metals could be obtained in this M.D. experience has proved it costly and impractical to attempt to salvage stabbled-in land which is heavily infested. Urging farmers to sow only failed land, the department says now, and Mr. Justice Ford read the record of election.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Unless there is an exceptional dry summer, Alberta will not suffer severely from grasshopper attacks this season. Opinion to this effect was voiced by the provincial department of agriculture officials this week. It was claimed that farmers located in areas where stubble is grasshopper infested will benefit by the new federal-provincial scheme to plough it in, experience has proved it costly and impractical to attempt to salvage stabbled-in land which is heavily infested. Urging farmers to sow only failed land, the department says now, and Mr. Justice Ford read the record of election.

Edmonton's new community chest campaign which centralizes the work formerly done by a large number of social and charitable agencies, will shortly elect its first board of directors. More than 100 representatives of these units affiliated with the Edmonton Council of Social Agencies last week adopted constitution and by-laws. In future, members who participate in the joint annual drive for funds will not be permitted to stage an individual appeal.

Medical requirements for the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve have been relaxed in order to take in the strength men who formerly were rejected for color-blindness or medical categories below that usually required. A number of color ratings will be formed into a class for training as an Eastern part. An intelligent type of man with medical requirements suitable for the writers class may apply at the naval barracks, 102 street Edmonton.

Alberta farmers will receive about $10,000,000 of the $35,000,000 total allocated for commercial-fallow bonus payments by the Dominion government, announced E. L. Gray this week. Gray is formerly a member of the Legislature and leader of the provincial Liberal organization. Mr.Gray has now appointed a member of the board scheme here. Bonus will vary "from 25 cents per for former bona fide entered to coarse grains to $6 an acre for summerfallow, fall rye or grass", he said. It is possible, he added, that special information meetings will be held in the near future to explain the scheme's provisions. Alberta agricultural officials also state that this is the province's second request to the effect from Agriculture Minister, Gardiner.

More than 700 university students will go to Barrow for training May 2. They are members of the C.O.T.C. and part of the auxiliary battalion. An advance party of 50 men will leave setting-up exercises will be given at the University drill hall prior to the camp opening.

On July 2 annual summer school of the Department of Extension will open at the University. It will be the 20th annual session since inception. Summer session of the university will also open on the same date and will continued until August 14. Last week later than the reference school For the ninth year the university extension will also conduct the Banff School of Fine Arts and indications are that this will again be a successful venture.

LINDBROOK

The people of Lindbrook were shocked to hear of the tragic death of our old friend and neighbor, Mr. Herbert Williams (Bert to most of us) of Minitonas, who died on duty whilst fire fighting. The sympathy of the entire district goes out to the family in their bereavement.

There ——— Fires are surely a curse these days, besides taking their toll of life, buildings, timber, etc. The smoke pall seems to drive off the rain clouds of which we need a spell or two right now, for the ground is getting pretty dry.

The recent issues by fire just here have not been heavy, although we hear Mr. Alexander Robinson (Sandy) lost his barn, and a Mr. Wilder a saw mill and logs.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bracegirdle and family motored to Wainwright over the week end to visit relatives there.

Evidently someone is going to take it very easy and keep cool these days. This well known and popular Lindbrookite has procured a regulation sized bath tub and having a copious supply of real cold water near by, intends to do that "old American custom" of immersing oneself for hours in cold water during the hot weather. By the way, Bert how's chances for a soak? Don't mean internal, too expensive.

Our local jurors Messrs Lamouche and Boston returned home "on leave" till the 6th when they have to report back for duty at the Court. They report an alarming crowd in the buildings and are thankful to have a short respite in the peace of the countryside.

Canadian Red Cross

Funds for mobile field kitchens to feed Britain's bombed and destitute civilians, are being called for by the Canadian Red Cross Society, Dr. Fred W. Routley, national commissioner, revealed yesterday. The Society to date has donated a fleet of 36 kitchens to the British Government, each costing $3,100. Three units are being allotted to each of England's 12 defense zones. At a moment's notice they are moved from a central location to the nearest blitz area to feed defense workers and civilians while they are fighting German air attacks.

The kitchens, which are rushed to the heart of every bombed region, are driven by young English girls and the Women Voluntary Services. Each unit, built on a four ton chassis, is equipped with a cooking range, fuel, water, supplies of meat and vegetables to provide meals for 250 individuals. They have become absolutely essential in smaller communities where homes and restaurants have been completely wiped out by air raids.

Thirteen mobile kitchens have already been given the Canadian Red Cross, Dr. Routley said. Five of these came from the Junior Red Cross; two from the Women's auxiliary in Ontario; one from Laura Secord Candy Shops in memory of the late Laura Secord, a Toronto heroine; one from John W. Miller, and one from Ethel Miller of Montreux Bay, Jamaica; one from Westlock and district in Alberta, one from the officers and crews of vessels owned by the Mohawk Navigation Co. the North American Transport Limited and the Inland Lines Limited, Quebec; and one from Herbert Bogg of Shaw and Bogg Limited and affiliated companies, Toronto.

THE NETHERLANDS NAVY FIGHTS ON

Seedtime and Harvest

Last year we announced a service that would assist interested young people in becoming familiar with the many kinds of seeds which infest farm lands and gardens. Information may be handed to any grain buyer serving any one of the three companies associated with the work of the Agricultural Department. The grain buyer will be glad to send the plants on to us for identification.

It is very important to secure good specimens. The entire plant, including flowers and roots, should be sent, when it happens to be on the free or a trifle!

Many people or others interested in botany are anxious to submit any plants for care in We have a large collection of native plants and weeds and would be glad to receive any that can be found in building and preserving. Many of the people group in the country should try it, thus preparing for their dealing with collecting, pressing, mounting and labelling specimens, copies of which may be secured from The Agricultural Department, The North-West Line Elevators Association, Winnipeg.

We are placing host to several thousand specimens and weeds which may be destroyed and are established it caught in time. Grasses are well established it may cost more than the land is worth to get rid of them. If every young man or maiden could name every weed on the home farm, we would be well on the way to winning the weed war.

Rendezvous in Vienna

By LESLIE HAMILTON

SYNOPSIS

Ray Munroe is a Canadian of British parentage but also of many years' residence in the United States, finding himself working time in London, England, three months before the "second chapter" of the Great War began in Poland.

Accepts an assignment from his friend Colonel Sir Charles Lorne, of the British Secret Service, to attend at the Colonel's office in Whitehall and discuss a matter of grave importance.

Munroe has an inkling that the request is a re of the disturbed international situation, and has seen previous service with Sir Charles in the British Army—points to some dangerous mission which he is going to be asked to carry out as an intelligence agent.

Munroe's inquiring curiosity is not satisfied when he arrives to be ushered by the cool efficient secretary at certain reasons Sir Charles has not arranged to Munroe all the details of the mission. Has volunteers to run over to Brussels and contact the principal party in the transaction.

Arrived in Brussels Munroe goes to the residence of Count Felix von Arnberg, a political refugee who fled Austria at the time of the Anschluss. After greetings have been exchanged between the von Arnbergs and Munroe the Count's wife being present they adjourn to discuss the mission on which Sir Charles outlined to Ray in London.

After explaining how his kinswoman, the sister of the Countess, was unable to escape from Austria at the time of their flight, the Count briefly explains to Munroe that certain political documents are still concealed in their former residence in Vienna, and that the mission they are hoping Ray will undertake is the rescue of the gift, although not a prisoner in fact, is under constant observation by the Gestapo together with the recovery of the documents and a valuable adjoining property a small farm. Of course, a treasure desperately needed as the financial resources of the von Arnbergs are almost exhausted. After considering the matter carefully, Munroe agrees to the proposal.

Now go on with the story from here.

"Is she a prisoner," Ray asked, his interest now thoroughly aroused.

"No, not as yet. Merely refused a passport and constantly shadowed by Gestapo agents who note where she goes, who she meets, and everything she does." Von Arnberg shrugged and his shoulders, as if to say: "She might as well be."

"That means that all her communications are being censored, doesn't it?"

"Oh yes! All her letters and telegrams, even her telephone conversations will be tapped," Munroe was informed with a sardonic laugh.

"How on earth have you managed to keep in confidential touch with her in the meantime, or were you able to do so?"

"That was impossible as we have not been able to write her privately. We only have from her letters that she is in good health and still enjoying her professional liberty. More scraps of information then."

"Professional liberty?" Munroe echoed questioningly. But ..."

"Yes there is a condition attached to her so-called freedom," the Count explained, re-lighting his cigar which had burned out during the tense moments in his recital "When Olga returned to Vienna the day after we had left, my sister-in-law evidently found the Gestapo in charge of our home. They probably questioned her for a long time and then told her to find other accommodation but not to try to leave the city without their permission. I received confirmation of my surmise as to what had happened in a reply I received from the Gestapo, who intercepted the letter I wrote to Olga immediately we had arrived in Brussels. This was to the effect she would not be allowed to leave Germany if I pressed the matter. Of course I did not, as I knew that it would be useless and still enjoy-ing her professional liberty. More scraps of information then."

CORNHILL COUNCIL MEETING INCLUDES EVENING SESSION

Order New Motor Road Maintainer

Time taken up by interviews with ratepayers, however, in order to get a large number of ratepayers together to discuss the road question, the meeting was held in the evening.

Reeve Walker stated that the object of the meeting was to specify the road on which the money would be spent. He asked if the other councillors were willing to go 50-50 with their own road work appropriations. The councillors thought being tied down to where the money was to be spent was a problem but all agreed. After a letter of the roads where the money would be spent was made, a formal motion by Councillor Kortz-man "that we request a grant of $1500.00 for road purposes" was carried by.

Mr. A. E. Moon, reeve of M.D. of Beaver Lake interviewed council regarding a municipal hospital district in which parts of Cornhill M.D. would most likely be included. What they would like, Mr. Moon said was to have a motion passed by the Council expressing the suggestion that the ratepayers of the municipal hospital district be given an opportunity to vote on the question.

Continuing he said: the taxes at Viking have amounted to more than $5.00 a quarter. When they wanted a new ambulance vote favoring it was passed, then the government will set up the necessary machinery in order a vote. The hospital district would likely go just east of Holden. He expected the hospital, if erected, would be near Ryley. Further east would be too close to Viking and further west, too close to Edmonton. The larger the area, the less cost per quarter, he said. Cost would run about $5.00 a quarter section. They did not propose starting large, but a 12 bed hospital being considered large enough.

Viking started this way and now has a 54 bed hospital.

We are compelled to carry the report of the rest of the meeting over until next week.

Mrs. Kuzyk interviewed council requesting relief. This was left over for further consideration.

Mrs. Chubaty interviewed Councillor Kortz regarding relief. Mr. Chubaty has been away for the past two months and the family were without funds. An emergency relief order was issued.

Mrs. Kunark interviewed council requesting that they furnish her with a garden plot. Council informed Mrs. Kunark that they would consider.

Art Franco, on behalf of R.A. Orr, dropped in to remain request it would appreciate a share of their business.

Letter from Union Tractor and Harvester Co. quoting $435.00 for new sheepsfoot roller, for caterpillar engine was read.

Mr. Wilcox of Adams Machinery Co., Ltd., interviews Council re motor grader. A long discussion followed in which the pros and cons of purchasing such a unit were dealt with. In favor of the purchase it was stated that ever increasing motor traffic made road maintaining very important. That the trend of prices of all machinery was upward. That light construction work in addition to straight maintaining that was possible with the proposed unit Against the purchase it was mentioned that the economic future was more or less, due to war conditions, uncertain.

Mr. Wilcox informed council that he did not have a machine to lend

BERT EVERITT — TOFIELD

Rendezvous in Vienna

By LESLIE HAMILTON

"What about your father's ring, Freda?" the Count said promptly.

"The very thing! I will go and find it, and the photograph as well," his wife said, and, departing on her search for the articles mentioned.

"We're going along very nicely," Rex smiled with the satisfied air of a staff officer whose preliminary plans were going according to sub-schedule, mentioning to the Count that a rough plan of their doings in Vienna—all the boys of his had there—were the most items of interest. "Might as well make the raid of your old quarters as rendezvous and as easy as possible," he grinned on boyish enthusiasm at the prospects of putting one over the Boche, "otherwise it might run everything to be caught jumping on entry in the back window route. Incidentally, have you any idea what the situation will be, regarding that, as I mean?"

"The last I saw the property was simply shut up. I was advised to that effect about three months ago by an old friend who came through Brussels on his way to South America," von Armberg replied. "I do not think the Nazis would proceed any further at present," he added, as the prospect of requiring part of our estate and the great revenue, which is confiscated during my absence, would cease if they broke up my holdings and sold them off piecemeal."

"Here they are!" the Countess announced triumphantly, returning at that moment with a photograph and the ring.

"What a lovely design!" Rex ejaculated, accepting the proffered article of jewelry. "And a fairly good fit too!" nodding his head in a gesture of satisfaction as he tried it on. "And just the very thing," he concluded with enthusiasm, admiring the odd motif of the beautiful gents slipped on his finger, an exquisitely carved Knight of black Onyx set in sharply relief against a plain gold setting.

"Olga will know that particular ring anywhere," his host declared with confidence. "It was a birthday gift to her father," he offered in explanation, "which since his death has been preserved as a family keepsake."

"And this is her photograph!" the Countess added, handing Rex a picture of her sister. She is twenty-six now, of course, but you will not find her altered very much."

"She is a very good looking girl!" Monroe exclaimed in admiration, examining the reclaimed portrait of his future charge in detail.

"I think you will like her," the Countess remarked approvingly, "because Olga, although an attractive and charming girl, is also the logical and practical type of person you feel will be able to depend upon."

"That makes things a lot easier," Rex sighed in relief, his momentary misgivings of a possible clinging vine sort of female vanishing into thin air entirely, particularly as his hostess further assured him that her sister could be trusted to fall in with his any plans he might deem necessary for their mutual safety.

"Okay, then! And now for the final details," he announced after a further silent contemplation of the photograph. "Then I'll be fully armed, I think, with all the information I'll require."

"What next, Mr. Monroe?" his host enquired.

"Olga's full name, her address in Vienna; profession, place and date of birth; height, colour of eyes and hair; any distinguishing marks, and, most important of all, a specimen of her signature," Monroe rattled off.

"Ah yes, I think I understand!" the Count exclaimed quickly, as a gleam of comprehension flickered in his eyes. "For the temporary papers of identity. Right! Wait!"

"Correct!" came the prompt admission. "And, finally, the boys, odd-ears and sketch which I mentioned in you a short time ago."

"I can supply the information about Olga!" the Countess advanced with her husband, "if you will attend to the other matter."

"Very well, my dear, although I am not much of an architect I'll do my best," he warned, and also promised them.

"Now then, Mr. Monroe," his hostess turned to Rex who sat waiting with notebook in hand, to jot down the particulars he had requested. "What is to be first item?"

"Olga's full name please, and her address in Vienna?"

"Olga Patricia von Moeller, 42 Langestrasse."

"Profession?"

"She has not any, in the strict sense of the word."

"I'll just put 'private means'."

"Yes that will do."

"Place and date of birth?"

"Let me think a moment. Oh yes, June 6th, 1913, in Vienna."

"Now her height! Can you remember how tall she is? In feet and inches this time, if you please?" he reminded her, referring with a discreet smile to the episode of the picture measurements.

"About five feet six or seven inches," came the answer, accompanied by a merry twinkle in the eye of his hostess at the recollection of her husband's previous faux pas.

"Quite tall for a girl."

"Yes she is taller than average."

"Colour of eyes?"

"I should describe them as light brown."

"Right-o, and what about her hair?"

"The same as my own." Freda von Armberg laughed in delighted amusement as Rex explained, and Lord Another red-head!"

"Yes, but a humorous and likeable disposition goes with it in her case," came the prompt rejoinder

"I'll remember my promise until I've met the lady!" her guest countered. "How about distinguishing marks? Has she any which could be definitely considered positive marks of identification?"

"No," thoughtfully. "I do not think so."

"Very good. Then all I need is a specimen of her signature."

"That is going to be difficult, I am afraid," came the reluctant admission from pursed lips, as Madam von Armberg cudgeled her brain for a solution of what she already regarded as an insurmountable obstacle. "Her letters are signed of course, but similarly as I have never seen her sign her name for a long pause, "our handwriting is very similar, or if my imitation of her signature will do . . ."

"It will probably serve the purpose," Rex enquired in her support-ion, after turning the matter over in his mind for a few moments.

"In that case, I can solve your requirements quite easily," she assured him.

"Very well then. If you will write and sign her full signature to a note accepting a formal invitation from me to dinner on March 20th, I think that will do the trick all right.

"Here is my address!" von Armberg announced at that moment, as Rex finished the memorandum of Olga's particulars.

"Thank you very much," Monroe acknowledged his host's handiwork, accepting the boys and dogsare the Count gave him. "This is the address, I presume, on the back of the plan?"

"Yes, that is it."

"That's the lot then, and time I was on my way," Monroe continued, carefully giving a swift glance at the living room clock.

"Just one final detail," the Count interposed with him, pulling a wallet from his jacket pocket. "Here are fonds which we hope will cover your expenses, a total of 10,000 Belgian francs, or approximately thirty-five pounds sterling, proceeds from the sale of the last of Freda's trinkets," he said gravely.

"Thank you very much," Rex replied slowly accepting the money with obvious reluctance, but instinctively realizing that any refusal on his part would deeply wound a man of von Armberg's sensibilities.

"And here is your 'forged' note and signature," the Countess added with the air of an arch conspirator, together with a short personal letter I am entrusting you to give Olga at the first available opportunity.

"I'll deliver it, or know the reason why," Monroe assured her.

"You will stay for lunch," his hostess invited, as Rex made a move to take his leave.

"I'd like to, very much. But I think I'd better catch the noon plane which is due in London by ten time. Speed is an important factor considering the time element, as let's defer it," he suggested, "until I return, I hope, with your sister. Then we'll make it a fourcorne celebration!"

"Very well. We shall hold you to that promise," the von Armberg's bravely replied in unison as they departed with their uniform and fervent "God speed you" echoing gently in his ears.

Monroe's trip back to London was quickly accomplished in a huge Sabena floor of the Belgian Airways and true to his calculations, "ten-time" in England found him once more closeted with Colonel Lorne, to whom he gave a brief report of his conference with the von Armbergs and his intention of going to Germany.

"I am very glad you have volunteered for the job," Sir Charles thanked him, "but you will have to act very warily in view of the latest move in the international chess game which occurred today."

"Too soon the signing of this Russo-German pact by Molotov and von Ribbentrop?" Rex promptly construed his friends metaphor—a crushed smile slowly curling upwards from the left hand corner of his mouth, as he dipped a pictorial hand into the fashionable cigar box again.

"Yes I do! It means war! Although I don't think anything will start as far as we are concerned before the end of the month."

"This being the 23rd," Monroe counted, lighting up "and assuming you are a true prophet, that gives me exactly seven days—perhaps two less—which is little enough time for what I have in mind—although, however only know. But I guess it can't be helped."

"We can only hope for the best, the other assented.

"I'll return before we go our further." Rex cast an inquisitive glance at his friend's serious countenance. "Why is something I should like to know, if I may, and that is your interest in this number Charlie? The possibility of the Comte's party possessing a hand-let uprising in Austria in event of war with Germany is your official view I know, but I have a hunch there are personal reasons which you have not divulged to me as yet."

"What gives you that impression" "Nothing concrete, exactly, but the Count mentioned an old family friendship in the background, so I simply put two and two together, that's all." "You are quite right. I have an official interest in your mission, a very deep and personal one," Sir Charles admitted, "but when I tell you that I have remained a bachelor all these years because Freda von Moeller became the Countess von Armberg, you will understand why and be able to appreciate my position."

TEN YEAR OLD BOY WINS TEN DOLLARS

Ten year old Lawrence Phillip of 9817—31st Avenue, Edmonton, is the second Edmonton winner of a hand-some ten-dollar prize given away by the makers of "Cube" during their radio show for the youngsters, "Happy Answers". "Happy Answers" is relased over CFRN every Thursday 5:30—6:00 P.M. SOW FORAGE CROP SEED IN MOIST LAND

Sowing forage crop seed in dry land is a waste of time and seed. A moist, firm seed bed is needed and with forage crops more emnent on the drill deep to reach the moisture for these seeds must not be sown deeper than one inch.

If moisture conditions are not good, leave the seed in the sack until they are. While early sowing of seed is recommended, many good stands of forage crop seed have been obtained from seed sown as late as July 15th with some, such as Crested Wheat Grass, fall seeding is practised quite extensively

Do not sow forage crops until the soil is moist and firm and then seed not deeper then one inch.

FLY SPRAY

A cheap effective fly spray can be made right at home on the farm. Into one gallon of high test kerosene (coal oil) add ½ pound of fresh Pyrethrum Flowers. Allow the Pyrethrum to soak in the kerosene for 24 hours, stirring it occasionally, then allow this mixture to settle for a few hours, and then pour off the kerosene, which is used for the spray.

The common house fly is not only a nuisance but is dangerous as well because it frequently spreads disease. This formula is one of a number for the control of insect pests which is contained in the Department of Agriculture's Bulletin No. 42.

NORWAY CARRIES ON

"King Haakon, Crown Prince Olav, and the legal Norwegian Government are today carrying on the fight from England. This is in full accordance with the Norwegian Constitution, as well as with the special enactments of the Norwegian Parliament voted at its last meeting on April 9 1940.

The free Norwegian Government in London today is fully recognized by every government in the world except the one which attacked us, and its puppets.

Under its direction, almost 90 per cent of our merchant marine—about 1,000,000 tons and 23,000 sailors—is sailing the seven seas under the Norwegian flag.

The Norwegian foreign service is functioning all over the world, and taking an active part in the preparations for the day when we shall all return to a free Norway. In Washington, for instance, the Norwegian Legislation is larger than at any time in its history. Our personnel is four times what it was in April 1940, and we have had to continually enlarge our premises.

Norwegian training camps have been established in Great Britain and in Canada, and Norwegian units will soon be in the thick of the fight at the side of our Allies. Norwegian ships are already actively cooperating with our friends the British.

The Norwegian Government carried to safety our gold, thus preventing it from falling into the hands of those who broke into our country. It is being safeguarded for the Norwegian people until such day when they shall come more be master of their own home.

Norway has never yet defaulted on any foreign loan, and true to that tradition the Norwegian Government even today is paying every cent due on interest on our dollar loans and other foreign obligations.

Yes, the loyal, free Norwegian Government is temporarily residing outside Norwegian territory, is a government in exile, a government in being: paying as it goes, carrying on politically, financially, and in a military way."—Hon. W.H. Hoppenstedt, Minister of Norway to the United States, before Legislature of Minnesota, April 14, 1941.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By E. C. L. Bingay, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The country of Iran, now so much in the public eye, has from time to time during the past 6,000 years been great news.

This land once constituted the whole of the known world. It was the site of the Flood, of the Garden of Eden, of the ancient cities of Ur, Babylon and Nineveh; it was the home of Abraham and of the great conqueror Nebuchadnezzar (whose career was not unlike Hitler's) and whose downfall was predicted memorably by the Biblical prophets Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel.

For thousands of years this ancient country was the scene of invasions and battles by the Chaldeans, the Egyptians, the Babylonians, the Jews, the Medes, the Persians and the Assyrians; these nations taking, holding and losing one after the other that historic stretch of country between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, credited with being then, as it still is today, the most fertile land in the world

On this soil wheat is said to have grown, and it was mainly for wheat that the ancient wars and invasions were made, but today it is for the magic oil that the struggle is taking place, and an identicality the same ground that has seen so many great conquerors of the past rise supreme, only for a brief period, only each in his turn to fall.

STERN REALITIES OF FREEDOM'S CAUSE

"What have for long been ominous probabilities, are, now, upon us as stern realities. The area of conflict widens every day; its intensity increases every day; losses on sea, in the air and on land will continue to mount; the scenes of terror and destruction which live in the memories of many lands free, beleaguered and invaded, will be repeated and renewed. In steadiness of heart, of hand and of vision we shall find our present strength and the path to victory. If we are depressed by the picture of today or tomorrow, we shall be unworthy of our allies and ourselves. Wars of endurance are not lost by the accidents of a day, or a week or a month. They are lost only by the steady disintegration of the moral fibre of a people. The stuff of which the peoples of the British commonwealth are made is not that kind of fibre. Let us therefore calmly and confidently continue to look at the facts steadily and as a whole, not bowed down by the failure of to-day, not unduly elated by the success of to-morrow.

Let me say that from now on as never before it is of the utmost importance that we should view the whole struggle in a perspective, and seek to preserve a true sense of proportion. We must be prepared for the extension of fighting over wide and wider areas, for a fluctuation of movement at times, and in other places, not unlike what we have already witnessed in the Balkan campaign; and for an intensity and ferocity of warfare resulting in terrific destruction and in heavy losses of human life. Regardless of where the conflict may spread or how rapid may be the movement of forces or how intensive and destructive the struggle may become in other parts of the world, we must keep ever in our mind the truth that so long as Britain stands no reverse will be decisive.

Britain is fighting with every ounce of her strength, every fibre of her being. We, in Canada, should strive more earnestly than ever to be our utmost on sea, in the air and on land; to work to produce, to manufacture, as we have never worked and produced or manufactured before. The news received yesterday of the landing in Britain of further contingents of Canadian troops, and airmen trained in the great commonwealth plan, should increase our confidence in the ability of Canada to help effectively in the decisive struggle. For the world in it renewed evidence of Canada's determination to spare neither her material resources nor her manhood in the battle for the world's freedom."

THE THINGS THAT MATTER—
(Prime Minister Menzies of Australia)

"All I want to do is to say to myself, as I lie in every room in public life all over the British world to say to himself day by day: 'Am I or utterly convinced that I must put everything I have into this task, then I will spare no effort, then I will never spare myself in order to have victory?'

I need not say to you, but I must say it to myself, and repeat it to myself constantly, that nothing else matters except that we should live when this war is over in a free world, in the kind of world in which we want to live.

What does it matter if we come out into that world bankrupt? What does it matter if we come out into that world with lower standards of material living than we have now? What does it matter if in that world the rich are not so rich? What does it matter if in the last resort the business of statesmanship in that new world becomes the business of sharing a new and honorable poverty?

These things do not matter. The only thing that matters to free men is that the policies under which they live shall be the policies that they have themselves devised as the representatives of their own people."

A PROPHECY?—
"LUNA HABITABILIS"
Cambridge 1787

The time will come, when thou shalt lift thine eyes
To watch a long-drawn battle in the skies,
While aged peasants, too amazed for words,
Stare at the flying fleets of dirigibles and birds!
England, so long the mistress of the seas,
Where winds and waves confess her sovereignty,
Her ancient triumphs yet on high shall bear,
And reign, the sovereign of the conquered air.

The monthly meeting of the L.C.C. was held on Wednesday, April 30th, at the home of Mrs. J. Brown. There were ten members and two visitors present, the visitors being Mrs. E. A link with Prime Minister Winston Churchill was broken in Edmonton Thursday last with the death of Miss Caroline Mirriam Churchill, at the age if 85. Miss Vincent was for 18 years a member of the household staff in the home of Randolph Churchill. She watched the present Premier grow from infancy to early manhood, and always declared "he was spoiled". Born in Great Yarmouth, England, Miss Vincent came to Canada in 1910.

CANADA CALLS

Canada has reason to count her blessings in these days of trial.

Canada is three thousand miles away from the sound of guns which are devastating Europe.

The broad Atlantic Ocean rolls between us and the ruthless savagery of the German Armies.

The strongest fleets in the world—British, American and Canadian—patrol the sea between us and the enemy.

We have a great friendly nation, probably the richest and most powerful in the world, at our side.

CANADA CAN AFFORD HER SACRIFICES

This war is a mechanized war.

We have the nickel . . . copper . . . lead . . . zinc and other metals the war industries need. We have access to the iron. We can make the steel.

We have the organized industries to fabricate these metals and make the trucks, and tanks, and guns, and planes, and the ships.

We have skilled workers and the plants for mass production. Canada has the wheat and the food supplies.

Let us count our blessings, and tighten our belts.

Canada is rich—one of the richest countries per head of population in the world. Let us lend our strength to the utmost of our power. Our national future depends upon Victory.

We must win to live.

THERE WILL BE FURTHER CALLS

There have been many calls upon the people of this country for money since Canada entered the war at the side of Great Britain.

There will be further calls.

Let us face the future unafraid.

Canada can carry the load.

But every Canadian must shoulder his and her share.

This is the most critical hour in our history. Let the future historians say of Canada, as they will say of our Mother Country: "This was their finest hour."

Get under your load...and LIFT

U.F.W.A. NOTES

The May meeting of the U.F.W.A. was held at the home of the President, Mrs. P. O. Carbokne.

While due to the rush of spring work, many members were absent, an interesting and profitable afternoon was spent. The answers to the roll call "When I most appreciated my neighbor," were varied and entertaining.

Correspondence on "Farm Young People's Work," at the U. of A. early in June, was discussed, and received in a donation of $5.00 being voted toward expenses of this project.

Completed Red Cross work was turned in and new yarn and sewing material distributed.

An excellent paper was given by Mrs. I. C. Olson, the subject being Mrs. Dorbe Nelson M.P. The young English school teacher who became a farmers' wife in the drought area of Saskatchewan, and who, in spite of adversity and dire poverty—or rather BECAUSE of it—became the fearless champion of their stricken community. She was elected to parliament, the only women member. Mrs. Olson also gave her vigorous best wishes to the interests of rural western Canada.

The June meeting will take the form of a picnic to be held at Lake-Aid and will commemorate the birthday of our organization

Rendez-vous in Vienna

A story of romance and adventure in Europe prior to the outbreak of the present war.
By LESLIE HAMILTON

"So that's the answer!" Rex remained in surprise, blowing clouds of voluminous smoke-rings and gently flicking the ash from the end of his cigar.

"That is the answer," his friend replied with a shade of regret, casting his mind back over the years and reflecting no doubt on what might have been had fate only ordained it otherwise. The introduction of yours and mine—and the "Rex" could be omitted in a few months." When Fritz and I left Vienna for Salzburg exactly two days after the war began. The Austrian Army, during their service in England, as sailors is now a good deal of them, especially Fritz, will be vexed that just before they returned to Vienna I go—and would wait a little—who was already engaged to her present husband.

"Under the circumstances, most essentially, I couldn't confide in me." You know very well my sympathies were all with Fritz at the first place I also consider myself your debtor, you know, for services rendered during our days in the Tank corps together!"

"Which is exactly why I did not tell you in the beginning. I would not think upon your personal friendship, but in a professional sense. Now, on the contrary, I feel that I am entitled to know all the circumstances surrounding the case as ultimately as I can. I am pretty sure you would rather it, covering all the ins and outs of the affair, than keep the story. So I gambled on your decision—and that was already a token of sympathy in your wake-up.

"Okay, old chap, you won't! Incidentally I want you to do me a favor and write the von Arnberg, cancelling that affair; pay no one thing of the proceeds—you may sell of the girl's painting! The only reason I didn't refuse the commission then and there was because I knew it would hurt their feelings.

"But that's sheer night-errantry! Cancel the whole project I won't let you do it! Anyway, I'm

MANY USES FOR EGGS

Were Used to Mix Mortar in Castle

The Glasgow man who has been fined for an attack on a tramways reporter, using as missiles eggs which had cost him threepence apiece! Also, a lot of bother getting them, he told the court—three an expensive variety of ammunition in these days, though eggs were a popular weapon in bygone electioneering days when they were cheap.

Another unusual use for eggs which is not likely to be revived at present prices was the mixing of them with mortar for building purposes. An example of a castle built with eggs is to be seen still in the ruins of Dudley Castle, in the Shetland Islands. It was built in 1200 by the notorious Earl Patrick Stewart, who was the governor of, and the tyrant and scourge of, the people of the Shetlands, a race not famed to resist their rulers.

These eggs were mixed in the lime used in the building by Soudgeny Castle, and to this day the islanders point out yellow streaks in the patches of the ruin which, they tell you, are the petrified strips of egg yolk mixed among the mortar more than three centuries ago.—Manchester Guardian.

SEEDTIME AND HARVEST

Dr. R. P. Murby
Manager, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

An Invitation.

During the past winter 4,876 different samples of farmers' seed have been sent in to The North-West Line Elevators Association for germination tests. As a result of the prevalence of frost damage in northern areas, particularly to oats and barley, the results of the tests have been of great importance to farmers availing themselves of the service.

About 2,200 farmers have acted so as to make growing tests in the field in order to determine the varietal purity of their stocks. We have undertaken to do this for wheat varieties only. In oats, varietal purity is hard to establish and, since it is largely a matter of feed, purity is of small concern except to seed growers. Barley is more difficult than wheat, and we hesitate to include purity or germination tests for barley.

We shall, therefore, have about 1,000 samples of wheat seed planted for purity tests. In nearly all cases, the plots will be situated with the crops the individual farmers concerned are growing, since they voluntarily sent their own seed in to us. The plots will be located at the University at Manitoba.

I take this opportunity of inviting farmers and others who may be in Winnipeg this summer to visit our office, laboratory and plots. Our office is in 703 Grain Exchange Building. At the same time you can visit the Dominion Grain Inspection Office and the Grain Research Laboratory of the Board of Grain Commissioners.

BERT EVERITT — TOFIELD

Rendez-vous in Vienna

A story of romance and adventure in Europe prior to the outbreak of the present war.
By LESLIE HAMILTON

"Ah a matter of fact, I didn't. They gave me a couple of openings but I evaded the issue, as I didn't want to divulge anything about it without your permission.

"It's just as well you didn't, for the time being at any rate," the Colonel approved. "Incidentally, I shall be on pins and needles for news," he added, a note of anxious concern in his voice for the friend's welfare, "so drop me word as to how you are making out at the first favorable opportunity and watch your step getting in touch with the girl."

"Thanks Charlie, I'll remember." "There's the stuff now I ordered to run you on the road the official address of a business added on the end before the "Mercury" was born in the mind of the Colonel.

"What a pity," he thanked him again in the same breath as the other passed the cigar over for his choice, and lay. "I'm sure you'll get on."

"Thanks, Colonel, and the best of luck!" his friend encouraged him, shaking his hand in a hearty manner as British farewell.

Arrived at Vienna, the Imperial city of culture without hesitation he set about finding a hotel where a meal had to treat the City of Ely, by ways and byways, passing deserts [illegible] his traveling bag from the train and holding the driver a pleasant good-night, Ken climbed the gangway on to the ship and enquired from the first deckhand he saw for the Captain, who proved even introduction to be a genial sea-man full of sea dog and ruggedness the Yorkshire coast he was born on.

"The vessel is sailing up a calm as if [illegible] Mr. Monroe," the Skipper answered him, "but sometimes it's that not for. As the exhortation [illegible] as the time permits, I'll not need it before then again to-night."

"That I will be glad to do it at once," Ken replied cheerily, seeing himself at one of the tables in the [illegible] evening rum writing which was the only public room the ship boasted.

"That's it, Mr Monroe, so that's all ship shape the return in whenever they ready. The cabin is number three on port side, all good-men," "Good-night, Skipper," Ken returned, seeing his cabin as directed and retiring for the night. Dismal only's morning sailings were so novelty to Ken with the prospect of experiencing midnight travel, and the change of numerous decks which he had not personed once or twice before.

Arrived at Hamburg, the Control examination was quickly concluded and as he had correctly surmised, was nothing of concern to the street and [illegible] security one faces when traveling via the recognised and popular routes. Only two men boarded the steamer, one [illegible] inspector who checked the passengers' foreign money, and the other a police official who merely glanced at their visas and examined their passports.

Thanks very much, Adolph," Ken muttered in cryptic contrition, handing the [illegible] the perfume. Once clear of the harbour he then proceeded straight to the [illegible] where upon enquiry he learned that the express known as the Flying Hamburger would be leaving for Berlin within the next half-hour.

After booking a cafe ticket to the German capital he looked around for the news-stand he had strolled on to the counter with the intention of buying an English [illegible] but the only satisfaction he received, how ever, was the [illegible] under that he was no longer in a free country.

"Verboten, verboten," the [illegible] tongue verbotten" was [illegible] face with a superciliously [illegible] from by the book attendant, a pencil-faced ugly [illegible] flanked a small swastika pin in the button-hole of his lapel.

"Ha, that's that!" Monroe muttered, walking away from the [illegible] platform to await his train, and sidling up with a casual air to the [illegible] breath when he saw the [illegible] "Jodan Zeitungen" on the back of his [illegible] "That's a fact correct! Not the country has become since the Fuhrer took it by the ears!"

He waited no time after reaching Berlin where illegible as to train from the station [illegible] the information that he could carry [illegible] on to the train almost immediately for Berlin's main [illegible] Dresden and Prague. Deciding upon that route he continued his journey without further delay and reached Dresden [illegible] After a weary night [illegible] can exactly one week before [illegible] many [illegible] days [illegible] Express for the second time within a [illegible] of a month.

Short of an hour's stay at the station, Monroe then boarded a train for Ellie Hotel where he [illegible] himself of the facilities of the [illegible] a room downstairs and indulged in a very welcome wash and brushing up [illegible] a brushing up.

Feeling considerably refreshed after the much needed ablutions, he returned his steps to the main floor, he had breakfasted in the restaurant, on [illegible] from the hotel porter the hand [illegible] whereabouts of the principal [illegible] office, after which he moved off [illegible] the first step of his [illegible] to establish contact with Olga von Mueller. [illegible]

It wasn't far away, about seven [illegible] the street hanging Ken to the office as it may seem under the circumstances. Stepping over to the cashier's [illegible] he bought over a hundred [illegible] Reichs marks [illegible] the rate of [illegible] interest upon being addressed [illegible] in English, called in a waiter [illegible] the very desired food service [illegible] marks to the sound. On this [illegible] an [illegible] however each was [illegible] only medium it was safe to use [illegible] real mark cheques with their [illegible] restrictions, and the compulsory [illegible] try of every transaction in his [illegible] port he possessed bank officials didn't suit Monroe's purpose at all; one [illegible] might just as well make a daily report of one's whereabouts to the [illegible] man secret police as leave visiting cards of that sort all over the place for the same reason, Ken refrained from taking a room in the hotel, as the special registration of all aliens required by the police might prove disastrous should his connection with the two Mueller girl become known before they could make their escape from Vienna.

Crossing to the tourist counter, Monroe procured a map of the central part of the city, spread it out on a nearby writing desk provided for the convenience of patrons, hunched the Langenstrasse, pulled it within reasonable walking distance and set off on foot, [illegible] remembering that a taxi-cab, which proved, after he [illegible] the place, to be a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] shops of all varieties. Selecting a convenient spot from where he could keep the entrance under observation, Ken filled and lit his pipe before settling down to a watching vigil of the premises with a devout [illegible] and prayer that it would not prove to be of too lengthy duration, for [illegible] ing the matter over previously he had decided his best plan would be to watch the girl's apartment and await an opportunity of speaking to her alone or leaving the building before attempting to make any advances in her direction. He certainly couldn't afford to [illegible] his attention upon himself by making direct enquiries with a view to [illegible] supposing the blighter spoke English, which was highly [illegible] odds, although with little [illegible] and the like, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] had taught Monroe the great majority of them usually were. Here in Germany, a country homogenised [illegible] with informers, [illegible] [illegible] what extent such unofficial spies might exist, [illegible] to every favour with the infamous Gestapo [illegible] waiting until he could [illegible] public and then following her at a discreet distance to [illegible] whether she was still under observation. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LINDBROOK

The less said about the weather, the better; but "chins up."

The Rev. Hallman, presiding elder of the Mennonite Church in Canada, was around here on a visit to members of that denomination residing here; whilst here he was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. R. Reeve

A lot of the people of Lindbrook attended the farewell party to Dr. Law on Saturday last which was held on the curling rink. Tofield Here's wishing you all the best, Doc, from your friends in Lindbrook.

The dance given in the Hall last Friday was quite a success and we hope the financial end of it was in keeping with the social end, so that a development week may proceed in the building.

Divine Service was held in the school last Sunday in the afternoon The service was conducted by the Rev. C. Clarke of Tofield The next to be held there will be announced later.

The school children from here attended the track meet at Tofield last week, but to date we don't know how they showed on

The floor has somewhat was around this week checking up on the boo ...ebster here We've heard of the "Keeper of the Bees" but we didn't know that they had "keepers" too; anyway its getting to be quite a business here nowadays, so our gardens and crops should benefit by their attentions

Well, we've had a little moisture, but we've seen enough clouds for a soaker, still its helped a lot and is preferable to those hot and drying winds.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kortzman accompanied by Mr and Mrs. Harry Cress of Edmonton motored to Calgary Banff, Lake Louise and Jasper last week. They returned home reporting a lovely trip and a very enjoyable one. Whilst at Calgary they visited Mrs Kortzman's brother, Archie, who formerly lived at Tofield and is well known here. Archie is a veteran of the 1st. Great War and also of this one as well. He saw service as a volunteer gunner on one of the armada of boats that took off the troops at the Dunquerque evacuation, and reports it as a particularly hot and sticky business. Tod him from here that we are glad that he is back from it safely.

SOLDIER POETS

The following two poems were composed by a group of Canadian soldiers in England. Among the group were Tofield district boys and included Allan Eagleshan, Jim Eagleshan, Matt Eagleshan, Charlie Otten and Charlie Roberts.

MY LETTER HOME

Dear Mum, I've landed safe across the sea,
And feel as fit as fit could be,
Old England sure looks mighty good,
My only holler's want of food,
If you're on leave and wish to end,
It costs ten bob, so help me Pete.
And all with which you come to grips
Is their everlasting cups and chips.

Well Mum, I've smartened up a bit,
My monkey suit's a real fit,
I pitch em up, stick out my chest,
And show those rubes I'm from the West,
I do my guards and down my beer,
And swing my arms from front to rear.

Sometimes I get fed up at it,
And then I swing the lead a bit,
I'm learning how to use the Bren,
And go on night 'ops' now and then
One thing I don't like is their "scheme,"
They get my goat and haunt my dreams.

Last week with training I'd a peeve,
And put in for a week-end leave,
To London Town I went on pass,
'Twas there I met an English lass,
The sights of London we did see,
Then went to Lyons for our tea,
But really she's too serious Ma,
She wants to come to Canada
She told me Mother, sitting there,
I was the answer to her prayer,
I asked her what the wife would say
And off she went upon her way.

Well Mum, I'll close for lack of news,
I feel that I would like a snooze,
Be sure and send a pair of sox,
And a dollar as I'm on the rocks,
We'll have a spree when home I come,
So I'll be Silver, good night Mum.

THE FIGHTING CANUCKS OF THE SECOND BRIGADE

From the prairies and west of the Rockies we've come,
We've hearkened once more to the call of the drum,
We're the lads from the forests, the cities and plains,
With the true British blood running red in our veins
Like Hornips of old we'll stand put so the bridge
In the name of our fathers who cleared Vimy Ridge,
And shoulder to shoulder we'll march, undismayed,
We're the Fighting Canucks of the Second Brigade.

Now we're in England the land of the free,
We think of our dear ones so far o'er the sea,
But duty comes first we're a big job to do
Ere we round up old Hitler and all of his crew,
So we aim to get fit then pray for a break,
And every advantage we surely will take,
We'll be John Dill's choice for a blitzkrieg raid,
Why, the Fighting Canucks of the Second Brigade.

So to Brigadier Pearkes, our gallant V.C.,
To the swashbucks and wives that we left o'er the sea,
To the Edmonton regiment, rank-d with the best,
To the Princess Patricia's, pride of the west,
To the gallant Seaforths, the laddies are brave,
Let's all drink a toast and sing "Oh Canada,"
Our debt to old Hitler will surely be paid,
By the fighting Canucks of the Second Brigade.

Mr. F. Evans actually was up to Edmonton on a visit, nothing wonderful about that you might say, but it certainly is, if you know Fred, and most of you do. Fred took part in the Army and Navy Veterans session of the Victory Torch Parade on Monday night.

Mrs. F. Evans also spent a few days in Edmonton as the guest of her sister Mrs. Ray Ford of Edmonton. We guess the only parades that she would be in would be those in the the stores or maybe the movies.

Another former Lindbrook boy well known to all was here this week in his capacity as foreman of a C.N.R. gang; he is Mr. Walter Kortzman now of Tofield, Alberta; son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kortzman and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. F Kortzman of Lindbrook.

How's the cheering going, Hastings Bill? Lovely weather for it, is what, really lovely, rather!

Mr. Jas. Brassgrindle is in receipt of an advertising urn for display outside his store. When it arrived, the zinc of it alarmed him and now he is wondering where in the blazes to put it. Lindbrook will look quite a burg if we get many more signs like this. People will say; "Oh yes, we are the signs. Where's the town of Lindbrook?

Answer would be to look behind the signs.

Will Overcome Educational Barriers To Join Air Force

Facilities for overcoming educational barriers to many keen young Canadians, eager to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force for training as pilot, observer, or wireless operator (air gunner), are announced at Headquarters of No. 4 Training Command, Regina, Sask.

The Canadian Legion Educational Services are prepared to provide courses of study for pre-enlistment education of the eager youth of the province by the organization of class es, preferably night classes, in the relatively larger centres of population.

Through no fault of their own, a considerable number of young men have not been able to complete their education. Their eagerness for service in the air is common knowledge and it is expected that the valuable work undertaken by the Canadian Legion Educational Services will lead the way to the attainment of the goal for which so many are striving.

Heretofore such educational work has been given through the medium of correspondence courses. The new method of personal instruction is reported to attract much wider interest and more rapid progress.

"GOD BLESS OUR BRAVE DADDY OVERSEAS"

FOR EVERY CANADIAN who sails the deep, for every airman who flashes through the skies, and for every other man in the fighting forces, the prayers of the nation "rise like a fountain, night and day."

In times of crisis our people stand steadfast. In daily devotions they renew the flame of faith and arm with unseen powers their warriors in the field.

Oftentimes they discern the Unseen Hand. Witness the miracle of Dunkirk. Witness, too, in the darkest hours the emergence of great inspiring figures to steady the ranks of Democracy and fire its courage and confidence.

Church bells are ringing throughout Canada calling men and women to worship and sacrifice in defence of our freedom, the sanctity of our homes and the future of our children.

VICTORY LOAN SUNDAY JUNE 8TH

National Committee, Victory Loan 1941, Ottawa, Canada

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

There will be no livestock exhibition this summer at the 1941 Edmonton Exhibition. This is because the Dominion has taken over the grounds for use in the British Empire training plan. The usual midway shows, horse racing and certain other exhibits will be carried on, however. It is expected that the grounds will be used as a manning pool.

Canada's Victory Torch drew 7,500 persons from the city and neighboring areas to the Edmonton Arena Tuesday last, where they witnessed impressive ceremonies and joined in the pledges and prayer which form a part of the program. Main addresses were delivered by Mayor Elias, of Lethbridge, while clerics of Anglican and Roman Catholic denominations gave the prayer and pledge. Recoded out with unusual coolness the program had as a climax feature, the fireside chat by President Roosevelt.

Alberta's unique travelling Alsike bus started its 1941 tour, and will visit a large number of rural points to administer cold bit to children. The clinic is now in its 17th year of operation. Heading the caravan of mercy is Dr. C. E. Mercier. He is assisted by doctors, dentists, nurses and trench drivers. The legislative vote of $18,174 for this work is similar to that of previous years. Health education and preventive medicine are part of the clinic's work, in addition to diagnostic, dental work, vaccinations and minor surgical operations.

Support of Alberta mayors is reflected in a communication which has been forwarded to the first citizens of all Alberta towns as part of the Victory Loan drive. "We are approaching the drive for the Victory Loan in order that Canada may give an all-out support to the Empire in this gigantic struggle for democratic freedom," the Premier wrote: "and for the defense of Christian civilization against the pagan barbarism of the Axis powers."

"I have been asked by the chairmen of the committees in charge to invite your assistance officially by your encouragement and direction of the decoration of the homes, business places, and public buildings in your district with flags and bunting during the time of the drive June 2nd to June 24th.

"This will give everyone a chance to share in the drive in a community way, as well as to recognize the importance of buying Victory loan bonds.

"I need hardly urge you to lend support in any other way you deem advisable. I most heartily commend this request to your attention."

First of its kind in the history of the vacation industry here, a five-day tour of Alberta mountain and other scenic areas was carried out last week. Representatives of newspapers, travel bureaus, hotel men, chambers of commerce and others travelled by bus over the Jasper-Banff highway, to Lake Louise, Banff, Radium, Cranbrook, Pincher Creek, Waterton Lakes and Macleod. The tour was organized under direction of the provincial government publicity and travel bureau following decision reached at the recent tourist trade conference held in Edmonton. Purpose is to acquaint those interested in the growing industry with Alberta and neighboring roads and resorts, better to fit them for selling Alberta's scenic wealth to visitors.

EGG CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS TO BRITAIN

Recently a considerable amount of publicity has been given to the new contracts between the recently formed Canadian Special Products Board and the British Ministry of Foods. The first contract was for 300,000 cases, 180,000 to be delivered to embargoed by the first of June and the balance for Fall delivery. Recently additional contracts have about doubled the Fall delivery. These contracts called for 60 per cent A and 40 per cent B grades for the total orders. Due to the large percentage of eggs in the lower grades received on the Prairie markets, our quota was set at 48 per cent A grade and 55 per cent B grade. Because of largely specialized producer receipts on the B.C. markets, their quota was 100 per cent A grade. This is itself shows that Prairie, and particularly Alberta poultryman, can do a great deal better than they are doing at present towards fulfilling this part of our war effort.

As stated many times before, one reason why Alberta poultrymen receive the lowest average egg price in Canada is because they are producing such a volume of low grade eggs, especially during the Spring and Summer months. Recent check-ups at grading stations show a large percentage of eggs in B and C grades that would have been an A grade had the producers exercised a reasonable amount of care. Many of the eggs went down in grade because of dirt but the efforts of best were the chief contributing factor, of this too often the birds are allowed to range for feed, especially on the new sprre plots.

Recently the Poultry Branch published Leaflet No. 89, "Production of Quality Market Eggs", and the wholesale trade interests distributed 17,000 of these to their egg shippers. To summarize briefly: confine the birds to the laying house or yard to meet a limited run; keep the houses, nests and runs clean; feed home grown grains and a good protein supplement; collect the eggs at least 3 times daily and let rest in wire baskets or on wire trays; hold the eggs in a cool basement or cellar where with the temperature not above 60 degrees; use clean crates with trays or similar trays; ship not less than once a week.

Had more Alberta poultrymen observed the above suggestions one would not have to bring in 2,000 cases of A grade eggs to fill our quota requirements.

Indications are for a strong egg market as the Fall quota will about clean out all storage stocks and, in fact Canadian poultrymen in general will have to get down to real production methods if we are to fill the contracts and not be short ourselves. Retain can take many times the present contracts for eggs if we can supply them. We have the birds to produce these eggs and one producer there if Canadian poultrymen will step up the production. If they step it up and deem eggs per bird per year, and it pays in the pigmeats per hen per year, then Canada will be in a position to supply the demand.

JIG-SAW PUZZLES OF THE GERMAN SPY

By Bernard Newman, Famous Lecturer and Authority on International Affairs

An officer of the French counter-spy service once remarked to me: "Our greatest problem is not the German spy, but people who do not mean any harm."

He was right. I could quote dozens of confirmatory examples from my own experience. Some of the men reading these lines will remember the battle of the Somme in 1916. The first idea was a surprise attack—by far the best form. Information consequently leaked over to the Germans, however. I was one of the plumbers detailed to trace the leak.

I went back to Amiens, the great railway centre. My disguise was very simple; no whiskers or grease paint. I was a British private soldier and I pretended to be half tight—a very easy disguise. For three weeks I hung about public houses frequented by French railwaymen.

It was all rather boring. Then one evening I met a Frenchman who turned out to be a signalman. Robbing his identity he announced to his friends at the bar: "Ah, my lads, the old Boche is going to get it in the neck now. Another eleven train loads of ammunition up to-day—five train loads of guns. Old Jerry is going to taste his own medicine."

That night be a flash in the pan, so I went back the next night, and the next. When I arrested that man, he nearly went through the roof. "What!" he cried. "He helping the enemy! My dear sir, you never made a bigger mistake in your life—it's exactly the other way round. My friends at the bar were rather down in the mouth because of the knocks we've been taking at Verdun. I set myself to cheer them up—and I've done it. Helping the enemy indeed! I've been performing a valuable national service!"

He was quite sincere. I never saw a man so taken back as that signalman, when during his trial, I was able to prove that among his friends at the bar was a German agent, gratefully lapping up all the information he handed out. I never heard a man ask like it in my life—never want to hear a man ask like that again. But all the sobbing in the world could not save him and—far more important—all the sobbing in the world could not save the lives of thousands of British soldiers; lives which might have been saved if the Somme had been a surprise attack.

Instead, as some of my readers can confirm, the Germans knew everything we did, because men like that French signalman could not keep their mouths shut.

Here is one of our most serious problems of the war.

It is important to realize that everybody knows something which Hitler would like to know. The information may be gained at work, or may be done quite unduly, this will mean 48,000,000 dozen or 1,000,000 cases more eggs, and England needs them and needs them badly.

By fulfilling our contracts and meeting our obligations now, we are establishing an assured market.

FARM AND HOME WEEK

The programme for Farm and home week to be held at the Olds School of Agriculture from June 23rd to June 27th is rapidly nearing completion. Several prominent speakers have indicated their willingness to attend and each one will have a message of special importance for farm people.

In addition to the topics of interest to the men a programme designed especially for farm women is being arranged too. Varieties of subjects in which women are particularly interested under war conditions will be presented and an interesting programme is assured each day from about 9:30 in the morning until 5:00 in the evening. There will be discussions and demonstrations for everyone attending Farm and Home week. The evening sessions will be devoted to short, popular lectures and entertainment of various kinds including music, community singing, motion pictures, and so on. Everyone is cordially invited to Farm and Home Week.

TWO BOY SCOUTS AND THE LAST LONDON BLITZ

Patrol Leader Jack Odden and Patrol Second Dennis Edwards were on fire watching duty in their district between 2 a.m. and midnight. They considered this a comparative'y quiet period. However, they were reminded just after 2 o'clock, and plenty into the fight with incendiary bombs.

At 3 a.m. a new and heavier wave of bombs, high explosive and incendiary, fell farther down the street. One incendiary had gone through to the basement of a dentist's premises and lodged in the cupboard. When the two scouts arrived the fire was blazing furiously, but they attacked it with stirrup pumps and sand and eventually had it out.

Then they made their way into a burning school but were unable to get into the building until the firemen arrived to break down the door.

Next, seeing a blaze on the roof of a five storey building, they climbed in through a window and made their way to the top. No stirrup pumps were available there, but they found some buckets. With these they ran down to the lower floor for water, and hauled back, up a ladder, through a trap door to the roof. The fire had gained too much strength however, and they left the fight to the firemen who had arrived.

The incendiaries were still falling, and the boys turned to "roof-hopping," sanding out the bombs as fast as they fell. In this they outstripped the men. Several times the blasts and vibration from H.E.'s nearly threw them from the roof tops. And at 6.30 a.m. two weary Scouts went home for a wash and breakfast before going to their office jobs for a day's work.

Rendezvous in Vienna

"Careful' here's the waiter," Rex admonished as a burly waiter came swiftly toward them with a bottle of sparkling Moselle, which the girl had ordered.

"By the way are you an American Mr Munroe" she ventured, after the waiter had charged the wine goblets and departed.

"You guessed wrong Rex laughed quietly. "I'm British. A verdammter Englischer in the eyes of the Reich. My adopted country, however, where I was brought up, is Canada; which accounts for my North American accent."

"Oh! I am so sorry. I'd unwittingly hurt your feelings" she apologized. "To mistake one nationality for another is usually quite easily done."

"Good Lord no! That doesn't apply where Canadians and Americans are concerned," Munroe assured her. "We have too much in common to be touchy about that sort of thing."

"I am glad to hear you say so, as you have probably been used to the regular tourist attitude adopted by the average American visitor."

"Oh! I am not sorry. I'm not getting much of that sort of thing in Vienna these days," Munroe answered, with a slight bitterness in his voice.

"Indeed! Why is that?"

"I do not know. I imagine it's because there is more pressing work for police spies at present. I am not versed in the full extent of their activities, nevertheless, as I have to report everyday to the police headquarters without fail. Either that—or concentration camp!"

"The daily report is irksome, but not the cancellation of the close watch on fortunate," Munroe commented, reflecting that for once a camera had failed to do a photographic subject full justice. "I was anticipating all sorts of difficulties in contacting you privately," he went on, "but as the police headquarters are all round one of those rooms every good."

"You—to leave the way-farer to shift for that good fortune anyway. But where did you arrive in Vienna?" her favorable opinion of Munroe mounting rapidly as she regarded him with interested anticipation.

"On the morning train from Prague. In the interim, I checked my bag at the station, had breakfast and, after lunching where you lived, simply say the word, and there we are."

"I sounds simple enough, and, as you suggested, I will try it. I'll call the waiter and pay—"

"Excuse me, Fraulein, but may I be permitted to read Fredo's letter?" she protested with repressed excitement, for a second time, and which all five had gone over fled thoroughly before. "Is the contents, it will be a treat to read something which has not been censored."

"Oh! I am so sorry. I'd unwittingly hurt your feelings" she apologized quickly, after a short silence in which they eyed each other in mute appraisal.

"My own instinct prompts me to say yes—even without Fredo's letter. The girl replied gently, "but before my answer is in the affirmative you—absolutely!" she added, immediately after a long, searching look into Munroe's full blue-grey eyes, "I must be convinced of your sincerity in wishing to reply. Especially for your personal safety, and assurance your sister's letter may have given you."

"I have always been considered an excellent judge of character," she stated simply, "and with Fredo's training, he affirmed, but I can't think it would be wise. Before we go fully into all things, it appears to a more private place than the public cafe? I have been waiting for an opportunity of speaking with my apartment ever since I arrived for approaching you without being observed, and so far as I could make out no secret followed when I trailed you here still, one never knows who was watching us in a place like this, what do you think?"

"You are quite right," she agreed, "although I am not under close surveillance any longer." An item of information which one both surprising and pleasing to her interlocutor, who asked: "Why is that?"

"I do not know I imagine it's because there is more pressing work thinking over where to go," she continued, filling the glasses with a deliberate slowness, "in order to discuss your letter, as I have to report everyday to plans in privacy and safety, and I think the best place will be my own apartment. It will really be quite permanent. It will really be quite safe, but may," she hastily answered him, considering that Rex was about to demur, "It is only necessary to call at a theatre for the show a camera had taken I know of—to see what there—where extra keys can be cut and matches, "and in spite of the danger element," he added, filling and lighting "old faithful" something tells me that our adventure promises to be a bit of a lark."

"Something also tells me that a certain Mr. Munroe is a bit of a 20th century Lochinvar. Isn't that correct, my friend?" Olga laughingly remarked, rising and reaching out the lights, after which she crossed quickly to the window and drew the blinds.

"Touche!" Rex confessed, "but all joking aside, don't you think now you have approved our 'married' status, that the use of our Christian names would be safer? We will help to explain our parts quite naturally in public during the next few days."

"Very well, Rex darling!" she responded, entering promptly into the spirit of their romantic interlude. "Furthermore," she continued, "since it's advisable for us to become accustomed to our 'husband and wife' relationship as soon as possible, I think I had better prepare myself for my 'lord and master' and then fix up the sleeping arrangements. It will soon be bed time," rising and discarding the jacket coat of her smart navy blue suit.

"That isn't necessary!" Rex protested hotly. "We can slip out of here separately, the scene as we came in, meet outside somewhere and then go to a restaurant. To-morrow I can return for a further conference."

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" Olga's first bark at him, donning a house apron over her smart skirt preparatory to commencing her "Have you been reading a 'Girl Gets Her Story'? Or is Sir Galahad afraid to practice what he preaches? Come confess!"

"It isn't that exactly," Rex began, "just thought that for to-night—"

"Pshaw!" came the laughing interruption. "Mrs Grundy doesn't live next door! Besides, if certain people were on our tail we should certainly be recognized, and that would draw their attention to you, spar them to find out who you are and what your business is with me. A demand to see your identity papers and poof! The game is up! For us to travel as man and wife on your passport once we are clear of Vienna is one thing, but to fool the local police who know all about us something else again.

A Statement By The Minister Of Finance

Canada's Victory Loan 1941 will be offered in two maturities, ten years and three-and-one-half-years, the choice being optional with the subscriber. They will be dated and bear interest from June 15th, 1941.

The longer term bonds, maturing June 15th, 1951, and carrying a 2 per cent coupon, will be issued at 100. As, however, they will be payable at maturity at 101 and will be callable during 1950 and after, at that price the yield will be 2.09 per cent.

The shorter term bonds, maturing December 15th, 1946, and bearing a 2 per cent coupon, will be sold at a price of 99 to yield 2.19 per cent. The bonds will be redeemed at maturity at 100; they will be non-callable to final maturity.

Arrangements are being made so that a copy of the official prospectus will be delivered, through the post office, to every householder in Canada by Monday, June 2nd, the date upon which the subscription lists will open.

Accompanying the prospectus will be a letter to every subscriber from myself as Minister of Finance (with, however, the name of the Deputy Minister of the Department of Finance and the Victory Loan Committee entwined) in the hope that this amount will be attended by the actual cash subscription as offered.

Cash subscriptions may be paid in full at the time of application without accrued interest. On the bonds may be paid for by instalments plus accrued interest. The instalment-payment feature is designed to make it possible for investors to anticipate income and to purchase by easy payments. 10 per cent on application, 15 per cent July 15th, another 15 per cent on August 15th, 20 per cent on September 15th and on October 15th respectively, 20.71 per cent on the 2 per cent bonds or 19.52 per cent on the 2 per cent bonds on November 15th, 1941. The last payment includes accrued interest.

To Buy a $100 Bond

On application	$10.00
July 15th, 1941	15.00
August 15th, 1941	15.00
September 15th, 1941	20.00
October 15th, 1941	20.00
November 15th, 1941	20.71
in respect to the 2 per cent bonds due 1951.
OR
November 15th, 1941	19.52

in respect to the 2 per cent bonds due 1946.

On December 15th the buyer will receive full interest for 6 months, i.e., $1.50 per $100 on the 2 per cent bonds, and $1.00 per $50 on the 2 per cent bonds.

The Conversion Feature—

Holders of Dominion of Canada 5% National Service Bonds maturing November 15th this year, have the opportunity to exchange them for bonds of the Victory Loan 1941, at an attractive price, as I indicated in a recent statement to the press. Holders of these bonds may, for the period during which the subscription lists are open, tender their bonds, with final coupon attached, in lieu of cash, on subscriptions for a like or greater value of bonds of one or both maturities of the Victory Loan 1941. The surrender value of the National Service Loan 5 per cent bonds will be 102.15 per cent of their par value, inclusive of accrued interest. The difference between the turn-in value of the old bonds and the subscription price of the new bonds will be paid in cash.

The proceeds of the Victory Loan 1941 will be used by the Government to finance expenditures for war purposes.

Attached to the prospectus which should reach every householder by next Monday, will be an official application form for the information and convenience of citizens who are asked to buy Victory Bonds.

During the ensuing weeks, canvassers will seek to call upon every citizen. As Minister of Finance, I earnestly ask Canadians to regard every Victory Loan canvasser as a wartime worker for His Majesty's Service. I urge the support of every citizen for this Victory Loan. It is to help enable us to buy the tools of Victory for it is only by Victory that our freedom, our democratic system is sold, can survive. Money buys machines. Machines save on the lives of Canadian lives. They give us time—time to train and to match a well equipped and ruthless foe. We shall win, because we must. And to win, we must have money—money that the Victory Loan 1941 will, in part, provide.

The loan is rightly named. In making an enthusiastic, patriotic response from all our citizens, I echo the words of Mr. Churchill.

"What is our aim? I can answer in one word: 'Victory.' Victory at all costs, Victory in spite of all terror, Victory, however long or hard the road may be; for without Victory there is no survival".

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

With all the extra summerfallow being done this year farmers have a golden opportunity of killing great quantities of weeds.

Wild oats are one of the worst troubles of the farmers' grain. The roots of the wild oat plant in average soil occupy as much space as the wheat roots, and a wild oat plant uses as much previous moisture as does a wheat plant. Three weeks after the seed germination the wild oat roots are usually down some 25 inches, by harvest time they are often down six feet! It is therefore important to get rid of this pest, and it can be done with care and patience.

If wild oats are plentiful, the land in most cases should not be ploughed during the summerfallow, but only surface cultivated and only to a depth of three inches. Let the plants grow until they are in the three or four leaf stage; they are then at their weakest. When cut at this stage with a disc or a cultivator the plant will die. If it is taller, the joints will root and grow; if it is smaller another plant will often grow from the same root. The main idea is to induce the seeds to germinate and the plants to grow, and then to kill them by shallow cultivation, and to repeat this operation from time to time during the summer season.
